VOLUNTEERS HELP SAVE HOMES

Firebug Sets Five-Acre Blaze

An incendiarist yesterday touched off a mid-afternoon blaze in Los Ranchitos which roared through five acres of tinder-dry brush, heavily damaged one home and threatened at least 14 others before being contained.

While Marin County firemen today kept a watchful eye on the site of the county's worst fire this year, Chief Louis J. Bloom credited a former Novato policeman and hundreds of volunteers with averting an even greater disaster.

Robinette, who was later treated at Marin General Hospital for smoke inhalation, said he saw a man about 150 pounds with blonde, shoulder length hair and wearing a white shirt, setting the fire on Los Ranchitos Road north of Glenside Road about 2:30 p.m.

The suspect fled on a red trail motorbike, Robinette said. The Novatoan then ran to a nearby home and turned in an alarm and then went into the home of Mrs. George Sawyer of 10 Glenside Way and carried the woman to safety.

The fire, meanwhile, quickly charred the dried brush and did an estimated $15,000 damage to a home owned by Walter Doole of 9 Ginside Way. The fire came within feet of about a dozen other homes but was turned back by firemen and hundreds of volunteers, many of them hippie-types who grabbed garden hoses and shovels to help in the fight.

"Thank God for all the people that helped; I was never so scared in all my life," said Mrs. Dom J. Luzzi of 63 Los Ranchitos Road, whose home narrowly escaped damage.

Bloom, who credited the volunteers with averting a repetition of this week's Berkeley hills fire, said the Los Ranchitos area has been plagued recently with fires believed to have been deliberately set.

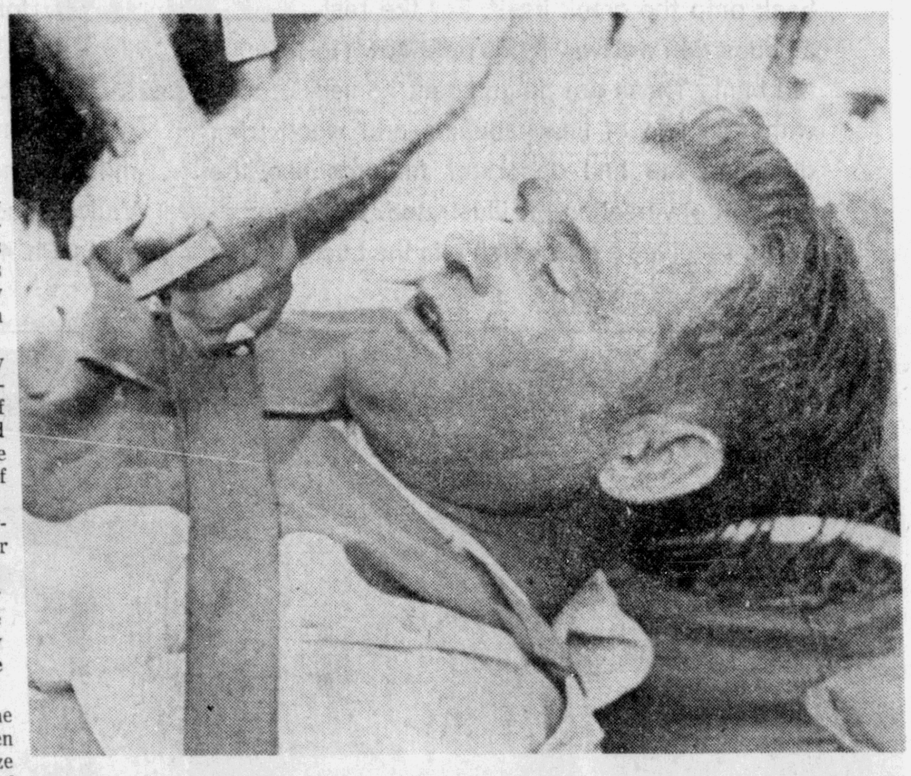
"This fire was deliberately set," Bloom said today. In addition to the eyewitness account of the fire's beginning, Bloom said his department investigated the fire's origin and "found proof of the arsonist's work."

Bloom said the county is currently at its peak fire danger period.

"Everything is bone dry and just waiting to go up," he said. "It was amazing how quickly yesterday's fire moved."

Residents of the area said the fire ravaged the brush-laden slope so quickly that the blaze "seemed several feet ahead of the smoke trail."

Marin County Fire Department responded with about 30 men and four trucks, the San Rafael department had two trucks and the Kentfield Fire Department sent a civil defense truck to the scene.



END OF HIS BATTLE — Louis R. Robinette is strapped onto a stretcher after being overcome by smoke at the Los Ranchitos fire. Robinette, who spotted the incendiarist who set the blaze, then sounded the alarm and carried a 76-year-old woman to safety.

Jordan Civilian Regime In

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

King Hussein appointed a new civilian government for war-torn Jordan today. Radio Amman said the government headed by Premier Ahmed Toukan was charged with restoring peace to the bleeding kingdom.

There was no immediate reaction from guerrilla leaders to the new administration. But they had demanded a civilian regime instead of the military government Hussein installed earlier this month.

In another development, diplomatic sources in London said 16 hijack hostages liberated from the Palestinian guerillas were being flown back to Europe via Cyprus. None of the 16 are Americans. Fears mounted for the 38 Americans still in guerrilla hands.

Israeli Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Haim Barlev said meanwhile that his army was prepared to take "military steps" if the situation in Jordan deteriorated. He said developments so far did not require Israeli military intervention.

Radio Amman said Toukan, a 72-year-old Palestinian, was ordered to implement a four-point peace plan. It calls for guerrillas to leave Jordanian cities, return to the Middle East cease-fire border lines and obey the laws of the land, and affirms the right of the Jordanian army to police the nation's metropolitan centers.

Hussein charged earlier today that some "criminal elements" were still operating in cities despite the Jordanian army's observance of the cease-fire.

Although fighting was reported subsiding today in Jordan,

Brush Fires, Winds Are Playing Havoc

Southern California Is Hard Hit

LOS ANGELES (UPI)— Brush fires lashed by winds that gusted up to 80 miles per hour, burned uncontrolled today across Southern California destroying scores of expensive homes.

Residents of many areas were evacuated in the face of the oncoming flames. Authorities said there had been some scattered instances of looting in the evacuated areas.

Fire officials said the main fire was started by burning rubbish that was picked up by the winds and blown into nearby brush.

During the night the winds died down allowing firefighters to establish tractor lines along the northern perimeter of the fire which they hoped would prevent further spreading in that direction.

WINDS INCREASE

However, no containment of the fire was in sight as daytime winds began to increase.

At least 100 homes in the $60,000 to $100,000 class were destroyed when giant flames from a 35,000-acre fire that started Friday afternoon ate their way into the Porter Ranch development in Chatsworth and spread in all directions.

In the coastal city of Malibu, at least 45 homes, some in the $125,000 range, were burned to the ground when a ring of fire shot down two canyons and surrounding hills. Officials estimated that it covered 25,000 acres.

The two blazes spread into each other, separated only by the Ventura Freeway, which was closed to traffic. Containment of the fires was not in sight, fire officials said early today.

At least 20 fire fighters were injured battling the blaze. Hundreds of others suffered smoke inhalation and eye irritations.

12,000-ACRE FIRE

A third fire in Mint Canyon near Lancaster, 35 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, charred more than 12,000 acres but there were no reports of structual damage.

Another fire in Lopez Canyon in the foothills area around metropolitan Los Angeles destroyed two homes and severely damaged 12 mobile homes while charring 600 acres.

In Agua Dulce Canyon, 20 miles southeast of nearby Palmdale, flames of another fire raced over 3,000 acres destroying at least six homes.

Two evaucation centers were set up by the Red Cross and that at least 1,000 persons were housed in them for the night.

Gov. Ronald Reagan declared Los Angeles county a disaster area. He issued the proclamation from his ranch in the Malibu mountains which was threatened by flames. After the proclamation he stripped the ranch of its furnishings and left the area with hundreds of other residents.

Temperatures in the 90s and dry, gusty winds called "Santa Ana" winds from the desert provided tinder-box conditions

SUPERIOR COURT

Broderick Named To Fill Vacancy

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Henry J. Broderick of Tiburon was appointed yesterday by Gov. Ronald Reagan to fill the Marin Superior Court vacancy left by the death of Judge Harold J. Haley.

Broderick, 43, an attorney practicing in San Francisco, was among eight known candidates for the vacancy, and had been regarded generally as the strongest candidate. He has close connections to the Reagan administration through Marinites who won top jobs in Sacramento.

The governor's office, which reportedly decided on the appointment early this week, advised Broderick of his selection yesterday afternoon. The job pays $33,396 a year.

"I accepted with great pleasure," a clearly relieved Broderick told the Independent-Journal. "It was like being somewhat pregnant and not being sure — and waiting for the rabbit test."

He said that he expected to be sworn in before the end of October, but that arrangements had not yet been worked out with the presiding judge of the court, Joseph G. Wilson.

"It's a question of tying up all the innumerable ends," Broderick said of his closing a law practice he started in 1954.

He will serve the remainder of Haley's term, which expires in June 1972. He then would have to run for reelection.

Broderick also was a candidate for the superior court in 1968, but the seat, then a new one, went to E. Warren McGuire. Marin attorneys objected at that time that judges should be appointed from attorneys practicing in the county.

Among his clients has been Governor Reagan.

A native of San Francisco, Broderick was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley and from Stanford Law School. He served in the Army's Judge Advocate General

Judge Orders Contract To Schoonmaker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge ordered the Defense Department to award a multimillion dollar contract for electrical generators to a Sausalito Calif., firm which had accused the Army of furnishing private information to a competitor.

U.S. District Court Judge Joseph C. Waddy issued a permanent injunction preventing opening of bids on a second round of invitations the department had issued for the generators. He ordered the contract awarded to A.G. Schoonmaker Co., Inc., of Sausalito, which had submitted the original low bid of $31.7 million.

Saddy said the Army had offered a competitor, the Bogue Manufacturing Co. of Paterson, N.J., a unique competitive opportunity and advantage over other bidders.

He granted a preliminary injunction against the Pentagon June 26. The Justice Department sought summary reversal of the order in the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here and was turned down.

Schoonmaker had filed suit against Army Secretary Stanley R. Resor and other government officials after losing out on a bid for engine-driven generators first sought by the Army Feb. 18, 1969.

In his findings of fact, Waddy said the Army gave Bogue information about its contract requirements in a telephone conversation initiated by Bogue last Feb. 16, and followed it up with a telegram. He said the Army did not give this information to Schoonmaker or a third bidder, nor did it incorporate it into a written amendment to the original invitation to bid.

On Feb. 27, the Army opened bids and found Schoonmaker lowest at $31.7 million followed by Bogue at $32.2 million and

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Stockade Battle

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—Prisoners and guards fought with mops, brooms and fists Friday in a stockade flareup at this Army post.

Only minor injuries were reported in the fray. Officials said the incident was caused by prisoner impatience over administrative discharges for six inmates.

Girl Page Boy

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI)—The page boys in the nation's capital soon may have to be called "page people." Sen Charles H. Percy said Friday he will appoint a girl to that traditionally all-male group.

The appointment would be the first time a woman has served as a page in Congress, although there are female pages in many state legislatures.

IBM Stock Stolen

MIAMI (UPI)—Eight persons were indicted by a federal grand jury Friday on charges of conspiring to convert stolen IBM stock through the Key Biscayne Bank, whose president is C. B. "Bebe" Rebozo.

No charges were placed against Rebozo, a close personal friend of President Nixon, or any other officers of the Key Biscayne bank.

Baker Appeals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert G. "Bobby" Baker, former secretary to the Senate Democratic majority, has appealed to the Supreme Court his conviction on larceny, income tax evasion and related charges.

Baker, once a protege of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, was sentenced to one to three years on charges he received $137,000 under false pretenses and evaded paying taxes on most of it.

Nixon's Irish Visit

DUBLIN (UPI) — Premier Jack Lynch will greet President Nixon on the American president's arrival at Shannon Airport Oct. 3, government spokesmen said Friday.

A military escort will accompany the presidential motorcade through Dublin to Dublin castle for a luncheon Oct. 5 before Nixon leaves for home.

Hendrix Estate

NEW YORK (UPI)—Jimi Hendrix, popular rock singing star who died in London Sept. 18 of a drug overdose, left an estate valued at $500,000.

Since Hendrix, 27 did not leave a will, a court-appointed administrator will handle the disposition of the estate, it was disclosed in New York Surrogate Court Friday.

Gang Sentence

CALGARY, Alta. (UPI)—Thirteen men, 11 of them members of the Grim Reapers motorcycle gang, were sentenced to life imprisonment Friday for chainwhipping to death the president of another motorcycle gang.

Amidst protests from defense attorneys, the prosecutor argued, "A man ought to know that if he whips someone with a chain, he's going to die."

The 13 were jointly convicted of the March 7 slaying of "Outcasts" president Ronald George Hartley.

RUSSIAN SUB BASE SITE?
Stern public warning from U.S.

Washington Warns USSR On Cuban Submarine Base

WASHINGTON (708) —The White House has publicly told the Soviet Union the United States will take "appropriate action" if the Russians construct a nuclear submarine base on the southern coast of Cuba.

Eight years after President John F. Kennedy forced the Soviet Union to remove offensive land-based missiles from Cuba, the Pentagon announced Friday Russia may be building a base to support missile-firing nuclear submarine operations in the Western Hemisphere.

A Defense Department spokesman said, however, it was too early to say if construction activity in Cienfuegos Bay, less than 200 miles from Key West, Fla., was definitely intended to be a submarine base.

"The Soviet Union can be of no doubt that we would view the construction of strategic bases in the Caribbean with utmost seriousness," said the White House official, who asked not to be named.

"We are watching events in Cuba. We're not in a position now to say exactly what they mean. But at the right moment we will take whatever action is indicated."

The official said in response to a question that Kennedy's warning to the Soviets on Nov. 20, 1962, not to introduce offensive weapons into Cuba, is still American policy. Kennedy said there would be peace in the Caribbean only if "all offensive weapons are removed from Cuba and kept out of the hemisphere in the future under adequate verification and safeguards."

The Russian activity at Cienfuegos bay was spotted by American U2 spy planes. As late as Thursday, seven Soviet vessels were spotted near the suspected site.

The seven vessels, the fourth Soviet task force to sail into the area in the past two years, included a submarine tender, a salvage ship, a tug and a landing vessel believed to have carried three heavy barges that were towed into the deep water port.

The Pentagon refused to say if the barges could be assembled into a floating dry dock.

Also in the area were a Soviet guided missile cruiser, guided missile destroyer and an oiler.

Although there are no Russian submarines in the port now, the Pentagon said several have visited it in the past, including two capable of firing missiles.

U.S. officials have little doubt that a few of the Soviet Union's 13 nuclear submarines, each built to carry 16 missiles, are operating off the North American coast. There is speculation the Russians want to establish distant support bases for its submarine operations.

Nine Named To New Postal Service Posts

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The nine-man board of governors for the new independent U.S. Postal Service has been named by President Nixon. It includes the chairman of a commission that originally proposed removing the Post Office from government control.

Postmaster General Winton M. Blount was not on the list of appointees, giving rise to speculation he may be in line to head the new service.

Nixon appointed Frederick R. Kappel of New York to a two-year term on the board. It was Kappel's commission that proposed originally that the Post Office be turned into a nonprofit government- chartered corporation.

The nine members were appointed for terms ranging from one to nine years. Future appointments will be for nine years.

In addition to Kappel, Nixon appointed these members:

—M.A. Wright, 59, New York, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Humble Oil and Refining Co. of Houston, Tex., nin-year tem.

—Patrick E. Haggery, 56, Dallas, president of Texas Instruments Inc., eight-year term.

—Charles H. Codding, 51, Foraker, Okla., a rancher, seven-year term.

—George E. Johnson, 42, Chicago, founder and president of Johnson Products Co., five-year term.

—Andrew D. Holt, 66, Knoxville, Tenn., former president of the University of Tennessee, four-year term.

—Theodore William Braun, 68, Los Angeles, president of Braun and Co., a labor-management consulting firm, three-year term.

—William J. Curtin, Washington, an attorney, one-year term.

The postmaster general selected by the board will serve as an ex-officio board member. The 10 members then will chose a deputy postmaster general who also will serve on the board.

Pope Paul Observes 73rd Birthday; A Busy Workload

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI turned 73 today in the midst of preparations for the longest journey in papal history —his visit to the Philippines and Australia in November.

At an age when most men have retired and although he never has been a robust man, the Pope was pushing ahead with a particularly heavy work load.

Vatican sources said the Pope's birthday would be work as usual. Italians generally celebrate the feast day of the saint they are named after rather than their birthdays.

As well as planning for the Asian trip —the first made by any pontiff to that part of the world —the Pope was closely following Middle East developments with the hope of offering Vatican intermediation if necessary, the sources said.

The Vatican released the text of a letter Friday in which the Pope instructed Msgr. Jean Rodhain, president of the Vatican relief organization Caritas Internationalis, to spare no effort in aiding victims of the Jordanian civil war.

He also gave $50,000 from his own purse to help the war victims, officials said.

The Pope was preparing for his meeting Monday evening with President Nixon. Vatican sources said the Pope wanted to talk to Nixon about Indochina peace prospects in preparation for the speeches he will make in the Far East. The sources said Paul VI also could be expected to encourage the United States to continue its peace initiative in the Middle East.

Training For Air Marshals Begins Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Nixon administration says the first of 800 military guards, prepared to shoot hijackers if necessary, will begin training Monday for duties aboard commercial airliners.

The first contingent of military air marshals to be trained at Ft. Dix, N.J., will join FBI agents and U.S. marshals deputized by the federal Aviation Administration (FAA) by weeks's end.

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe said at a news conference Friday the military guards would shoot "if it comes to the lives of 200 Americans or a hijacker."

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, making a rare personal appearance attended the news conference with Volpe and Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

Unlike the 200 civilian guards already on the job, the military agents will not have the powers to search and arrest.

So-Called Slowdown By CHP Slows Down

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A move by some California Highway Patrolmen for a slowdown in writing traffic citations to protest Gov. Ronald Reagan's cut in their pay raise is apparently ended.

Conflicting statements were issued by the parties concerned on Friday, but a spokesman at the CHP's headquarters in Sacramento said a check around the state showed CHP service and activity was normal.

Supervisory Inspector Gil A. Stokes also said any type of slowdown was illegal and that officials "would take positive action against any patrolman found to be involved."

The slowdown in issuing traffic tickets, which apparently never really got started, received support from patrolmen all over the state, according to a group of disgruntled officers.

They were protesting the governor's action in slashing their five per cent pay raise voted by the Legislature to three per cent. The CHP officers had received a five per cent boost earlier this year along with other state employees.

There are 5,600 CHP members, of whom 4,900 are traffic officers earning between $834 and $965 monthly.

The disgruntled officers argue that they rank 47th among California law enforcement agencies in pay, but "no. 1 in the number of officers killed in the line of duty."

The move for a slowdown was started by unhappy officers in the Modesto and San Francisco Bay areas.

Veteran Patrolman Thomas Munthe, a spokesman for the disgruntled officers in the Modesto area, said Friday that "the men are returning to normal operations because of the approaching weekend and its heavy traffic."

Spokesmen for disgruntled officers in the San Francisco Bay Area, who asked not to be named, said only five citations were issued by officers in Contra Costa County and only 20 by those in San Francisco.

They said the slowdown was continuing.

In San Jose, Oakland and Solano County, disgruntled patrolmen said ticket issuance was about 20 per cent of normal.

West German Taxis Changing To White

BONN (UPI) —West German taxi drivers are winning their battle to have all cabs painted white instead of black. The change is expected to be made official by the end of 1970.

Judge Sets Second Huey Newton Trial

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—The second manslaughter trial of Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman will start Jan. 11.

Newton was freed last Sept. 5 by the California Supreme Court after serving two years of a 2-to-15 year term on a previous conviction in the gun-battle death of Patrolman John Frey.

The state's high court ordered a new trial and Superior Judge Harold B. Hove Friday set the Jan. 11 date over the objections of Newton's attorney, Charles Garry.

The retrial was ordered because the original trial judge erred in failing to instruct the jury that unconsciousness on the part of the defendant is a legitimate defense. Newton asserted he was unconscious after being wounded in the gunfight and couldn't remember what happened.

Newton attended the court hearing Friday but made no comment other than that he was "bored" with the case.

The oldest discovered shoe is an Egyptian papyrus sandal dating from about 2000 B.C., says the National Geographic.

AWOL HORSE IS BACK HOME AFTER A ROMP

Home is the sailor, home from the sea, and Gallo, too.

Gallo is the 6-year-old brown gelding quarter-horse who somewhat rudely deposited Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum on his backside last Wednesday and then went AWOL.

Wornum, who offered a $50 reward for the return of the horse, rented a helicopter Thursday at $95 an hour and vainly scoured the Mount Tamalpais area.

Wornum had just acquired the horse in Sonoma County and had not yet even paid the $300 price tag. The saddle slipped while he was riding, leading to the steed's gallop to freedom, Wornum said.

Fairfax Agrees To Help Fund Projects

Fairfax City Council last night agreed to put up part of the money for a new drainage system and resurfacing of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from Kent Avenue to Pastori Avenue in cooperation with the City of San Anselmo.

After more than an hour of discussion, the council decided to enter into a joint powers agreement with San Anselmo for the project, which is expected to be completed before winter rains flood the area. The joint agreement was necessary because the street is in San Anselmo and the houses affected by the street's flooding are in Fairfax.

No estimate of the cost of the drainage project was available, but cost of the resurfacing of the 8001foot section of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard was put at about $5,000 by Councilman Cornelius Van Vliet.

The Fairfax City Council Also:

MUD SLIDES — Directed the city's legal staff to ask the developer Wally G. Laster to install a drainage system to prevent mud slides in the San Gabriel Drive area.

MERCHANTS — Took under consideration complaints from several Fairfax merchants concerning stray dogs running loose in the city, panhandling, hitchhiking and inadequate parking; also took under consideration merchant complaints against substandard housing, particularly on Broadway near Bolinas Road.

TEEN-AGE DANCES — Accepted a report from the parks and recreation commission complaining of trouble at teen-age dances at the pavilion. The commission announced it was considering new rules for the dances.

APPOINTMENTS — Appointed Gilbert P. Murphy of Bolinas Road to the design review board and Noel A. Cimino of 74 Spring Lane to the parks and recreation commission.

NEXT MEETING — Set the next meeting for 8 p.m. Oct. 12 in the Women's Club.

the war deeply split both Hussein's kingdom and the Arab world. As many as 20,000 persons were reported killed or wounded and thousands were said to be dying of hunger, thirst and unattended wounds.

President Gamal Abdel Nasser accused Hussein's army of massacring Palestinian guerrillas and breaking the cease-fire which began Friday. Hussein denied this and said his nation is pledged to peace despite "continued provocations."

Hussein's new government replaced that of Brig. Mohammed Daoud, who resigned as premier Thursday night. It was Daoud's appointment to head the military government 11 days ago that touched off the war.

When Daoud quit Friday he left a letter in a Cairo hotel room saying he wanted to step down to open the way for establishment of a civilian government of national unity.

Although the new cabinet is civilian oriented, Toukan is not known to be sympathetic to the guerrillas.

Assailant Grabs Man's Money Bag

A San Rafael resident was robbed of $48 in coins by a man who jumped from the rear of a motorcycle and punched and kicked him at 1:15 a.m. today on B Street near Third Street in San Rafael.

Lee Allen Miller of 121 Tamalpais Avenue told police a motorcycle passenger knocked him down and kicked him in the head before fleeing with a money bag containing the coins.

Miller declined medical treatment for a cut lip and ear, according to police.

Youth Arrested On Pot Charge

A 19-year-old San Anselmo youth was arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana at 3 a.m. today near San Anselmo's Memorial Park.

Paul Edward LeClair of 23 Durham Road was in Marin County jail today with bail set at $250. Police discovered the suspected marijuana while questioning LeClair on a suspicious person complaint. Another young man at the scene was released after questioning.

LeClair is to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Wreck Injures Two Teen-agers

The hospital reported Robert Paul Henas, 17, of 4109 Shelter Bay, Mill Valley, was treated for multiple bruises and Anthony Santos, 17, of 412 Hickory Lane, San Rafael, for a mild neck sprain.

Henas told the California Highway Patrol that a skidding car forced him to drive off the road at 9 p.m. Santos was a passenger.

The same day, Bogue filed a protest claiming Schoonmaker had not fulfilled the expressed contract requirements. Schoonmaker also protested, contending that award of a contract would be a violation of law.

Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats directed Resor to cancel the original and solicit new bids. These have never been opened because of the law suit.

Teens Arrested Inside School

Two teen-agers were arrested inside Miller Creek School in Marinwood shortly after 12:30 a.m. today, according to the sheriff's department.

The sheriff's office said the two 17-year-olds, a boy and a girl, were booked into juvenile hall on suspicion of burglary, but had no details of the arrest.

The names of the two were not available.

Cambodians Retake City, Rout Reds

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Cambodian troops today consolidated position in the recaptured city of Tang Kauk and cleared remaining pockets of Communist resistance in the area, Cambodian military officers said.

Cambodian forces conducting their biggest offensive of the six-month war moved into the city 52 miles north of Phnom Penh Friday. North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units had held it and blocked the advance of the Cambodian task force north of Highway 6.

There was no major resistance Friday, although the 2,000 Communists in the area had held off the Cambodian column for several days.

Military officers said they believed the Communists had withdrawn to the east to the safety of a rubber planation 10 miles east of Tang Kauk.

"The Viet Cong pulled out before our final assault," the spokesman said. The Cambodian Command had said the army was trying to entrap the Communist defenders in Tang Kauk but the strategy apparently failed and the defenders escaped.

"By this victory we can press on with our drive to Kompong Thom," the spokesman said. "It proved the Viet Cong, even when they are firmly dug in, cannot stop the Cambodian army.

American spokesmen in Saigon reported eight GIs killed and 34 wounded in light and scattered ground action in South Vietnam Friday. Four Americans were killed and 10 wounded when their trucks hit mines in Quang Tin and Quang Ngai Provinces, 50 miles south of Da Nang.

South Vietnamese spokesmen said government troops killed 54 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese soldiers in two battles northwest and southwest of Svay Rieng, in the Parrot's Beak area of Cambodia, 72 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

The task force launched its drive from Skoun, 35 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, Sept. 9 and reached the southern edge of Tang Kauk Sept. 13 but ran into intensive rocket and mortar fire from Communist forces so well entrenched that even American air strikes failed to dislodge them.

The purpose of the drive was to clear Highway 6 between Phnom Penh and Kompong Thom, an important communication center of 10,000 persons 80 miles north of the capital and to relieve the siege of the northern city, the target of almost nightly rocket attacks for two months.

The task force began with eight battalions or some 4,800 troops and reinforcements added another eight battalions for a total of some 10,000 soldiers earlier this week for the final assaults on Tang Kauk.

Suspect Nabbed On Grand Theft

A 24-year-old San Francisco woman was arrested last night on suspicion of grand theft after a sheriff's deputy stopped the car in which she was a passenger for a traffic violation.

Jill Roberta Dunn, who also was booked on suspicion of failure to furnish identification, was taken to county jail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

The sheriff's office reported the arrest was made a 9 p.m., but had no other details.

FIRES

for a fire and hampered hard-pressed fire fighters whose ranks were stretched thin by several other widely separated blazes.

Mark Jones, a UPI reporter who surveyed the fires from a police helicopter, described it as a "cauldron of flames."

"It looked like 10,000 campfires. The hills were peppered with small blazes and showers of sparks would erupt as the wind shot through," he said.

Jones said the Chatsworth blaze, 30 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, and the Malibu blaze, west of Los Angeles, appeared to be heading towards each other. They were two miles apart.

Roy Klein, who lives in a housing tract in Chatsworth, said, "I was gone 30 minutes to pick up my kids at school and when I returned my house was destroyed."

The Malibu fire erupted at Calabasas on the inland side of the mountains which parallel the coast. A six-mile wide wall of flames, shooting up to 100 feet high, swept 14 miles across the mountains to the coast, destroying 15 Salvation Army cabins. When the flames reached the Pacific Coast highway, site of many expensive beach homes of celebrities, a fireman said he saw "a couple of dozen" residences go up in flames.

A condominium apartment house on a bluff overlooking the Pacific was surrounded at one point on three sides by the Malibu fire but was saved by water-drops from one of the four helicopters employed by the Fire Department. However, the powerful winds—up to 80 miles an hour—hampered the use of helicopters.

The Malibu blaze also destroyed the Catholic Church's Sierra Retreat, a monastery, and severly damaged the Hughes Aircraft Co. research facility.

The latest fires were the worst in Southern California since the fall of 1961 when a blaze in the Bel Air and Brentwood sections of Los Angeles damaged or destroyed 496 homes.

Also destroyed in that blaze were four schools and 20 other buildings. Property losses, excluding automobiles, totaled an estimated $24 million.

Big Crowd At Prison Art Show

Between 7,000 and 8,500 persons turned out at San Quentin for the 16th annual prison art show prior to 11 a.m. today, according to a prison official.

Associate Warden Wayne Bartels said receipts for the morning reached $15,000 in the first two-and-a-half hours of the show, which was to run to 6 p.m.

Last year's crowd was 13,000.

OBITUARIES

CHARLES SCHRADER

Funeral for Charles Henry Schrader of Sacramento, father of Willis R. Schrader of San Rafael, will be Monday at 1 p.m. at W.H. Gormley and Son Mortuary, Sacramento.

Schrader, 83, had been a journeyman painter in Sacramento since 1922, but also operated a fishing boat, the Zulu, out of Bodega Bay when not painting.

Schrader suffered an apparent heart attack while painting the bottom of his boat in Sausalito and died Thursday at a local hospital.

Born in Genesco Township, N.D., he moved to Miles City, Mont., as a child.

He belonged to the Painters' Union and attended a Lutheran Church in Sacramento.

Also surviving are his wife, Mabel of Sacramento; a son, Raymond E. Schrader of Sacramento; a daughter, Caroline Erbele of Richmond; a brother, William Schrader of Richmond; six grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

Friends may call at the W. H. Gormley and Son Mortuary after 5 p.m. today. Burial arrangements are pending.

TONY ANTONIO

Tony Antonio, 60, of Fremont, formerly of Novato, died yesterday in a Fremont hospital after a brief illness.

Antonio was a warehouseman for the American Distillery Co., moving to Fremont with the company when it left Sausalito several years ago. He was a member of the Union City local of the warehousemen's union.

Born in Newman, Stanislaus County, Antonio had lived in Novato for about 20 years before moving to Fremont.

Survivors are his wife, Edith; a son, Ralph of Novato; three daughters, Helen Giossi of Bell, Napa County, and Alice and Betty Antonio, at home; seven brothers, Joseph and Walt of Novato, Frank, Harry and Bill, all of Sonoma; John of Petaluma and Raymond of North Sacramento; three sisters, Bea Correia of Sacramento, Mary Azevedo of Sonoma and Rose Silva of Novato, and three grandchildren.

Funeral will be at 1 p.m. Monday at the Redwood Chapel Mortuary in Novato, with burial in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery. Friends may call at the mortuary tomorrow.

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, faced with the unanimous opposition of San Francisco supervisors to any long-range transit plan using city streets for commuter buses, yesterday radically altered a controversial study of extending rail rapid transit to Marin from Richmond.

The study by the district's consultants doing its long-range plan was to have assumed that southern Marin commuters would be served by a bus system using Highway 101 and San Francisco streets. By yesterday's vote, however, the study was changed to assume that both a bus system would have the advantages of both its own right-of-way in Southern Marin and of underground routes in San Francisco.

The head of the Kaiser Engineering team doing the study, Gifford Randall, objected that such a system probably would fail to meet the goal of the Richmond loop. The goal of the loop, which was urged by the citizens advisory panel to the consultants, was to disperse residential and work patterns north and east away from San Francisco.

But Randall noted that such a high-speed bus system in Southern Marin still would encourage use of the direct bus link to San Francisco instead of the dispersion sought by the Richmond loop.

Randall was speaking strictly from the point of view of making the Richmond loop study valid to show if it would have the effect its proponent's favor. Randall, however, previously has said he favors one of the four other possible solutions, all of which use a direct connection to San Francisco via either a second deck on the bridge or an underwater tube.

The long-range transit plan was ordered by the 1968 Legislature, and is due for presentation to the 1971 Legislature in early April. The consultants' findings are to be subjected to a series of 21 public hearings throughout the district from November to February. Six hearings would be held in Marin.

The hearing schedule assumed, however, that the consultants would meet the original deadline late next month, but the consultants already have said that the unexpected study of the Richmond loop will stretch their work until mid-December. The hearing schedule, therefore, may be subject to extensive revision.

Completion of the consultants' work also will mean that cost figures for each solution will become available for the first time. One peek at the findings was disclosed yesterday by Randall when he said "our preliminary judgment is that a bridge would be cheaper than a tube" if the Richmond loop were built. This would have to be a new bridge, since the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge cannot carry trains, according to state engineers.

The Richmond loop study will add up to $49,165 to the $520,000 cost of the long-range plan. The loop, an extension of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District line, would take rail transit to Novato.

The vote to make the change in the study was approved, 10-3, the bare minimum of votes needed. Marin's three representatives voted for the change.

In a related matter, the citizens advisory panel submitetd its "statement of goals" which it designed as a guide for the board to use in choosing among the transit solutions studied by Kaiser and Okamoto-Liskamm, the urban design consultants.

The panel, chaired by Margaret Azevedo of Tiburon, questioned the assumed level of population that was the basis for the planning of the long-range system. "Do we really want 14 million people and 2,400 square miles of urbanized area in the Bay Region 50 years from now? What would life be like under such circumstances?" the panel asked.

The "overriding task," they declared, "is to diminish our dependence on the private automobile. To us, this means a total transit system serving not only commuters, but off-peak and weekend users as well."

The panel also questioned the possibility of planning "with any certainty" for the year 2015, the end of the plan's projections. Its statement favored a system keeping "options open for new developments in transportation and style of life."

Directors agreed to discuss the panel's report in depth at a later date. The 16-member panel's findings were distilled from the work of a committee of about 75 citizens.

Mrs. Azevedo, presenting the panel's report, said "we expect there will be some disagreement" with its findings.

Hayakawa Sure College's Mass Unrest Is Over

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco State college head S.I. Hayakawa believes prospects are "excellent" for another peaceful year at his school.

The outspoken 64-year-old educator, from Mill Valley, told an enthusiastic audience at the Commonwealth Club Friday that the "dreadful winter of 1968-69 is now ancient history."

The public and the news media must now realize that at S.F. State "it's a different kind of ball game."

He says the days of mass turmoil and confrontation are over and all that he now fears are isolated incidents of "silent thuggery," such as bombing.

He said it was important for the school to be in a permanent state of unrest" in its intellectual life, but said it should be "normal, healthy controversy."

UAW Resumes Talks With G.M. Today

DETROIT (UPI)—Their last General Motor Corp. paychecks in hand, striking United Auto Workers prepared today for what a UAW negotiator called the "slow, tough, painful" job ahead.

Strike benefit checks of $30 to $40 a week start Tuesday for workers who have done their picket line and other duties since the strike began at midnight, Sept. 14.

Negotiations resume today and were scheduled again Sunday, despite pessimistic reports on any progress toward a new three-year contract covering G.M. plants in the U.S. and Canada.

Altogether, 349,910 UAW workers were on strike and 36,065 others have been laid off at unstruck G.M. plants producing parts for other automakers. Other layoffs were spreading.

Another 2,000 members of the International Union of Electrical Workers were laid off indefinitely Friday at the Delco Products division plant at Rochester, N.Y. Uniroyal, Inc., announced Friday it will close tire plants at Los Angeles and Chicopee, Mass., for one week starting Monday. About 2,900 workers will be affected.

Uniroyal, which produces tires for G.M. cars, previously had laid off 2,350 workers at plants in Alabama, Louisiana and Detroit.

Friday's negotiating sessions were concerned mainly with noneconomic issues. Earl Bramblett, chief G.M. negotiator, said "some issues were resolved today, but no major ones."

Closed Meeting

A closed meeting of the Novato Unified School District board has been set for 9 p.m. Monday in the administrative offices to instruct Supt. James G. Bunker on employee salary negotiations.

Walker Basin Grass Blaze Is Unchecked

CALIENTE (UPI)—A grass-fire raged uncontrolled at Walker Basin several miles northeast of this Kern County Community today and embattled firemen said high winds and hot weather are stifling efforts at control.

The fire, of undetermined origin, started about noon Friday and by 7 a.m. today had charred over 1,000 acres of scrub and brush land.

Fire officials said no injuries had been reported to the 280 men fighting the blaze and no property damage had occurred.

The southward moving fire was fanned during the night by high winds. Kern County fire department spokesmen said many fire crews had been sent to Southern California to fight fires in that area and Kern crews were shorthanded.

A spokesman for fire officials said predicted high winds and hot weather for today may delay containment for "one or two days." A plea was again issued to hunters to be extra careful because of the extremely dangerous fire conditions.

Carbon Monoxide Kills Wife Of Top Surgeon

The victim was Mrs. Abraham Sirbu. Her husband, a distinguished orthopedic surgeon, also was a victim of the accident.

His condition was reported as critical in the intensive care unit at Mount Zion Hospital where he served for years as chief of orthopedic surgery.

Police believe Mrs. Sirbu failed to turn off the ignition in her car and fumes were carried through air ducts into the bedroom.

The engine was not running when police opened the garage door but the engine was still very hot.

Bid Accepted For Premiums On New Insurance; Some Criticism

Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday warily accepted a low bid of $38,500 for premiums on new insurance, but sharply criticized the district's insurance advisers for turning in an earlier bid for $12,000 for the same coverage.

The advisers, Marsh & McLennan, previously had submitted the higher bid, but it was rejected by the bridge directors as too high.

Director L. E. Castner of Sonoma County, chairman of the insurance committee, said the company explained it "went to new sources" the second time, resulting in the lower offer. But several directors grumbled that the huge drop in the second bid indicated something was wrong with the first.

Director C. Paul Bettini, a San Rafael councilman, suggested that the board "watch our insurance advisers closer." The disparity between the two bids, he declared, was "outrageous. There 's no excuse — they should have gone to all markets the first time."

Director Stephan C. Leonoudakis of San Francisco suggested that consumer advocate Ralph Nader be called in to check the matter. "No one around here's going to do it," he said.

The disputed insurance is for $10 million in comprehensive personal injury and property damage liability coverage. The premium is for three years of coverage. Two other brokers also bid, one at $58,125, the other at $75,037. All three bids were with $50,000 deductible provisions for any one claim.

The previous coverage was for $7 million. The increased coverage resulted from the district's entry into the transit business.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring said that the drop in the second bid was because the entire insurance industry was "chaotic."

In the end, the new coverage was approved, 12-1, Leonoudakis dissenting.

The Golden Gate Bridge District Board Also:

CLOSED — Held a 30-minute closed meeting to discuss "condemnation of some parcels," reportedly of land on Corte Madera's waterfront for a ferry terminal. The district's attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, reported afterward that no decision had been made in the closed session.

REPAIR — Approved a $355,000 contract with Ammann and Whitney, New York engineers, to engineer bridge repairs totaling $5,225,000, including replacement of every other suspender rope.

BICYCLES — Approved opening the bicycle path on the western sidewalk from 4:30 p.m. to sunset on Friday and days before holidays, effectively immediately. It already is open on weekends and holidays.

SUICIDE — Invited the San Francisco architectural firm of Anshen and Allen to submit, at no cost to the district, its proposed designs for a suicide barrier on the bridge.

PRINTING — Approved a $14,699 contract with Recorder-Sunset of San Francisco to reprint 1,000 copies of the original chief engineer's final report. Copies are disbursed as part of the district's public relations, and original copies no longer are available.

LIQUOR — Received report from Luehring that the district is appealing the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control's denial of a liquor license for the district's ferryboat, and cut the percentage of gross revenue due from the ferry caterer from 21.7 to 8 per cent pending approval of the permit.

GREYHOUND — Authorized Transit Mgr. Donald White and Jenkins to oppose Greyhound Lines' application to cut back midday service in Marin.

Ky May Not Give Victory Rally Speech

PARIS (UPI) — Diplomatic sources said today South Vietnamese Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky has decided not to attend a controversial rally in Washington next month.

The report came as Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's foreign policy adviser, arrived in Paris for conferences with Ky and Ambassador David K.E. Bruce, chief U.S. delegate to the Vietnam talks.

Ky is scheduled to appear on "Face the Nation," a CBS Television interview program at 11:30 a.m. EDT Sunday and diplomatic sources said his decision on the rally would be made public then.

Ky has been invited to attend the "Rally for Victory" in Washington Oct. 3 by its sponsor, radio evangelist Carl McIntire. White House officials have left the clear impression that Kissinger would try to discourage Ky's appearance.

Deposits Trickle In To Hunger Hike

Only about $1,200 of between $20,000 and $30,000 pledged as a result of the Marin "Walk Against Hunger" had been deposited by yesterday, the Crocker Citizens Bank of San Anselmo said.

The 20-mile walk Sunday drew more than 1,000 walkers who were pledged an average of $1 a mile, according to organizers.

The bank said deposits to benefit the Marin Economic Opportunity Council, the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation and the South Korean campaign of Meals for Millions are expected to continue through next week.

Hayward Accord

HAYWARD (UPI)—A three-day strike by 100 city employes has ended by unanimous approval of a "memorandum of understanding" hammered out by negotiators.

Major item included in Friday's agreement was initiation of a grievance procedure involving final binding arbitration. Anaheim is the only other city in California to have a comparable clause.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Mothers Often Forget To Show Love When Busy Raising Kids

DEAR HELEN:

I love my mother, but if she loves me, I hate the way she shows it.

She thinks I'm boy crazy. If I just say hellow to a boy, she thinks I'm in love with him, or acting like a cheap pick-up. The other night I was walking a little ahead of my folks downtown and some teen-age boys drove by in a car. One said, "Hi" and I said it back, and Mom flipped. I was just being friendly and so were they.

She yells at me constantly about stupid things. One minute she's mad, the next lovey-dovey. That means she wants me to do something like make breakfast or grocery shop, etc. After that's done, I'm crawling the walls because she starts to yell again. If I defend myself, she slaps me for talking back.

She tells me she wants me to be decent. Everyone I know and some of Mom's friends think I'm a sweet kid.

Like I say, Helen, I'm sure Mom loves me, but isn't there a more affectionate way of showing it? I'm tired of being used as a whipping post. — THE SUCKER

P.S. Please print this so my mother can read it.

DEAR SUCKER:

I've printed it so every mother can read it. All too often parents are so busy "raising their kids right" that they forget the vital importance of empathy, friendship, humor, demonstrated love.

Give your mother points for the right upbringing—otherwise you woudn't be a sweet kid. But I hope she reads your letter and remembers how necessary those other points are too.—H.

DEAR HELEN:

My best friend is always telling me I am her best friend. The strange thing about her is she is always inviting boys and girls over to her house for parties. They're nice kids and I know most of them — but she never invites me. The next day she calls and tells me about the parties. She says most of the kids act dumb but she keeps on inviting them, while leaving me out.

Why does she do this if I am her best friend? If she doesn't want me, at least she shouldn't mention the parties to me afterwards. — LONELY

DEAR LONELY:

Best friends should be able to tell each other what bothers them. If you nurse resentments, you won't be best friends long.

Ask this girl how she would feel if you gave a party and left her out, then expected her to hear all about it next day. If she truly likes you, she'll have a good explanation or start being more considerate.— H.

DEAR HELEN:

I was going steady with a guy. Then my girl friend came over one day and he fell for her because she is top heavy for her age, which is 13. (His age.) Are all boys like this? — T.E.

DEAR T.

Only age-13 types who judge girls by their measurements. Maybe you'd be better off without him? — H.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS F. COOK
(Klepsch photo)

Pamela Vassar Wed To Thomas F. Cook

Pamela Olene Vassar of Belmont became the bride of Thomas Frederick Cook of San Rafael last Saturday in a ceremony at St. Raphael Catholic Church. A reception followed at Dominic's restaurant in San Rafael.

Judy Hedberg of Millbrae was maid of honor, and the bride's sister, Cheryl Vassar of Livermore, was the bridesmaid.

Best man was Skip Kirchner of San Anselmo, and guests were ushered to their seats by the bridegroom's brother, Mike Cook of San Rafael, and the bride's brother, Robert Vassar of Livermore.

Pamela is the daughter of Robert J. Vassar of Clearlake Highlands. She was graduated from Weaver Airline School in Kansas City, Mo., and is employed by Air West Airlines inn San Francisco.

Thomas is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cook of San Rafael. He was graduated from San Rafael High School and attended College of Marin. The bridegroom is employed by Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in San Rafael. He is also the brother of Kenneth Cook of Petaluma, and his grandparents are Mrs. Augusta Pfeffer of San Rafael and Mr. and Mrs. John Cook of St. Helena.

Following a wedding trip to Martinique in the French West Indies, the couple will live in South San Francisco.

Vinyls Need Top Stitching

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm going to bravely tackle a vinyl coat and expect to complete it for a tiny fraction of the cost of the ready-made coats. I notice that some of the ready-made coats have top stitching on them, one row about ¼-inch from the edge and one row exactly on the edge of all outer parts of the garment, including the sleeves and the hem. Why is this stitching used on some garments and not on others?

MRS. J.E.P.

DEAR MRS. J.E.P.,

The details of a garment are entirely up to the manufacturer, and you will always find a variation. Usually, the more top stitching you find on a garment, the more tailored it looks. Sometimes a coat is designed for dual purposes.

I have checked with many of my friends who have these vinyl coats that they have purchased. It seems that in every case, the ones that have the two rows of machine stitching, especially the one row that is on the exact edge of the garment, don't seem to crack or peel as much as the ones without stitching. Wherever there is a break or fold in the garment, you will find a tendency in the vinyl to peel or crack. However, the machine stitching seems to prevent this.

From hy observation, I would suggest to machine top stitch any of the outer edges of your garment. This must be done very accurately because it will certainly be a detail that will be obvious.

"Since waistlines are no longer a thing of the past, and we'll all be needing belts again, I wish to add a little tip that I learned the hard way.

"Before making a fabric covered belt, shrink the belting or grosgrain you use for the backing before you make the belt. The belting does have a tendency to draw up and the fabric of your garment doesn't, thus you have a wrinkled up belt that often ends up too short. It's a good idea to shrink zippers too when they are to be used in washable clothes."

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm just learning to tailor my first coat, and our teacher says we should buy wool for our tailoring project. I think it would be much easier and much less expensive to use a polyester knit, but I can't argue with her. What do you think?

MRS. L.M.

DEAR MRS. L.M.,

I agree with your teacher 100 per cent and wish there were more like her. When you are studying an art as involved as tailoring a garment, you must use the media that will lend itself to the skills you will learn. Only wool shapes, eases, presses and tailors the way you want a finished garment to look.

For the most part, you will be working with wools most of the time when it comes to suits and coats. It's just a little extra, rather than quickly making something out of polyester knits, whether it's a dress, coat or suit, and you would be cheating yourself of the opportunity to learn how to handle much more difficult fabric.

After you have completed your tailoring course, it will be simple to use some of these techniques on cottons, silks or whatever. You'll be glad you listened to your teacher, and this is certainly the year to learn to tailor because most of us will need at least one new coat.

MRS. M.F. SAYS: "Everytime I go to the fabric departments, my little boy is simply fascinated with the beautiful fake furs and just loves to cuddle up to them. Since this is his first year at school and the small children were asked to bring a small rug for their rest period, it occurred to me to buy a piece of fake fur instead of a rug for him. This is the greatest security blanket a child could ever have. He simply loves it and is the envy of all the children. I thought this might be a good idea to pass on to your readers. It only takes minutes to bind the edges where the fur was cut, shake it out thoroughly to prevent any loose fibers that could cause sneezing, and you're in business."

DEAR EUNICE,

I often hesitate to make anything out of corduroy because there are so many garments available already made up that are so reasonable. Lately, I've been looking at better sports clothes and find the prices are between $100. and $200. I am wondering what makes such a difference in price? Also, many of the ready-made garments in the higher prices use the corduroy with the lines going around instead of up and down.

MRS. F.E.R.

DEAR MRS. F.E.R.,

It is true, corduroy is ordinarily a very inexpensive piece of cotton. Because of it's easy care and wearability, it is mass produced and therefore, very inexpensive.

The minute a designer takes a piece of fabric to his heart, regardless of the initial cost, and places it in limited quantities, you will find the price is astronomical. Many of the thick, thin, or uneven wale corduroys are much more effective when cut on the cross-grain. This is again one of the features that makes the garment stand out among the masses.

Corduroy may be cut in either the lengthwise or crosswise grain, but you must remember to always cut each piece in the same direction. If your pattern doesn't call for the cross-grain, and most of them don't, use your own creativity, be different, and you'll be proud of your results.

Social Worker Tours Orient And Attends Conference In Philippines

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. Julia Rose Phillips of Mill Valley, a social service consultant with the State Department of Social Welfare in San Francisco, has returned from a study abroad tour vacation highlighted by attendance at the International conference of Social Welfare held in Manila Sept. through 6-12.

Mrs. Phillips says she was amazed at the resourcefulness of the Philippine people's handling of the conference right after the disastrous floods in Manila.

Emphasis under the conference theme, "New Strategies for Social Welfare," she says, was on the need to deal with issues on an international level and the necessity for more honesty in facing issues and recognizing the role of youth.

Preceding the conference Mrs. Phillips's tour included Expo '70, Kyoto, Tokyo and Hakone in Japan, Bangkok, Singapore, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Penang. She visited welfare agencies in the major cities. An active member of the Marin County Humane Society and deeply concerned with animal welfare, she was pleased to find organizations comparable to the SPCA in Singapore and Penang. In Bangkok she found the condition of animals deplorable.

In Singapore she was interested to learn about SOS (Samaritans of Singapode) dealing with suicide prevention and other personal crises. She was surprised to find the suicide rate in the Orient highest among students.

Pair Wed In San Rafael

Dulcie Louise Perkins became the bride of Gilbert Messic last Saturday in a ceremony at the Holiday Inn in San Rafael.

The daughter of Mrs. June Perkins of San Rafael, Dulcie chose as her attendant Mrs. Michael Leistico of Sacramento.

Michael Leistico was the best man, and ushering guests to their seats were Christopher Perkins of San Rafael, the bride's brother and Donnald White of San Rafael, the bridegroom's brother.

Dulcie is a graduate of San Rafael High School and the Bassist Fashion Institute in Portland, Ore. She is employed by the Bechtel Corp. in San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. I.W. Whitney of San Rafael are her grandparents.

Gilbert, son of Mrs. William Noltee of San Rafael and Gilbert Messic of Boise, Idaho, is a graduate of Savanah High School in Anaheim. He is employed by Cambell Bishop Chevrolet in Corte Madera.

Mrs. John Ternullo Elected By Guild

Members of St. Sylvester's Women's Guild have elected a three-year-member, Mrs. John R. Ternullo of San Rafael, president.

Glenda Ternullo has served as corresponding secretary for the guild, which supports and carries on programs for the progress of St. Sylvester's parish.

The guild is planning a champagne fashion show to be held Thursday and a dinner dance at the Meadow Club on Nov. 14.

Wife of a district manager for Gallenkamp Shoes, the new president's interests are her Monday night bridge club, gardening and cooking.

The Ternullos have lived in Marin for three years and are the parent's of David, 8, and Sacia, 6 years old. Mrs. Ternullo's schools are Los Angeles City College, City College of San Francisco, the University of Nevada and French Hospital School of Nursing in San Francisco, where she received an R.N. degree.

MRS. JOHN TERNULLO

She is also active in the Peacock Gap Garden Club, the Glenwood School Parent-Teacher Association and the Family Service League.

RADIATION STERILIZES LIZARD — This is one of several score leopard lizards exposed to radiation in a controlled experiment sponsored by the AEC and UCLA. Relatively low amounts of radiation produced sterility within three years, a result scientists said was unexpected. Mice also exposed to the radiation exhibited significantly reduced life spans.

UNEXPECTED RESULT

Radiation Sterility Shock

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

JACKASS FLATS, Nev. — Female leopard lizards exposed to low levels of gamma radiation in their native habitat became sterile after three years.

This is one of the conclusions of a six-year, computer-aided study conducted by University of California at Los Angeles scientists here in the sandy desert scrub 70 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

Scientists and technicians from the UCLA Laboratory of Nuclear Medicine and Radiation Biology monitored native populations of plants and animals, using a computer at the school's Los Angeles campus to process the data.

Regular computerized censuses were taken in a 20-acre fenced desert area exposed to low levels of gamma radiation from a radioactive cesium source perched atop a 50-foot tower. The area is part of the Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada Test Site.

"In 1967 we observed that leopard lizards in the irradiated plot were failing to reproduce," said Dr. Frederick B. Turner, who supervised reptile studies. "Autopsy of three females from the area two years later revealed that they lacked ovaries and had highly increased amounts of body fat." Radiation was considered the reason.

The scientists said these results were remarkable in view of the relatively low amounts of radiation received. These lizards were exposed to about 1,500 units of radiation from 1964 through 1967.

The investigation relied heavily upon various computer procedures, particularly the sorting and merging of new information into existing material. The computer processed some 65,000 project records.

"Another species of lizard in the irradiated area, the side-blotched uta, apparently survived exposure without ill effects," Dr. Turner continued. "This difference may be due to the much shorter life-span of the uta, which rarely survives longer than two years.

"Thus the cumulative dose received by the longer-lived leopard lizards, whose life span is eight or nine years may account for the observed sterility in females of this species."

Tiny pocket mice exposed to the constant radiation exhibited a significantly reduced life span, according to studies by Dr. Norman R. French.

Another aspect of the study revealed that pocket mice have an ability to "turn off" during lean years these one-fourth-ounce mammals apparently are able to survive food shortages by sleeping in their burrows, thus reducing their nutrition requirements sharply.

The studies turned up 25 pocket mice that had survived two markedly lean years, when plant growth and seeds were even more scarce than usual in the desert.

Dr. Turner pointed out that the fenced area provided a measure of control that made the studies especially accurate.

DANCE REVIEW

Bayanihan Group Rich In Folklore

By MARIE RAMEAU

SAN FRANCISCO — The Bayanihan Philippine Dance Company might best be described as a full theatrical display of the unique cultural heritage of the Philippines. Last night three prominent strains — indigenous tribal, Arabic-Malayan and Spanish — were evident. The program was a prologue — "The Pledging of the Peace" — and five suites.

"Kalinga — Of Signs and Omens" drew its inspiration from the Mountain Province of north-central Luzon and included warriors, ceremony and a wedding dance, culminating in a frenzied celebration.

The impact of Europe was apparent in "Ecos de la Ermita." A strong Spanish influence led to the "Philippinization" of such dances as the waltz, Habanera and Jota. Elegantly styled, these presented a haunting evocation of the aristocratic Spanish quarter of old Manila.

From the Muslim island of Mindanao came the "Mindanao Tapestry." Its first strands belong to the authentic "Tutungan Festival," whereas the last are distinctly Maranao and Magindanao, presented as festival entertainment. Most notable is the "Singkil," in which a prince and princess dexterously weave among crossed bamboo poles clapped in syncopated rhythms.

"Tagabili" proceeds from a tribe of that name. Chanted by a narrator and chorus, it unfolds into a solemn, tragically dramatic structure. The ruling datu slays his brother and his daughter is consequently fated to die. To avert misfortune, a noble suitor receives her hand, but the girl is stricken, and with her death catastrophe overcomes the village. A symbolic burning of his house tolls the extinction of the datu's line.

"Bayanihan" is a Tagalog expression for "working together," and the company propagates no stars. After this name, the final suite presented a lowland festival condensing the full cycle of village life and ending with the "Tinikling," most celebrated of Philippine dances.

Bayanihan features the entire spectrum of Philippine musical instruments, as well as a diversity of authentic costumes corresponding to the area and period of the dances.

The company's present organization traces to an intensive study by San Francisco's Asia Foundation. It is indeed worth crossing the bridge for this repertoire, to be repeated today at 8:30 p.m. at the Masonic Auditorium.

Campsites Shut Temporarily On Mount Tamalpais

The Bootjack campgrounds on Mount Tamalpais is getting a vacation of its own, after a hard summer of accomodating visitors.

Although Bootjack is temporarily closed to overnight camping, Pan Toll is still open, and groups may make reservations to camp at Alice Eastwood Camp and Kirby Cove, according to Robert K. Crawford, Marin area manager for the state Department of Parks and Beaches.

Crawford's office said the Bootjack closing is not a result of the vandalism which closed it and several other grounds in Mount Tamalpais State Park in previous years. It's more a case of being "tired out."

Plans are to repair, replant where needed, and give the vegetation a chance to regrow, the area office said.

Jordan Granted $5 Million For Emergency Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon announced Saturday that he has ordered $5 million to be made available from government contingency funds for emergency relief for victims of the Jordanian civil war.

The president made the announcement on the eve of his trip to Europe tomorrow.

He disclosed also that he is asking Undersecretary of State John Irwin to take personal charge of the relief effort and coordinate it with those of voluntary American agencies and international organizations.

The President also reaffirmed a disclosure Friday by Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard that the United States will replace military equipment Jordan has lost, and indicated that Jordan might receive some military equipment beyond that.

Cambodian Currency Contains No Coins

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodia has no coins, all currency being notes ranging in value from 1 riel to 500 riels. The exchange rate is 55 riels to one U.S. dollar.

Her License Plate May Bring A Grin

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Inmates at the license plate factory at Folsom State Prison may get a chuckle stamping out some of the new personalized license plates.

For example, there may be a few grins when they get the order from one woman who wants JKT-34B.

A state Motor Vehicles Department (DMV) spokesman said the JKT stood for her initials. He did not know about the 34B, but the convicts will probably hazard a guess or two.

"If she wants to advertise, it's all right with us," he said. And the prisoners may get a little thirsty when they stamp out the sudsy request for HAMMS.

The DMV spokesman said Thursday that since the new personalized license program went into effect a month ago his agency has received some 4,500 requests.

Gov. Ronald Reagan signed the bill permitting the plates for an additional $25 with the revenue going for improvement of California's ecology.

DMV Deputy Registrar Elmer Brown said that once the plates start hitting the streets "the idea will be even better advertised" and his agency should be flooded with requests.

The most popular request, he said, was for PEACE.

The one who gets the plate will be decided at a drawing next month.

Most car owners want letters spelling out their names.

But, Brown said, some have a penchant for the bizarre.

For example, one request from Southern California was for BRUIN. Brown said he presumed this was from a rah-rah UCLA student.

Another wanted BEAR. A University of California, Berkeley, student? The registrar said he did not know.

There were also requests for BANJO, DERBY, SMILE, MINUS 1, VIP, EGO, MR BUG and GIDGET.

Brown said offensive requests would be rejected.

Age Correction

The age of Laurance F. Sitter of Arlington Heights, Ill., is 30, not 39, as listed in Thursday's Independent-Journal among marriage licenses issued.

Drug Hearing For San Rafael Pair

A preliminary hearing has been set in Marin Municipal Court for Oct. 19 for Cathy Brownell and Russell Ellis, both of San Rafael, who were arrested Aug. 6 on drug charges.

Mrs. Brownell is accused of possessing LSD and marijuana and Ellis of possessing pot.

They were arrested after drug agents with a search warrant said they found suspected pot plants, hashish and LSD tabs in their house at 139 Bayview Drive.

Earth, like the planet Jupiter, sporadically emits low-frequency radio signals that mystify scientists.

Woman's Body Discovered In Lyndon B. Johnson Lake

KINGSLAND, Tex. (UPI)— Llano County Sheriff Gale Ligon does not know how the body of a 44-year-old woman got into Lake Lyndon Baines Johnson but he strongly suspects it was no accident. The woman had been missing five years.

"We don't know yet if there was foul play; we'll just have to wait for a report from Austin," Ligon said Friday night.

"But from evidence at the scene, it looked as if the car had been deliberately pushed or driven into the water."

Former President Lyndon B. Johnson has frequently boated in the lake, which is near his ranch and which was named for him.

The lake is being partly drained for a hydroelectric project. As the water sank below the 25-foot level, it exposed a sunken automobile in which was the skeleton of Mrs. Charlene Frances Sigler of Kingsland.

Mrs. Sigler had been missing since June 2, 1965, when she left Kingsland for her son's graduation from Texas Christian University in Fort Worth.

Mrs. Sigler and her husband operated a motel at Kingsland. The son attended TCU because Mrs. Sigler had lived in Fort Worth from 1942 until about two months before her disappearance.

The skeleton was removed from the rusted automobile, identified through papers on it and sent to the Department of Public Safety crime laboratory in Austin, the state capital.

The son Mrs. Sigler wanted to see graduated, Wayne Brown, said she was missing a week before he learned about it.

"The way we found out about it, I sent her a birthday card and her husband, (Fred Sigler) called and said, 'Isn't she up there?" Brown said. "And we started checking. The family worked almost day and night for two years, even in Austin, but nothing came of it."

West To Affect Singaporeans

SINGAPORE (UPI) —Future Singaporeans are expected to adopt more Western attitudes and behaviour.

A survey by Dr. J. A. MacDougal, Singapore University sociologist, said this would result from the growth of English-educated and English-speaking sections of the population. He also said nine out of 10 citizens of various races like to call themselves Singaporeans, not Indians, Malays or Chinese.

Novato Youth Gets Marijuana Hearing

A preliminary hearing has been set in Marin Municipal Court for Oct. 6 for Dennis John Hachmyer, 22, of Novato, who is charged with possessing marijuana on Sept. 6.

Hachmyer was arrested after an officer said he found him and a 13-year-old girl in a pickup truck at 1:50 a.m. in San Marin. The girl was cited for violation of curfew and Hachmyer arrested after a bag of suspected pot was found in the truck.

Purebred Brahma Cattle Increase

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — Registrations of purebred Brahman cattle increased 23 per cent during 1969, the International Breed Registry reports.

The association numbers about 3,600 members in the United States and 37 foreign countries. Registrations to date total 428,000 head.

"This increase in breed activity can largely be attributed to an increasing demand for Brahman bulls for commercial crossbreeding," said association president Robert L. Massey.

Portable Cotton Candy Machine

KYOTO, Japan (UPI) — A Kyoto firm has developed a portable machine to make cotton candy at home. Crystal sugar is put on a revolving tray which produces the cotton candy by centrifugal force. The machine is small enough to place on a kitchen table.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR YOUR FIRST HOUSE?

3 bedroom, 2 bath, level 2 car garage, close to schools and shopping. Needs a little work: hardwood floors need sanding, some paint wouldn't hurt, neither would some screens. Owner wants to move to the city, and will take low down or the house will qualify for FHA loan. Owner will consider all offers from serious buyers. (Broker cooperation invited) Drive by 147 Alden Ave. Rohnert Park and talk to the owner. You could buy your first house!

OPEN SAT. & SUNDAY

Agnew Claims Spock's Book Bred Revolt

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew read from the baby care book of Dr. Benajmin Spock Friday night and blamed its advice to parents for helping foster a "pervasive policy of permissiveness."

Agnew told a $150-a-plate fund-raising dinner the book has sold more than 25 million copies. "Don't knock it," he said, and then read: "You have to compromise. Overlook some of his (the child's) less irritating bad habits, realizing that they are not permanent."

Spock's book, Agnew said, advocates careful avoidance of "bossiness."

A TRAGIC MISTAKE

"Who do you suppose is to blame when, 10 years later, that child comes home from college and sits down at the table with dirty, bare feet and a disorderly faceful of hair?" Agnew asked. "As much as sociological soreheads hate to admit it," the vice president said, the recent "pervasive policy of permissiveness has turned out to be a tragic mistake. The age of indulgence has eroded personal responsibility and corrupted discipline. It has replaced respect for authority with fear of repression."

BALONEY INSIDE-OUT

Earlier about 300 young persons passed out baloney sandwiches to passersby with leaflets asking, "Why pay $150 for baloney inside when you can get it free outside?"

Agnew told the audience of about 2,000 persons his recent campaign trips have a double mission: "Specifically, to help elect men to public office who will lean hard against the trend toward permissiveness;" and, in general, to mobilize a silent majority which has been "bulldozed for years" into thinking their values are "embarrassingly out of style."

But, the vice president said, "the age of indulgences is at long last coming to attend. The time of individual responsibility is at hand.

"Just as past permissiveness led to alienation and disorder, I am confident that the new sense of responsibility that is taking hold today will lead to greater self respect in every American and a far deeper mutual respect between genrations."

Rangers Contain Garberville Fire

—Exhausted firefighters have contained a forest fire which destroyed 12 summer cabins and blackened 3,500 acres of redwood trees in Northern California.

A group of 450 forest rangers and volunteers managed late Friday to secure a fire line around the heavily wooded area 12 miles north of Garberville. Four planes dropped chemical retardants on the blaze.

No injuries were reported and the cause was unknown.

THE PUBLIC PAYROLL

San Rafael Salary Outlay

Salaries of public employees have been the subject of strong debate this year in budget sessions throughout Marin, at meetings of the board of supervisors, at meetings of city councils and of school district and special district boards.

Employees and their representatives, pleading for large pay increases, cited the rising cost of living and often argued that more money was paid in other counties, cities or districts for similar work.

Few employees got as much as they requested. Most local agencies granted more than they were willing at the outset.

The 1970-71 payrolls of all local agencies in Marin as of the start of the new fiscal year, July 1, are being published by the Independent-Journal during the next few weeks as a complete accounting of what is now paid public employees and as a basis of comparison from agency to agency.

Balloon Hunt May Be Off

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Coast Guard today was considering whether to continue the search for the missing balloon "Free Life" and its three passengers after a search vessel ruled out any connection between the missing balloon and debris floating in the area where the balloon was believed downed.

The Coast Guard said the cutter Ingram, which rushed to the search area Friday with another Coast Guard cessel when a plane spotted the debris about 300 miles southeast of Newfoundland, was ordered to return to port after the flotsam was "evaluated" as an ammunition holder.

The other cutter, Dallas, was ordered to remain in the search area pending a decision by Coast Guard officials whether to continue the search.

Two Men Freed On Pot Charges

Marijuana possession charges against David Joel Shute, 19, and Stanley Allen Jacobs, 21, both residents of a San Rafael hotel, were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court because no chemical analysis of the suspected pot had been made.

Judge Peter Allen Smith dismissed the case. The men were arrested Aug. 4.

APPLES NOT FOR TEACHER

Long-haired Dianne Kakleas, 4, (center) and Andrew Robinson, 4, both of San Rafael, decide that sooner than polish their apples for some future teacher, they'll make friends with a horse — it might help them in competition for "Littlest Cowboy" honors at the Grand National Livestock Exposition, Horse Show and Rodeo at San Francisco's Cow Palace. The annual show will run Oct. 23 through Nov. 1. The San Rafael youngsters are among the first to take advantage of the contest, open to children 30 months through 10 years old. (Hal Randall photo)

Parking Lot Under 101 Discussed

That blank space under the Highway 101 overpass through San Rafael may be put to good use, if things go well between city officials and the state Division of Highways.

City Mgr. James H. McCown reported yesterday that city officials met Thursday with a leasing officer from the state highways office for tentative discussions of putting a paved parking lot and landscaping beneath the overpass.

The proposal — subject to revision — calls for 204 parking spaces with meters, lights and some fencing, at a roughly estimated cost of $65,000 under the northbound viaduct between Second Street and Mission Avenue.

The space under the new southbound viaduct and alongside Hetherton Street now contains drainage and a box culvert. The city hopes to see this area landscaped, with use of state funds if possible, McCown explained.

The city manager said the leasing of state highway land is a new concept, and many details remain to be worked out. The city hopes to keep the fee minimal, because costs of preparing the parking lot will probably eat up any expected income tfrom the parking customers, he said.

McCown said the state highway work has affected some of the city's parking spaces, and parking problems are likely to increase east of Irwin Street. The city also must "analyze the impact on the parking district," which does not include the viaduct area, McCown said.

One problem is that the old, northbound viaduct will be replaced within three to 10 years, when state funds become available, he added.

San Rafael hopes to be ready to begin work on the parking project as soon as construction work on the viaduct ends. The contractor's office said yesterday that work should be done by Jan. 1.

More city-state meetings are expected soon, McCown said, but none has been scheduled.

Detergent Industry Claims Enzymes Safe

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The detergent industry says its own tests and the experience of millions of housewives proves that enzyme detergents are safe.

A spokesman also denied the industry was stalling a scientific study into possible health hazards of enzymes.

Detergent makers have been hit in recent days by charges they made false advertising claims for their enzyme detergents and that their products cause allergies, skin ailments and —in the case of detergent factory workers —lung ailments.

A spokesman for Procter & Gamble, a major manufacturer of Enzyme products, said "exhaustive research and extensive use of enzyme detergents in millions of homes have clearly shown that our products are perfectly safe for the consumer."

A spokesman for the Soap and Detergent Association said detergent manufacturers have full confidence in the safety of enzyme detergents based on testing and use going back many years.

President Nixon's consumer affairs adviser, Virginia H. Knauer, accused the soap and detergent industry Friday of stalling on a health study through an attempt to switch the study of detergent safety from the American Academy of Allergy to the National Academy of Science.

Spokesman E. Scott Pattison said the industry wanted the switch because the allergy group was not well known, and the industry could be subject to charges it "bought up five or six allergists." Besides, he said, the NAS could give the study broader coverage.

Mrs. Knauer retorted, "You know what that means. A broader study takes two or three years. Let's go for what they originally agreed to —the allergists."

The Federal Trade Commission and the Food and Drug Administration indirectly joined Mrs. Knauer in her complaint. They invited the Soap and Detergent Association to a meeting in Washington Oct. 8, saying it was time for "immediate action" on the study.

The association accepted, but Pattison repeated the industry's position that there never was any firm agreement that the allergists would do the study, and the detergent association will pay for the study now provided it is done by the National Academy of Science.

Witness Tells Of Pulling Manson Out By His Hair

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Charles Manson was pulled by his hair from beneath the floorboards of a building at the Spahn Ranch a week after the Tate murders and dragged to a police van by sheriff's deputies.

The arrest of Manson and 26 other members of his "family" was not made in connection with the Tate-LaBianca case but in a roundup involving auto theft, a deputy sheriff testified Friday at the murder trial.

The prosecution was attempting to show that the 35-year-old Manson was trying to hide from police because he thought they had linked him to the slayings.

Defense lawyer Irving Kanarek cross-examined Deputy Sheriff Donald Dunlap and brought out that 40 armed deputies were approaching the building where Manson was living. Kanarek suggested that anyone would hide under those circumstances.

Dunlop testified that he twice ordered Manson to emerge from beneath the planking of the ranch shack and finally had to drag him out by his long hair.

The lengthy cross-examination of Dunlop postponed until Monday the testimony of Juan Flynn, a member of the "family" who was the only man to stand up against Manson's orders, according to the prosecution.

Eighteen-year-old Barbara Hoyt testified earlier Friday that she had to go to the psychiatric ward of a hospital in Honolulu three weeks ago because she was given an overdose of LSD.

Miss Hoyt, who testified she overheard Susan Atkins telling about the Tate slayings, told the district attorney's office that she was slipped a hamburger loaded with LSD by another female member of the hippie cult and almost died.

Philippine Newsmen Not 'Professionals'

MANILA (UPI) — Journalists do not rak as "professionals" in the Philippines because there are no prescribed educational qualifications for newsmen. Journalists don't mind much, however, as they don't have to pay the special "professional" tax levied against doctors, lawyers and such.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Amnesia Victims May Remember Brief Period After Accident

Van Dellen

More on memory (before we forget). Concussion was noted in four football players after head injuries. All were dazed and when asked immediately what happened, each stated: "I got hit." Moments later they developed amnesia lasting from three to 20 minutes. Two of the players did not recall wandering aimlessly about the field. One stumbled back to the huddle and had no idea where he was. The other was also disoriented for time and place.

Not one could recall how he got off the playing field. Obviously the concussion was responsible for the loss of memory. When it was all over, the team physicians wondered why these boys remembered getting hit immediately after the accident but could not recall what happened in the next three to 20 minutes.

APPARENTLY the recollection of being hit lasted only a second but the recall mechanism for the events thereafter was damaged by the physical effects of the injury. Or, perhaps temporary damage prevents events from registering in the memory centers of the brain and are lost forever.

With age, many people have difficulty recalling names. "I've got a mental block but it will come to me in a little while," they say. Sometimes it does, but more often than not it comes back hours later when the person is relaxed. We believe anxiety plays a role. Surprisingly, names and other events are quickly remembered when the person is relaxed by hypnotism or a sedative such as truth serum has been injected.

MEMORY is a valuable asset. Lower animals learn what is useful for them to survive and very little else. Higher animals go beyond this and consequently have a greater variety of possible ways to insure survival.

Some researchers believe that the memory process is chemical in nature and stems from the synthesis of brain or cerebral protein. This theory is difficult to assess. As one authority put it: "How shall we study that which studies?"

SINUS INFECTION

D.S. writes: Can sinus disease spread from one sinus to all the others?

REPLY

This is possible, but in most instances the infection is centered in the nose and spreads to one or more sinuses. Our leaflet on sinus disturbances can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

NERVE DEAFNESS

W.L. writes: How does an ear specialist determine whether deafness is due to a dead hearing nerve?

REPLY

BUBBLY DRINKS

L.R. writes: Do carbonated beverages have an adverse effect upon the nerves?

REPLY

Not unless they contain a large amount of caffeine or other stimulant.

HONEY AND PRESSURE

H.S. writes: Will taking honey at each meal ward off high blood pressure?

REPLY

No. There is no relationship between the two.

LETTUCE AND FERTILITY

T.R. writes: Does lettuce have an effect upon fertility?

REPLY

No — unless we bring rabbits into the discussion.

Drinking Water

NEW YORK (UPI) — There are 325 million cubic miles of water on the earth, but only one percent is considered fit for human consumption, according to Rockwell Manufacturing Company, manufacturer of water meters.

Unseen Menace On Marin's Coast

The sandspit at the mouth of Bolinas Lagoon shines brightly in the sun, giving no hint that it and the entire lagoon have been under quarantine since Aug. 14 because of raw sewage pollution in the lagoon and an outbreak of viral hepatitis. State and county public health officials have admitted they have been unable positively to blame the lagoon for more than a dozen hepatitis cases among the residents of Bolinas, the community in the right center of the picture. But, swimming in the lagoon and surf fishing, boating and swimming in the offshore waters have been banned between Stinson Beach on the far side of the lagoon and Overlook Drive in Bolinas, just above the wooded ravine on the near side of the street grid. Not affected are Stinson Beach State Park on the cliffs beyond the lagoon, nor Agate Beach County Park along the cliffs at the lower right. Meanwhile, the fog sneaks in over the Marin Headlands in the far background, as if to cool off the whole controversy.

Nixon Has Different Approach On Church

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

President Nixon apparently belongs to the school of thought which holds that you don't need to attend church regularly in order to be a practicing Christian.

Most of his predecessors in the White House were conspicuously faithful about church attendance, either out of personal conviction, or because they felt they should set a good example for the nation.

The three most recent presidents, before Nixon, all adhered to the custom of regular churchgoing. Except when he was ill or out of town, Dwight D. Eisenhower showed up virtually every Sunday at 11 o'clock service of the National Presbyterian Church. He always occupied pew 41, in the fifth row on the left side. The Eisenhower pew is now preserved in the Chapel of the Presidents at the new National Presbyterian Church and Center in Washington.

John F. Kennedy attended Mass every Sunday, usually at Holy Trinity Church in the Georgetown section of the capital. Kennedy felt strongly that religion is a private matter and tried his best to behave like any ordinary member of the congregation. To avoid special treatment, he often slipped into the church after the service had begun, and took the first empty seat he found.

Lyndon B. Johnson was not much of a church-goer before he entered the White House, but as president, he set what may be an all-time record for frequency of participation in public worship. With characteristic Texas exuberance, he sometimes attended two or three services in one day.

Nixon established a new custom—holding church services in the White House, with a different guest preacher for each occasion.

Because of their setting, these services have received considerable publicity, and many Americans have gained the impression that Nixon is a strong advocate of regular Sunday worship. Last June, he was named "Churchman of the Year" by Religious Heritage of America.

The record shows that in the 20 months since his inauguration, Nixon has participated in 23 Sunday worship services in the East Room of the White House—an average of just over one a month.

Aside from funerals, he has not set foot in any Washington church since he became president.

He has gone out to church on three occasions while vacationing at Key Biscayne, Fla., once at San Clemente, Calif., and once while in Hawaii to greet returning astronauts.

Nixon's close friend and spiritual counselor, Rev. Billy Graham, acknowledges that the President "is not the world's most faithful churchgoer."

"But I don't think a man necessarily has to go to church every Sunday to be genuinely religious," said the Baptist evangelist. "I am sure Richard Nixon is a person of strong religious convictions."

Annual Mission Conference Set

Valley Baptist Church of San Rafael has announced plans for its seventh annual missionary conference Oct. 3-7.

Opening event at the church, 3 North San Pedro Road, will be an international-style banquet with Rev. Robert Ranney, a member of the Chicago Inner City group, as guest speaker.

Guest speaker at the 8:15 and 11 a.m. services Oct. 4 will be Rev. Dewey Mulholland, a member of the Northeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Floriano, Brazil.

Speaking at the 7 p.m. service will be Rev. Richard Duran, a missionary in the industrial city of Akita, Japan.

Alma Steinhauer, a faculty member at the Ivory Coast Academy in Bouake, West Africa, will be guest speaker at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 6. Prior to her present assignment, Miss Steinhauer taught in Brazil as a member of the Conservative Baptist Foreign Mission Society of Wheaton, Ill.

Closing the service Oct. 7 will be Mr. and Mrs. Larry Allen who are members of the church's mission in Hong Kong.

RACE ISSUE STANDOFF

Rhodesian Church-State Dispute

By PETER NIESEWAND

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesia's churches and government have come to at least a temporary compromise over the country's official race separation policies.

Although a mollifying action by Ian Smith's government averted a major clash with the churches, it didn't solve the issue of government decree versus the tenets of Christianity.

In August the country's churches were solidly united in a determination to defy the most important legislation on the statute books of this "rebel" republic — the Land Tenure Act, which divides Rhodesia between the five million black population and the 250,000 whites.

The Land Tenure Act states that the interests of each race shall be paramount in its own area, and strictly controls the activities of "alien" races on such designated land.

Almost all the Christian churches here are multiracial and straddle the race barrier. A black priest will hear the confession of a white man; a European nun will nurse an injured African.

But the Land Tenure Act required the churches to register as "voluntary associations" if they wished to continue their multiracial work. Failure to register would render them liable to prosecution, and possible confiscation of their property.

Ian Smith's government said that it did not plan segregating Christians but the churches were not impressed by the assurances.

A priest commented: "Mr. Smith may have no intention of forbidding black and white to worship together, but what about his successor?"

The major Christian denominations decided to defy the Act. In a statement, they said they would refuse to register as "voluntary associations," as this would imply they accepted the state's right to grant — or withhold — permission for them to carry out religious duties.

They also refused to recognize either the principle or the practice of racial discrimination.

The defiant Christians were headed by Rhodesia's five Roman Catholic bishops. In a pastoral message last March, the bishops said the Act "conflicts with Christianity." They added: "Henceforth, the Church shall merely be tolerated and may be permitted to exercise her mission only within such limits as Government Ministers see fit to determine . . .

"The whole future of the church in Rhodesia is at stake."

A month later, as opposition to the Act grew, the bishops warned that if the government implemented the legislation, then, on an appointed day, the Roman Catholic church would close all its institutions — including more than 700 schools, 47 hospitals, old age homes and orphanages.

As the Sept. 2 deadline for the churches' registration as "voluntary associatiois" approached, meetings were arranged between a delegation of heads of denominations and Premier Smith.

Finally, less than a week before the deadline, Smith announced he was prepared to make one major concession to help remove friction between church and state.

He told Parliament that the Rhodesian government would "deem the churches to have registered" under the Act — but only as far as mission land was concerned. Smith added that the state retained the right to cancel such registration.

Father Richard Randolph, secretary of the Roman Catholic Bishops' Conference, commented later that the churches had asked the government to make it possible for them to lawfully continue their work.

Randolph said: "The government has shown its good intentions by making some areas a little bit more lawful than they were — but with the right to stop the work at any time."

Technically the church-state position has not altered greatly. Other areas are still affected by the Land Tenure Act — only Mission Land is exempt. Legally, many church schools, hospitals and religious communities are still required to apply for permission before all races can mix freely.

The churches don't know whether Smith intends making an issue of this.

"We can still plan ignoring the Land Tenure Act," a priest said, "and we just hope government will leave us alone.

"If they do, then the crisis is over. If they don't, we have made our position clear — we will fight, we will close down affected institutions. As the Catholic bishops said: The church, like its founder, is prepared to lose all in order to gain all."

Church Relief Agency Marks Fund Projects

NEW YORK (LC) — More than $170,000 has been earmarked by Lutheran World Relief directors for a variety of development projects, relief and reconstruction, and regular on-going programs.

A breakdown of the grants showed $70,000 for development projects in Asia, Latin America, and Africa; $50,000 for rehabilitation in flood-ravaged Rumania, and $50,000 for various programs in the Middle East and the Far East.

High among the development projects approved by the agency was a proposed program in India through which orphaned children will receive special education in the field of agriculture.

Forty students will be trained over a three-year period under the agency's $29,318 grant. Training will be provided at a school on a 42-acre farm located just outside the city of Kesavanputhoor.

The school is operated by Christian Mission Service, a German-based agency that has received on several occasions recognition and encouragement from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi for its work in behalf of orphans.

A second project in India, which was also approved by the board, will aid farmers in the village of Tandulwadi to complete a lift irrigation program that was begun about five years ago.

Under the $5,600 grant, channeled through the Department of World Service of the Lutheran World Federation to India's Christian Agency for Social Action, such items as valves, motors, switches, and pumps will be provided.

According to spokesmen for LWR, the completion of the irrigation project will result in more and better crops from 250 acres of land in an area normally classified as part of a drought region.

The project is expected to be completed in a three-month period.

Also approved was a $5,310 grant toward a vocational training program that will be offered to underprivileged children and unskilled adults in a community in Brazil known as Arroio Grande.

Located in an agricultural area near the Brazilian-Uruguayan frontier, the town and its surrounding countryside have a total population of about 18,000.

Under the grant, machinery, tools, and other equipment will be provided and training will be offered in such areas as carpentry, weaving, dress-making, and electrical installation. The vocational workshops will be conducted at a local elementary school.

Directors also authorized a $29,860 grant for the construction of a girls' hostel near a government high school in the Ethiopian town of Gondar.

EUROPEAN NUNS SEEK GREATER CHURCH ROLES

BRUSSELS (London Express Service) — Catholic nuns have joined women's rights organizations in demanding equality for the sexes — but this time in the church.

A motion was accepted by more than the two-thirds necessary majority, denouncing discrimination against women, at a recent conference of 200 Catholic theologians, including Belgium's Cardinal Leo Suenens and three bishops.

It was also the first major Catholic conference to have women participants. Several nuns were among the delegates who demanded equal rights for women.

"We must denounce," declared a resolution accepted by 143 votes to 21, "discrimination against women in the church, a discrimination which often exists also in the rest of society. The church should examine seriously the possible role of women in the ministries."

All-Night Peace Vigil Is Announced

An all-night vigil for reparation and prayer for peace will be held Oct. 2 and 3 at St. Peter Chanel Seminary Chapel on Grand Avenue in San Rafael.

It is under sponsorship of Our Lady of Fatima Crusade, Legion of Mary and Third Order of Mary of Marin County.

The service will begin with a mass in Latin at 8 p.m., Oct. 2, followed by the Benediction, enrollment in the Brown Scapular and 5 a.m. mass Oct. 3.

Services will consist of the rosary, stations of the cross, homilies and meditations under didection of Rev. George Kathrein. Assisting him will be Revs. John Hayes, Paul Flynn and Robert Logrip and Deacon Daniel Kugler.

The vigil is open to the general public.

BISHOP MEDEIROS

Unusual Devotion To God, Church

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

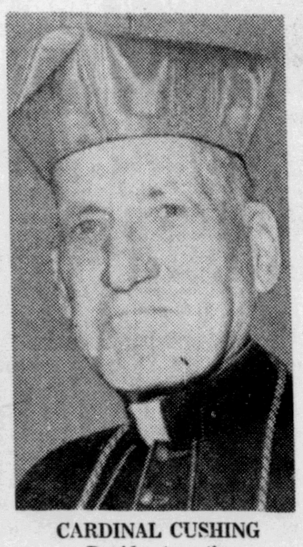
Bishop Humberto S. Medeiros, a man who swept floors as a teen-ager in a Massachusetts textile mill and later held nearly every office in the local diocese, is a man with unusual devotion to his God and his church.

Medeiros, a native of Arrifes, Sao Miguel in the Azores, was appointed recently to succeed Cardinal Richard J. Cushing as Archbishop of Boston and his farewell mesage to the people of his Brownsville, Tex. diocese reflected his feelings toward his church and its people.

"The divine providence, through the sacred apolostolic authority through Christ's vicar on earth, wills I leave you to shepard the people of God in the archdiocese of Boston," he said. "Trying to follow our divine saviour, I will seek the will of the father in order to obey him and please him. It is in this spirit that I accept the wish of the father to leave you.

"It is painful to leave those we love and I love the people of God of this diocese with all the power God has given me.

BISHOP MEDEIROS
New Boston prelate



CARDINAL CUSHING
Decides to retire

Frankly I do not deserve to be your shepard as I did not deserve to be the shepard of the justly renowned church of the apostolic," he said.

"I will leave enriched in spirit by you as my brothers. May it please God that my being with you has brought you and me closer to our Lord Jesus, the bishop and shepard of our souls," Medeiros said.

"This has been the first and last and only burning desire in my heart."

Thus, Medeiros ended a four-year term as Bishop of Brownwood and prepared to return to the state in which he spent most of his life.

The slight, black-haided priest who speaks Spanish, Protuguese and English fluently and with a Boston accent had never been further south than Richmond, Va., when given the South Texas post in 1966.

On arriving in the Southwest he disclaimed any allegiance to either the liberal or conservative wings of the church and said he wanted to concentrate on becoming a good priest.

"I hope to be a good priest," he said. "I do not belong to any category. I only want to do what the church ask of me. We will try to follow as best we can the teachings of the church gospel.

In his four years, Medeiros enlarged the diocese from 40 parishes to 58 and from 81 priests to 111. He was instrumental in building 39 churches, parish halls and other buildings and spent much of his time working with the Mexican-American poor of Texas' lower Rio Grande Valley.

He became a prominent member of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops and heads that group's allocations committee for Latin America. He became the state chaplain of the Texas Knights of Columbus and is a board member of the Texas Conference of Churches and the Texas Catholic Conference.

Medeiros, along with his mother and two brothers, arrived in the United States from the small island off the coast of Portugal in 1931, the middle of the Great Depression. He went to work sweeping floors in a Fall River, Mass. textile mill before entering high school several years lated.

He was graduated in 1937 and five years later received his masters in philosophy from Catholic University in Washington. That year he was ordained as a priest by Most Rev. James E. Cassidy at St. Mary's Cathedral in Fall River and began a long tenure of service in the diocese.

He received his PhD. in sacred theology from Catholic University in 1947, and did research for his disertation at North American College in Rome.

Until his appointment to Brownsville in 1966 Medeiros at different times was chancery secretary, assistant chancellor, vicar for religion, vice chancellor, domestic prelate and pastor of St. Michaels in the Fall River diocese.

Tomorrow To Be Christian Education Day

Tomorrow has been designated Christian Education Sunday at Grace Lutheran Church in Novato.

Special events will include a special film, attendance awards and new class placements during the 9:45 a.m. Sunday school hour. The two worship services, 8:30 and 11 a.m., will be focused on Christian education with Rev. Robert F. Fickenscher's sermon entitled "What Are You Learning."

Also during the services 20 new Sunday school and mid-week school teachers will be commissioned.

On Wednesday, a special worship service at 3 p.m. will mark the beginning of the mid-week school.

The program for the first through ninth graders will stress in-depth Christian education studies.

Also continuing this fall will be adult education classes on Wednesday mornings and Sunday morning Bible classes beginning Oct. 13 at 7:30 p.m.

Churches Select Discussion Topic

NEW YORK (LC) — "The Teaching Ministry of the Whole Church in Roman Catholic and Lutheran Perspectives" has been cosen as the subjectfor discussion when theologians of the two communions hold the 11th in their series of doctrinal dialogues from Oct. 30 to Nov. 1 in Chicago.

The meeting was originally planned for Minneapolis over the Reformation Day weekend, but no hotel rooms were available because of the football game scheduled between the universities of Minnesota and Iowa.

The subject selected for the coming session, it was announced, will be considered with special reference to "the authority of Scripture, Tradition, Creeds, Confessions, Bishops, Council, the Pope."

Moderator Will Speak

I-J Special Report

RICHMOND — Rev. William R. Laws Jr., moderator of the 182nd General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, USA, will be guest speaker Oct. 10 during the eighth stated meeting of the Synod of the Golden Gate.

Laws, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbus, Ind., will speak at the 10 a.m. meeting at the Richmond Memorial Auditorium.

Bucs Near Flag; Mets, Cubs Collapse

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports writer

Miracles just don't happen every year.

The Mets, who stood the baseball world on its ear a year ago when they went on to become world champions, were practically eliminated from the National League's East Division race when they lost to the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-3.

The loss dropped the Mets 3 1-2 games behind the Pirates with only six games remaining and Pittsburgh's magic number for clinching the division title is only three.

The Pirates won the first game of the crucial three-game series because they played heads-up defensively and were able to cut down two Met base runners in the final two innings to preserve their margin of victory.

FIRST GEM

The first defensive gem was turned in by leftfielder Willie Stargell, who is not known for his work in the field. After the Pirates had snapped a 2-2 tie on a run-scoring single by Matty Alou in the seventh inning, Stargell threw out the potential tying run at the plate in the eighth when he cut down Ken Boswell, who attempted to score on a single by Bud Harrelson.

"I had a good jump on the ball and it was hit hard," said Stargell. "They had to try for the run. I think if they had it to do again they'd do it again. I'd have to challenge it, too, especially with a runner as fast as Boswell, because I know the outfielder has to get in good position and has to make a good throw. If he slips a little or the throw is off a little he scores."

Another big play for the Pirates came in the ninth. Stargell had given the Pirates a 4-2 lead with a run-scoring single in the eighth, but Tommie Agee doubled home Ron Swoboda to start the ninth and there were visions of another Met miracle rally in the making.

After Agee's double, Joe Gibbon replaced Ray Lamb on the mound for the Pirates and walked Joe Foy on four pitches. Cleon Jones then lined out to Roberto Clemente in right and Art Shamsky struck out. As Shamsky swung and missed at the third strike, Agee attempted to steal third but was cut down by catcher Manny Sanguillen for the final out of the game.

GAMBLE PLAY

"He had no orders," Manager Gil Hodges said of Agee's decision to steal. "It was a gamble play."

The evening was not only a total loss for the Mets but also for the Chicago Cubs, who are tied with the Mets for second. The Cubs lost to the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-3, and also seem now to have little chance of overhauling the Pirates.

Tim McCarver and Don Money led to Chicago's downfall with back-to-back home runs in the sixth inning and Rick Wise protected the margin with a five-hitter. Tommy Davis drove in all of Chicago's runs with a homer and a double.

SHORT HAIRS CARRY REDWOOD TO VICTORY

Redwood High School's cross country team, with most of the veteran runners sitting out, still had more than enough firepower in a sophomore-dominated lineup to defeat San Rafael High School in a Marin Athletic League opening match.

The Giants defeated San Rafael's team, 23-32, on San Rafael's 3-mile course Thursday. Junior Rick Norton led the Redwood runners, winning with a clocking of 16 minutes, 25 seconds.

Most of Redwood's returning runners have quit the team over disagreement with the Larkspur school's grooming policies.

San Rafael won the frosh-soph meet, 20-37.

Duncan Star For Bulldogs

San Rafael's Bulldogs, held in check for three quarters by a game but outclassed Montgomery High School team, exploded for 20 points in the final period last night to post their second straight preseason football victory, 34-14 at Santa Rosa.

Quarterback Dirk Gansloser and flanker Scott Duncan combined on two tremendous touchdown bombs, one that tied the score in the first quarter, and the other that put San Rafael ahead to stay.

Between those touchdowns Duncan raced 93 yards from scrimmage for the second Bulldog score. His totals for the night were 101 yards gained running and 133 on pass receptions. Needless to say, he was brilliant.

Montgomery got on the scoreboard first via a 79 yard touchdown run by halfback Glen Stanfield. But San Rafael came back as Gansloser found Duncan with a 61 yard scoring pass, and John Morehouse kicked the extra point to give the Bulldogs the lead 7-6.

ALL TIED UP

The Vikings tied things up in the third period, after Duncan's sensational run. Quarterback Monte Moore hit Jack Graves with an 11 yard pass for the touchdown, and Moore ran over for the two-point conversion.

In the final quarter, San Rafael opened the flood gates, with picture-perfect Gansloser at the controls. His second touchdown pass to Duncan, good for 69 yards, broke the Viking's spirit. After that the Bulldogs poured it on, scoring on a one yard plunge by Craig Hecht and a four yard run by Mark Farrar.

Gansloser threw only nine times in the game, but he completed seven for an astounding total of 173 yards.

in last week's 40-0 win over Washington of San Francisco, Gansloser threw only once — for a touchdown.

Pirates Finally Defeat Vallejo

By DAVID EINSTEIN

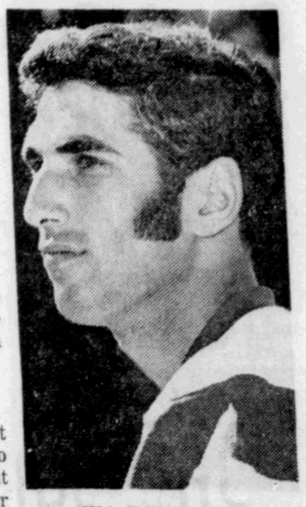
The Drake High School Pirates, winners of only one football game all last year, won their second straight preseason contest of 1970 last night as they defeated the Vallejo Apaches for the first time ever, 26-8 before a somber crowd of 2,500 at Vallejo.

The second chapter in the San Anselmo school's Cinderella story was much like the first, in which the Pirates overwhelmed Petaluma, 39-0 a week ago. Again it was halfback Jim Dominguez and quarterback Rick Mason who led the assault, and again the Drake line opened immense holes, through which Dominquez slashed for 179 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

Only an Apache touchdown in the last half-minute of play prevented Drake from registering a second consecutive shutout.

FIRST BLOOP

Mason drew blood in the first quarter when he dove for a two yard touchdown, and he made it 13-0 early in the second quarter with an 87-yard scoring pass to end John Billings.



JIM DOMINGUEZ
Drake's hero

Then Dominguez went to work. "I don't say I'm going inside or outside, I just run where there's daylight," the 180-pound senior said in explaining his second straight 100-plus yards-gained effort.

Dominguez' first touchdown came midway throught he second quarter, when he swept left end for 48 yards. At the end of the half he had 93 yards in eight carries.

The third period was scoreless, but the Pirates opened the final period with defensive back Rich Bozzio intercepting a pass on the Vallejo 22 yard line. Dominguez needed exactly one play to score. He broke off tackle through a grand-canyon size hole, and then veered down the left sideline to make the score 26-0.

IDENTICAL PLAYS

Ron Burris accounted for all Vallejo's points, scoring from three yards out, and then running an identical play for the two point conversion.

"The kids did a helluva job," Pirate coach Bob Franceschini said afterwards. "The line just opened up tremendous holes."

He commented on Dominguez, "He's really growing up out there. He's got more confidence, more poise. He's got great potential."

Mason hit on 6 of 12 passes for 145 yards, and was only dropped once behind the line. The Drake interior line, spearheaded by tackle Dave MacAusland, protected him like he was made out of crystal.

The Drake-Vallejo rivalry goes back to 1951, the year of the San Anselmo school opened. The first victory over the Apaches was a long time coming, which made it all the sweeter.

Petaluma Upsets Novato

Novato High School got there firstest but Petaluma High got the mostest last night as the Trojans of the North Bay League defeated the Hornets, of the Marin County Athletic League, 14-10 in their football skirmish at Petaluma.

Petaluma had to rally twice to its first victory of the seaon after trailing 7-0 and then 10-7. Victorious Coach Howard Cadenhead noted afterwards: "We are a young ball club that came to play football and finally made up for our mistakes."

For a time it looked as if the favored invaders from Novato would register their second win of the season when defensive end and captain Greg Straw recovered a blocked punt and ran it five yards to a touchdown. Kicker Bob Cooper made it 7-0.

PETALUMA SCORE

But the Hornets were jolted moments later when Petaluma quarterback Dan Hart and end Kevin Gillmore collaborated on a 90-yard touchdown pass, after which kicker Bob Vaz tied it up.

Novato again forged into the lead in the second period when Cooper kicked a field goal for a 10-7 halftime lead.

The Trojans, however, battled Novato on even terms through the third period and drove to their winning touchdown with five minuted left in the game. A 70-yard drive was climaxed by fullback Mike Swallow's one-yard plunge and Vaz' second place kick.

It was predominantly a defensive battle as Novato netted only 71 yards rushing and 87 passing to Petaluma's 64 rushing and 104 passing.

Gals Okay Berkeley Tennis

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Good news came to the Pacific Coast Open tennis tournament Friday from Houston when Billie Jean King and her band of rebellious women players said they would not boycott the tourney.

The development must be credited to San Francisco clothing manufacturer Alvin Duskin. Duskin announced Friday he would underwrite $7,600 of prize money for the women's portion of the tournament, bringing the total prize money to $11,000.

Miss King, Rosemary Casals, Nancy Richey and other top ranked tennis players boycotted the Pacific Southwest tourney in Los Angeles and walked out of the Virginia Slims Invitational at Houston earlier this week.

MONEY PROTEST

The women have been protesting the distribution of tournament prize money which habitually leaves women competitors with 10 per cent or less of the total purse.

The women had said they would not play in the Pacific Coast Open today through Oct. 4 until prize money was hiked from $3,400 to $11,000. Qualifying for the tournament began today in Berkeley.

"The loss of the world's outstanding women players to the Pacific Coast Open would have been a tragedy," Duskin said. "I've already got $1000 from one anonymous donor and I'm going to ask the girls I know to hit up their husbands and boyfriends for the other $6600."

NO GAIN

Duskin, an outspoken environmental critic, said he will make no personal gain by his financial contribution. It had been suspected that he was using his move as a publicity ploy for a new line of women's tennis clothing.

"Nothing to it, because I'm not bringing out a line of women's tennis clothing," Duskin said.

Miss Walsh In L.A. Net Finals

Unseeded Sharon Walsh of San Rafael was to meet top-seeded Leslie Hint of Australia today in the finals of the Pacific Southwest Tennis Championships at Los Angeles.

Miss Walsh overcame first set jitters to defeat Patricia Waldken of South Africa, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 yesterday in the semifinals while Miss Hunt was besting Cecilia Martinez of San Francisco, 6-4, 6-7, 6-0.

The 18-year-old San Rafael girl will be after her second major upset today. On Thursday she knocked off Helen Gourlay of Australia, the second seed.

In men's action, top-seeded Rod Laver, second seed John Newcome, Arthur Ashe of Los Angeles and Tom Gorman of Seattle all advanced to today's semifinals. The pairings are Laver vs. Ashe and Newcome vs. Gorman.

Redwood Gridders Lose

The Redwood Giants lost their second straight preseason football game yesterday, 15-7 to Encinal of Alameda, but in the process they may have found an offense.

Nearly 1,000 hometown fans in Larkspur had nothing to cheer about until late in the fourth quarter, when quarterback Bob Brown took the Giants 63 yards in seven plays, hitting fullback Andy Anixter with a 12-yard screen pass for a touchdown with a minute and three seconds left in the game.

The touchdown itself meant nothing to the final score, but it kept the Giants from being shutout for the second week in a row. Sacred Heart beat them in the season opener, 7-0.

It also showed that the Giants can throw the ball effectively. Brown passed six times during the scoring drive, completing three while the Jets were called for interference on two others.

THE CLINCHER

Encinal wrappd the game up in the third period, scoring twice after leading at halftime, 2-0 on the strength of a safety in the second quarter.

The Jets' hero both on offense and defense was halfback Eric Shelton, the game's leading rusher. He picked up 70 yards on 15 carries, but it was while on defense that he made the big play of the game to score the first touchdown.

Midway through the period, Shelton intercepted a pass thrown by sophomore quarterback Daryl Edralin and raced 72 yards untouched to score.

POISED YOUNGSTER

Edralin, who showed a lot of poise for a youngster seeing his first varsity action, played the entire third quarter and part of the fourth, hitting on three of nine passes for 50 yards. Brown connected eight times in 15 attempts for 91 yards.

But Edralin was also indirectly responsible for the Jets' second touchdown. Safety Rudy Brady intercepted one of his passes on the Redwood 42 yard line, and the Jets proceeded to march to the end zone in seven plays, scoring with no time on the clock when quarterback Bob Leach bulled over from three yards out.

Statistically, Redwood played the East Bay team even, gaining 197 total yards to Encinal's 196. The Giants had 141 yards passing, 56 on the ground, and the Jets gained 155 running and 41 through the air.

Makela Paces Marin Runners

Defending Camino Norte Conference champion Don Makela paced College of Marin's cross country team to victory over Laney College of Oakland and San Joaquin Delta College of Stockton yesterday in a non-league meet.

Makela, of Novato, ran the hilly 3.8-mile Marin course near Kent Woodlands in 23 minutes, 19.5 seconds.

Makela's first place finish helped Marin to a low score of 28 points, followed by Lanet with 47 and San Joaquin with 57.

Other Marin runners and the order in which they finished were Keith Krieger, third; Seamus O'Reilly, sixth; Steve Silvey, seventh, and Rob Williams, 11th.

Seals Lose Exhibition

SUDBURY, Ont. (UPI) — The St. Louis Blues, enjoying greater control of the puck, defeated the Bay Area Seals 3-2 Friday night in a National Hickey League exhibition.

LOSES BATTLE, BUT WINS WAR

Pittsburgh Pirates Manager Danny Murtaugh used a finger to try to get his point across, but was overruled by stubborn umpires during last night's vital game against the New York Mets at Pittsburgh. Umps ruled Pirate Willie Stargell (8) out on close play at second to touch off the beef. Pirates won anyway, 4-3, to move closer to the National League Eastern Division pennant.

Raiders Seeking Revenge

San Diego lost running backs Brad Hubbert and Gene Foster with injuries in a 16-14 defeat to Baltimore last week. Halfback Dick Post underwent surgery a week ago and also is out.

Jeff Queen, who started the year as a tight end, will team with veteran halfback Russ Smith as the Chargers' starting running backs. Recently acquired halfbacks Roland Moss and Dave Smith also could play.

Oakland, smarting from a defeat by Cincinnati last week, will count on the passing of Daryle Lamonica to Warren Wells and Fred Biletnikoff. The Raiders are still without injured middle linebacker Dan Connors, but Bill Budness was credited with 12 tackles as his replacement last week.

BRIGHT SPOT

The one bright spot for San Diego is the return to action of punter and place kicker Dennis Partee. The kicking game was a major factor in last week's loss to Baltimore. It is especially important against Oakland as rookie Alvin Wyatt returned a punt 72 yards for a touchdown for the Raiders last week and had another similar return called back because of a penalty.

Oakland relies primarily on its passing game, and San Diego's running attack is so depleted quarterback John Hadl probably will have to throw often.

Browns Rate Slim Picks Over 49ers

This year both the Cleveland Browns and San Francisco 49ers have blended youth, speed and experience into their defensive lines and have thus far been successful. Both won their opening tests against formidable opponents.

The Browns and 49ers collide Sunday at Kezar Stadium with the Ohio club rated two-point favorites on the strength of a 31-21 victory over the New York Jets Monday night. San Francisco downed Washington 26-17 last Sunday.

A rookie has succeeded in cracking the front four of both the Browns and 49ers and opposing quarterbacks probably will run plays at the new linemen all afternoon. But that might be a mistake.

MAT CHAMP

Jerry Sherk, a 253-pound NCAA wrestling champion from Oklahoma State, won a starting tackle berth with the Browns in his fourth pre-season game. He's proven to be a tough customer.

Sherk will team with six-year veteran Walter Johnson to block the middle and try to unseat San Francisco quarterback John Brodie before he lets go of his passes. On the Cleveland flanks are a pair of 250-pound veterans, Jack Gregory and Ron Snidow.

Cedrick Hardman, a 255-pounder from North Texas State, also won a starting job as a defensive end with the 49ers in his rookie season. He and 257-pound Tommy give San Francisco speed and muscle at the flanks while seasoned performers Charlie Kruger and Roland Lakes handle the bruising inside rushes.

FINE RECEIVERS

Fair Hooker, another rookie who hails from Arizona State, also has made the Browns starting lineup as a wide receiver. In Hooker, tight end Milt Morin and Flanker Gary Collins, Browns quarterback Bill Nelsen has three of the finest receivers in pro ball.

Leroy Kelly, as usual, will be back to torment the Prospectors. Speedy Bo Scott helps out with the running chores.

Sherk, Johnson, Gregory and Snidow will be aiming mainly for Brodie, the San Francisco veteran who completed 17 of 20 passes against the Redskins for one of the best performances of his career.

Prospector coach Dick Nolan says offensive tackle Cas Banaszek and rookie cornerback Bruce Taylor are nearly fully recovered from leg injuries and will see action against the Browns.

Australia's Yacht Protest Again Denied By Committee

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

NEWPORT, R.I. — The New York Yacht Club Race Committee early today rejected a second Australian bid to reopen a protest which had led to Gretel II's disqualification after beating Intrepid in the second race of the America's Cup yacht series.

The committee rejected the Australian appeal on the grounds there was no new evidence and the decision left Intrepid, the 12-meter yacht cup defender, with a 3-1 lead going into today's fifth race in the best-of-seven series. The Gretel II was disqualified Sunday for bumping the Intrepid at the starting line.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. Others voted into the hall, established in 1965, by the 1,300 participating swim coaches were: Clarie Galligan Finney, America's first Amateur Athletic Union national Women's champion; Olga Dorfner Schoenhut, the nation's first woman world record holder; Willy den Ouden' women's world record holder from Holland; Richard Hough, record-setter in the breaststroke at Princeton in the 1930's; Yale triple Olympic gold medalist Jimmy McLane; Princeton Diving coach and two-time Olympic gold medalist Bob Webster; France's water polo star, Henry Padou, Sr.; Walter Bathe of Germany, double Olympic breaststroke champion in 1912; and two coaches, the late Jack Cody and Sava. Sava.

The Cavill family was picked in the "outstanding contribution" category.

Blancas Has Hot Round In Tourney

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI)—Non-winners Harry Toscano and Bob Stanton enjoyed their day in the Georgia sun today as front-runners in the Green Island Open. But the shadow of ornushing Homero Blancas threatened to blot them out as the field teed off for the third round.

Toscano and Stanton, who finished 1-2 in the 1966 PGA qualifying school, had the same scores for the second straight day Friday and moved into a tie for the lead at the halfway point with three-under-par 136s. Each turned in a round of even par 34-38-70 over the Green Island course Friday.

Their scores were good enough for a one-stroke lead over Chris Blocker and two over Tom Shaw, Bunky Henry and Bob Greenwood. Then came Blancas, hot as the weather with a sizzling four-under-par 66 for a 139, stamping himself as the man to watch.

Meanwhile, two of the biggest names in the tournament — former U. S. Open champions Lee Trevino and Orville Moody —failed to make the cut. Trevino had a 75 and Moody a 76 for 148s—two shots too much.

Andrews, Ferrie Gain Finals In Senior Golf

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, (UPI) — Gene Andrews, of Whittier, who specializes in spectacular play, and Jim Ferrie, of Indian Wells, who does it quietly and almost unnoticed, meet today in the final of the 1970 U.S. Senior Amateur Golf Championship.

Both worked hard Friday to make it to the final. Andrews going 33 holes to beat Sam Maniaci of Blue Bell, Pa., 5 and 4, and Ernie Pieper of San Juan Bautista, Calif., 1 up on the first extra hole, while Ferrie disposed of Rodney Bliss of Des Moines, Iowa, 1 up, and Bob Fahy of Banning, Calif., 3 and 1.

Cub Protest Is Denied By Feeney

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—National League president Chub Feeney has not allowed a protest by the Chicago Cubs of their game Sept. 20 against the Montreal Expos.

The Cubs registered a protest after the following play:

With Montreal trailing 4-3 and at bat in the bottom of the fourth, Ron Fairly drove in two runners with a double down the rightfield line.

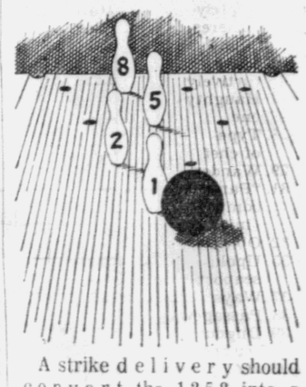
Manager Leo Durocher of Chicago claimed Interference should have been called on the play. He said the Expos' ball boy, stationed against the wall past the rightfield bullpen, kicked the baseball.

Feeney denied the protest Friday because of "lack of evidence that the interference was intentional or that the ball was kicked by the ball attendant."

Feeney continued in a telegram to Cubs general manager John Holland: "Therefore, any interference could be unintentional and the ball would be in play as ruled by the umpires."

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



A strike delivery should convert the 1-2-5-8 into a spare. The 5-pin usually is the most troublesome in this set-up. Consequently, a fairly good "pocket hit" is needed to bring it down along with the others.

A's Shoot For Second Place Loot

ANAHEIM (UPI)—Vida Blue, a 21-year-old fastballing rookie who pitched a no-hitter in his last start, can nail down second place for the Oakland A's tonight. Blue, 2-1, is scheduled to pitch against the California Angels' Rudy May, 6-13.

The A's virtually wrapped up the runner-up place in the American League West Friday night by beating the Angels 6-0 on the four-hit pitching of John "Blue Moon" Odom.

Three of Oakland's runs came on sacrifice flies as Clyde Wright, the California starter, was charged with his 12th loss against 21 victories.

For Odom, it was his ninth win in 16 decisions.

The A's got their first two runs in the fourth inning on only one hit. Joe Rudi opened the inning with a single and Wright walked the next two.

Wright hit Reggie Jackson to force in Rudi and Dave Duncan followed with a sacrifice fly to leftfield.

First Night Game

ELMIRA, N.Y. (UPI) —The first professional football game ever played at night was played here in 1902. The Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Kanaweola A. C. 39-0. Coach of the Athletics was Connie Mack and his star halfback was Rube Waddell, better known as an all-star baseball pitcher.

Padres Now Have Magic Number—1

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The magic number of the San Diego Padres has been reduced to one.

The Padres, in last place in the National League West, need one more victory to be assured of finishing the season with less than 100 defeats. San Diego, now with 95 losses, has five more games left this season.

Righthander Pat Dobson helped reduce the magic number by hurling an unusual nine-hitter in a 7-4 San Diego victory over the San Francisco Giants Friday night .

Dobson allowed nine hits in 7⅔ innings to gain his 13th victory against 15 losses. He turned in an unusual performance by allowing the Giants four homers, all of which came with the bases empty.

Willie McCovey Slammed a pair of homers to run his season's total to 38, while Ken Henderson smashed his 17th and George Foster belted his first in the major leagues.

Cal Commission Outlaws Champ

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —The California Athletic Commission Friday revoked the state boxing license of world lightweight champion Ismael Laguna for failing to fulfill a contract.

Chairman Bob Voigt also announced the commission revoked the license of Laguna's manager, Cain Young.

He said the action was based on the failure of Laguna and Young to honor a contract signed Dec. 26, 1969, with the Olympic Boxing Club of Los Angeles.

Both Laguna and Young have been under temporary suspension in California since last May 22.

Laguna won the title March 3 when he stopped Mando Ramos of Long Beach on cuts in nine rounds in Los Angeles.

Terra Linda Hosts Hogan '11' Tonight

The Terra Linda Trojans, down but not out of the Northern California high school football rankings, will try to get back on the road to prominence tonight when they take on the Hogan Spartans of Vallejo in an 8 o'clock pre-season game at San Rafael High School.

This will be the last game prior to the start of the Marin County Athletic League campaign next weekend.

The Trojans, rated No. 3 in a poll of Northern California coaches after beating Palo Alto, 31-7 in their season-opener two weeks ago, have fallen to 18th position as a result of their 21-7 loss to Riordan last Saturday night.

The defending MCAL champions have spent this week putting the pieces back together. Coach Don Lucas has nothing but praise for Riordan. "If they're not in the top five when the season's over, I'll be damned surprised," he said yesterday.

Lucas says the Spartans have "good size and good speed," but other than that little is known of the team.

The North Bay I league team will have one certain incentive — revenge. Terra Linda upset the highly favored Spartans last year, 25-14.

Lucas will take a less than healthy squad into the game. One player, guard Steve Cupples, is definitely out with a pulled groin muscle. Two others, running back John Scozzafava and tackle Scott Seefeldt, were injured during practice and are doubtful starters.

Ex-Bantamweight King Wins Kayo

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI)—Brazilian Eder Jofre, the former world bantamweight champion, knocked out Robert Wong of Mexico City Friday night at 52 seconds of the third round.

Wong, a native of Dallas, was knocked down twice in the second round, and a left hook to the chin ended the bout in the third round.

Syracuse Grid Tilt Picketed

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI)—Football fans moved through lines of pickets at the main gate to Archbold Stadium Saturday without incident for the Syracuse University home football opener against Kansas.

There had been calls for a boycott of the game as well as plans for picketing of the ticket gates by both whites and blacks upset over charges of racial discrimination in the schools athletic department.

Two policemen on horseback moved the pickets away from the ticket booths at the main gate. It was the first time in recent Syracuse police history that horses were pressed into service.

Dense Fog Halts Fifth Cup Race

NEWPORT, R. I. (UPI)—Dense fog along the Rhode Island coastline forced postponement of Saturday's fifth race in the America's Cup yacht competition until Monday after Intrepid, the U. S. defender, escaped serious damage in a towing accident.

Intrepid, leading Gretel II of Australia by 3-1 in the best-of-seven series and needing just one more victory to complete America's 21st defense of the coveted Cup, drifted onto rocks near Castle Hill Light in the East passage of Narragansett Bay when her towline from the tender parted while she was being taken out into Rhode

Judy Will Remember The Alamo

ALAMO, Calif. (UPI)—Slim Judy Rankin takes a two-stroke advantage into today's second round of the $25,000 Alamo Open ladies' golf tournament.

Mrs. Rankin completed the Round Hill Country Club course four under par Friday with a 33-36—69, two strokes better than three other LPGA competitors. Kathy Whitworth, Beth Stone and Gloria Ehret all fired 71s in the 80-degree weather.

Jan Ferraris, San Francisco women's amateur champ three times, also was under par with a 72.

A few of the tournament favorities had their troubles on the narrow but long Round Hill layout. Carol Mann shot a 76, Joan Carner a 77 and defending champion Donna Capone a 79.

Four-time tour winner Shirley Englehorn kept pace with Mrs. Rankin with a 33 on the front nine, only to soar to 41 on the backside for a score of 74. Miss Englehorn hurt her chances by stroking her tee shot out of bounds on the 10th hole.

Mrs. Rankin suffered only one bogey Friday when she shot into a trap on the 15th hole. Miss Whitworth, two over par on the front nine, poured in four birdies in the latter portion to pull into the second place deadlock. Miss Whitworth is the leading LPGA money winner.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Sept. 26, the 269th day of 1970 with 96 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

A thought for the day: Reinhold Niebuhr said, "Man's capacity for justice makes democracy possible, but man's inclination to injustice makes democracy necessary."

Two Are Convicted Of Burglary Try

A jury in Marin Superior Court has convicted Dennis Victor Chesley, 20, and Robert Sterling Evans, 22, of attempted burglary of a San Anselmo residence on June 10.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Municipal Court, who sat as a Superior Court judge for the trial, set sentencing Thursday for Oct. 15.
for Oct. 15.

Chesley and Evans, both of San Rafael, were arrested in the driveway of a house at 283 Crescent Road, where attempts had been made to enter.

Evans is also awaiting trial on a charge of burglarizing a San Rafael residence on June 27.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

In Bridge, Impatience Kills Many More Cats Than Curiosity

Everybody knows at least one bridge player who takes each trick at the very first opportunity. "Never win tomorrow the trick you can win today," he says with a sage look, but if you trust his sagacity you should have your own head examined. Simple impatience is the reason for his speed, and impatience kills more cats than curiosity.

KING LEAD

West led the king of hearts, continued with the jack, and then led the ace of hearts. South ruffed the third heart and led out the three top trumps. When the trumps broke badly, South began to run the diamonds.

When declarer led the second high diamond from the dummy, West found that he had the right to ruff, and he did so very joyfully. He led another heart, forcing out South's last trump. All the trumps were gone, but South still had a diamond, so he easily won the rest of the tricks.

SIMPLE SIGNAL

West should have defeated the contract by ruffing the third round of diamonds instead of the second round. Then a heart continuation would make South ruff, and South would eventually have to give up a club.

A simple signal would tell West exactly when to ruff. East is supposed to play high-low to show an even number of diamonds; but low-high (the normal order) if he has an odd number of diamonds. In this case, East would play the ten of diamonds at his first opportunity, and a lower diamond later.

The signal would make it easy for West to see that East started with four diamonds. West counts dummy's five diamonds and his own singleton, adds them to East's four diamonds and gets a total of 10 diamonds in those three hands. This means that South has the other three diamonds.

West should wait to ruff the trick that contains South's last diamond. In this way South gets no discards and will not be able to lead a diamond to dummy later.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - A K Q 10 9
♥ - 10 7
♦ 8 7 2
♣ - A K 10.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade.

Do not consider an opening bid of one no-trump, even though you have 16 points and balanced distribution. Your strength is concentrated in two suits, and your powerful major suit is likely to be a surer road to game than no-trump would be.

Hearing Set For Steven Samochin

A preliminary hearing has been set for Oct. 6 in Marin unicipal Court for Steven Gregory Samochim, 33, of San Rafael, who is accused of attempting to burglarize a San Rafael doctor's office on Sept. 7.

Samochin was arrested after a doctor who was working in his office on Labor Day said he recognized Samochim who, he said, was trying to break a glass door.

Highway Safety Bureau's Priorities May Be Faulty

The National Highway Safety bureau wants to see automobile accident fatalities and injuries reduced to the absolute minimum.

It has in its bureaucratic wisdom decided that the way to bring about such a reduction is to establish priorities for use of federal resources available for the effort.

All this of course appears highly laudable.

A note of caution is sounded at this point by Harry D. Holt, president of the American Automobile Association and former president of the California State Automobile Association. "The danger is," Holt warns, "that the top priority will get all the attention while those lower on the list will have to settle for little or no attention."

THERE ARE SIGNS that this would be tragic.

In accordance with its expressed intentions, the National Highway Safety Bureau has announced its priorities.

Safer designed highways is accorded second priority.

The safety habits of individual drivers is relegated to bottom on the list.

Holt questions whether this order of priorities is proper.

"IT IS HIGHLY unlikely," observes the AAA president, "that we are ever going to build a car which will save the lives of its occupants when it crashes into a concrete abutment at 70 miles per hour."

Nor can the design of a highway make it impossible for a drunken driver to cause fatal collisions, he adds.

Holt hits the nail on the head with his contention that "in the complex interaction between the vehicle, the driver and the road — the driver is the single most important factor."

Latest statistics from the National Safety Council show that more than 80 per cent of all fatal accidents and more than 90 per cent of ALL accidents are the result of improper driving. The council has found that alcohol is a factor in about 50 per cent of all fatal accidents. Speed is a factor in 30 per cent.

"It is the driver not the vehicle or the road — who consumes alcohol and drives at excessive speed," Holt points out.

COULD IT BE that the National Highway Safety Bureau put the driver's safety habits at the bottom of the priority list because they are the most difficult to deal with?

California's standards for driver licensing and the state's program for retesting previously licensed drivers are among the most avanced in the nation. But they will have to be improved — made more restrictive — if we are to have safer highways.

Our provision for driver education in our schools is among the most comprehensive in the nation. But it will have to be made even better if our highways are to be made appreciably safer.

Classes for violators — such as those conducted in Marin — need to be extended and expanded. Phoenix, Ariz., has developed rehabilitation and education courses for drunken driving offenders. Courses of this nature could well be established nation-wide.

THE NATIONAL TRAFFIC Safety Bureau would do well to hearken to Harry Holt's conclusion:

"If we don't give more attention to the human element, other traffic safety efforts will be for naught."

If today's traffic safety efforts are for naught, the future is indeed gruesome to contemplate.

A Child's Thanks To An Honest Man

It was the 17 of Aug. My family was going camping. We had stopped at Mayfair and when we were putting food in our camper my sister Bridget Lynch left her purse on the bumper and forgot it. A man named Jefferson Stewart found it in the street and brought it to the police department. I want to thank him for what he did. There are not too many people like that left in the world. So thank you Jefferson Stewart.

We Should Think Before Discarding

Once again your paper held sage advice for the people of Marin. Last night's (Sept. 21) editorial on Pepsi-Cola's "deposit and return" campaign was hopefully heeded by all your readers.

We should simply train ourselves to think, "What will result if I throw this away instead of saving it to be recycled? Will it affect anyone in the future? Do I have the right to destroy our environment further?" If we can think of these things, I'm sure that more people will be turning in their old bottles (we did that not so very long ago, didn't we?) and perhaps even begin saving their cans (this was done during World War II, wasn't it?).

Once we all do these things, we can be assured of a happier, healthier citizenry in our future.

Civil Rights Law Not Adequate

You have carried your argument — whatever it may be —beyond any rational limits. Equating the passage of an equal rights amendment with the loss of all sexual distinctions reaches well past the realm of thoughtful evaluation into over-emotional propagandism.

The 19th Amendment (which took feminists more than 50 years to win) granting women the vote, and the 1964 Civil Rights Act (to which sex was added only as a ploy to impede its passage) have not been enough to insure equal treatment for women under the law. An amendment to the Constitution will help fill in the gaps.

Regardless of initial intent, special protective laws act as a deterrent to the hiring and promotion of women workers. These laws also tend to limit earning ability. They need revision. The proposed amendment could help effect this needed change.

Probably no one believes this proposed amendment will automatically solve all our cultural inequities. Private prejudice has been fostered and supported by public institutions over the centuries. If a legal public pronouncement for sex equality is made, private practices may soon follow. A similar argument resounded through the 1960's in regard to civil rights for the Black American. "You cannot legislate morality" was the cliche. Yet, civil rights legislation has proven to be a powerful weapon against unreasoned prejudice. Your position against the "women's" amendment is therefore suspect . . .

Why Hire An Attorney?

We are left wondering just what Marin County sheriff's deputies hope to gain by hiring an attorney to push their demands for higher pay.

The deputies were incensed by what they felt was discriminatory treatment when they were offered only the same 5 per cent raise given most other county employees. They pointed out that their pay is below that of sheriff's officers in other Bay Area counties, and below that of police in most cities. So far, so good.

They are seeking a 12½ per cent pay hike. The top scale for deputy sheriff (sergeants and lieutenants receive more) is now $892 per month. A 5 per cent raise puts this at $936.60. A 12½ per cent hike would make it $1,003.50 — right up at the top when compared with surrounding jurisdictions.

The difference is $66.90 per month. At that rate, it would require the total increases of 82 man-months to pay the $5,500 retainer reportedly given the attorney.

That doesn't sound like too great a bargain, even if the attorney were somehow able to win the full raise.

But we doubt that he can do it. In fact, we doubt that he can come as close as the deputies themselves could have come without him.

This business of hiring attorneys to push wage demands is a strange one. There is nothing in a lawyer's training that especially qualifies him for it, except that presumably he is a good arguer. And the board controlling the pay is less likely to listen to an outside attorney than it is to listen to its own employees.

San Rafael firemen found that out when they hired an attorney in their wage dispute with the city.

Twin Raccoons

Raccoons sometimes have quintuplets, but we are pleased to have twins at our house. Well, not really at the house, but in our backyard almost every night.

They come with their mother to eat at a special raccoon feeding table, built five feet off the ground to discourage skunks. The twins are about half the size of their mother and are active, inquisitive and plump in the manner of baby bears. They are fascinated by their own shadows cast by our floodlight. And they peer over the edge of the table to see what is underneath.

Normally, raccoons spend the daylight hours asleep in the trees, so they are no strangers to climbing. Even the twins shinny up and down the four-by-four redwood posts with ease.

While they may not be "our twins" they are our raccoons' twins, and we share an extended pride of parenthood. Anyway, we'll bet our raccoons are smarter than your raccoons.

Bouquets—And No Brickbats

BOUQUET to the U.S. Department of the Interior for its "Johnny Horizon Countryside Cleanup" announced for next month at Samuel P. Taylor State Park. The park needs it.

BOUQUET to Marin County supervisors for approving metal detectors and walkie-talkie radios to increase security at the Hall of Justice.

BOUQUET to the City of Petaluma for going ahead with underground utility lines.

BOUQUET to Donald R. Thieler and the Miwok Archeology Reserve of Marin for efforts to preserve an Indian mound in Marinwood.

LINES ON LIVING

Man Asks, 'Who Am I?' Each Must Be Himself

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

When God blurted out to Adam in the garden, "Where art thou man?" the challenge was not in the physical sense of placing the fugitive man. It was an imperative of spiritual identity. "Where are you," thunders the Voice in the perpetually divine echo, seeking out man. Where do you stand and on what grounds do you fall?

The Voice emanating from the garden his enormous power. It ennobles and fulfills, haunts and bedevils. It is the true mark of distinction of man to ponder "Who am I?"

"You and I," writes W. Macneile Dixon, "possess a supreme talent denied to the universe. We are awake as nothing else in creation is awake. The most enigmatical, indescribable, undeniable attribute of the self is its awareness."

MAN CARES. Man senses. man wants to know. All his life he struggles to know — above all—himself. It's a deadly serious game, in which too many lose.

Who am I? What is the real I residing in me? How much of that real identity has emerged to permit me to live up to my fullest expectations and potential of myself? Extreme self-estrangement can be the cruelest unreality and insanity a person can impose upon himself.

WE CANNOT go around pretending what we are not, that which we are not meant to be. As we do not live someone else's life, we must not imitate some one else's personality and soul. But, alas, many are playing their deadly little games, daily, trying to outguess themselves by pinning on their back other people's identity.

Mass media, mass fashion, mass hysteria, are in the way of the conscious soul, assaulting rootage in a personal identity. Image is the new god of Aquarius modernity; fashion is worshipped with a passion.

People play deadly games. And when they play them long enough they become ritual, worship. And when they worship strange images, when they imitate other lives, they commit idolatry — they lose themselves and in the process banish God from their midst.

Headlessness Pervades Capital In Fight Over Import Quotas

WASHINGTON — The headless horseman, as he rampaged up and down Washington Irving's tight little preserve in the Hudson River Valley, sent ripples of dismay among the simple people of that simple time. There may be no horseman but a dismaying headlessness pervades this capital.

Nowhere is it more apparent than in the backing and filling between Congress and the executive over the trade bill. That bill, as reported out of the House Ways and Means Committee, imposed quota restrictions on imports of shoes and textiles, reinforced the system of oil quotas, and gave the president authority to use the quota system on other goods coming into the country when imports reach a certain level.

While indicating that he favors restrictions on textiles, the President has said he would veto a bill fixing additional quotas. The concession on textiles was laid down even before Mr. Nixon was nominated as part of the southern strategy. As forces within the administration pull in opposite directions, doubt has been cast on the President's resolve to veto the bill if it finally passes both houses with additional quotas intact.

PRESIDENT NIXON'S congressional aids have failed to give a sense of direction to what the White House wants. This leaves only one element knowing exactly what it wants — the powerful and persistent lobbyists for the commercial interests that would benefit by the quota system.

Various ways to kill the bill are still being worked at. Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri believes that in the Senate or the House it can be hung with so many amendments that a veto will be inevitable. A delaying tactic would keep it from passage before adjournment on Oct. 15.

But on the other side of the fence the protectionist backers are working on strategy to slip it around the hurdles of regular procedure. Sen. Ernest F.Hollings of South Carolina gave advance notice that he will try to tie the trade bill as an amendment either to the president's welfare plan (if that ever gets up for passage) or to the bill increasing social security benefits. Tacked onto the latter, with all that it means for millions of Americans, a veto would come hard.

THE AMERICAN public seems harldy aware of the long reach of the quota measure. That is not true in the rest of the world. The profound concern in western Europe is that the United States is going protectionist again, with a trade war at the end of the road.

The parallel is striking with 1930 when Congress pushed through the Smoot-Hawley tariff despite the warning of a thousand leading economists who saw that a protectionist wall could only deepen the growing worldwide depression with incalculable political consequences.

TRADE IS FAR from being the only area where leadership and direction have been sadly lacking. Again and again, between the fumbling in Congress and the failure of guidance from the executive, the rule is drift. Rarely, as in putting over the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile, are forces concentrated to achieve the White House aim.

In black moments it must seem to those trying to keep the train on the tracks that multiple, overlapping crises are beyond the reach of government. Leaderlessness — pale horse, headless rider — is an affliction the times can ill afford.

Can John And Martha Find Happiness? Tune In Next Week

WASHINGTON — Washington has become the setting for several new television programs. "The Bold Ones," starring Hal Holbrook, features a U.S. senator dealing with the problems of legislating for the country. "Nancy" is about a President's daughter who lives in the White House and is in love with a veterinarian.

Another one in the planning stage and written by a Hollywood friend of mine is titled "John and Martha," the story of a simple attorney general of the United States named John and his simple fun-loving wife, Martha.

My friend said in "John and Martha" he hopes to answer the question of whether a man and woman who hate students, professors, educators and Sen. J. William Fulbright can find happiness in Washington.

"WE'RE WORKING on the pilot now," my friend said. "It's really a lot of laughs. We open with the attorney general, John, attending his fourth cocktail party of the evening. He's talking to a woman and tells her professors are 'stupid bastards' who are ruining the educational institutions. He calls Henry Kissinger, the President's assistant, an 'egocentric maniac' who likes to have his picture taken with Jill St. John, and he blames the Democrats for all the woes in the country.

"Well, what John doesn't know is that the woman he's talking to works for Women's Wear Daily and everything he's told her is printed in the paper. John reads it in bed the next morning with an ice bag on his head.

"You can imagine the flap," my friend said, chuckling on the phone.

"The first thing John decides to do is deny he spoke to the reporter. But Martha has a better idea. While John is putting more ice in his ice bag, Martha sneaks to the upstairs bathroom of their Watergate apartment duplex and telephones a United Press reporter and tells her the Women's Wear Daily story is ridiculous."

I started to chuckle myself.

"NOW HERE is where it really gets funny. After denying what John said, Martha makes matters worse by saying the academic society responsible for all the troubles in the country, and is destroying the United States. She tells the reporter that professors make her sick to her stomach, and they're a bunch of sidewalk diplomats and they don't have any right to say anything."

My friend was roaring with laughter.

"It's pretty funny so far," I admitted.

My friend continued. "In the next scene Martha has the ice bag on her head and she's reading what she told the United Press. John doesn't know what to do, so he sneaks up into the bathroom of Watergate and he calls his office and tells them to deny everything."

But while John is on the telephone in the bathroom, Martha starts calling other reporters confirming what she said.

"The next day John has the ice bag on his head and he reads all the things Martha has added to the story.

"Here's where the thing really takes off," my friend said. "Guess who comes to visit John while he's in bed?"

"JOHN KENNETH Galbraith?" I asked.

"No, stupid. Henry Kissinger and Jill St. John! They announce that, thanks to John, they're going to get married. Martha gets so excited when she hears the news that she rushes upstairs to her bathroom and calls the Associated Press."

"That's great," I said truthfully. "But what are you going to do for the next episode?"

"I don't know yet," my friend said. "But John and Martha will think of something."

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Sept. 26, 1960

Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Sen. John F. Kennedy, candidates for President, confronted each other in a television debate.

20 YEARS AGO

AUSSIES IN VIETNAM

Equal Expertise: Fight And Pacify

By BARNEY SEIBERT

The 5,000-man Australian task force, including a battalion size element of New Zealanders, is the only allied unit in the Indochina war with tactics markedly different from those used by Americans, South Vietnamese, South Koreans and Thais.

The South Vietnamese, Koreans and Thais all were trained and advised by Americans. So were the Laotians. Even the Cambodians are learning the American counter insurgency tactics from the South Vietnamese.

But the Australians have needed no advice from Americans in scouring the jungles for the Viet Cong in Phuoc Tuy Province, a lightly populated area of jungled forests and mountains along the South China Sea 50 miles southeast of Saigon.

Japanese infantrymen, who were experts in the craft of jungle warfare, told American captors at the end of World War II that the Australians were the real jungle experts on the Allied side. "Americans are not jungle fighters," one prisoner of war remarked. "They simply remove the jungle."

The Australian expertese in jungle war was forged in expeditions to maintain order in New Guinea, polished in the Australian army's jungle warfare school, and honed in 12 years of campaigning against the Communists in Malaysia.

The Aussies are the only U.S. allies in Vietnam who brought along most of their own equipment and who pay their own way.

In addition to the 5,000-man task force there are another 3,000 Australian fighting men in Vietnam—airmen, sailors and military advisors working with South Vietnamese units. About 50 per cent of the Australians are conscripts.

Because of their jungle warfare expertese, the Australians are less oriented toward air mobility in the Indochina conflict.

One of the first things Americans notice at Nui Dat is the absence of helicopters—the Aussies have only about half as many as a conventional U.S. infantry unit of equivalent size and about one-fourth of the total assigned to an American air mobile division.

Another major difference in the Australian concept is the absence of Vietnamese civilian workers at the base. "We do not have a security problem," one officer said.

Other differences:

The Australians live in tents rather than "hooches," call their infantrymen "crunchies" rather than "grunts," maintain their vehicles and equipment almost as well as the Koreans—the most spit and polish soldiers in Vietnam—leave the trees standing to provide shade when they build a base camp rather than removing the vegetation to minimize the infiltration danger.

The Australians buy their artillery pieces and ammunition from the United States —"in the quantities in which you make it we can buy it cheaper than we could make it ourselves." They also buy machineguns, grenade launchers, armored personnel carriers and some web equipment.

Their tanks are British Centurions. Their rifles are the Belgian NATO weapon, which uses the same cartridge as the M.S. M16; the Aussies say it has better range and is less susceptible to jamming than the M16. Their Jeeps and weapons carriers are various modifications of Australian-built Land Rovers and their trucks are built by the Australian subsidiary of International Harvester Corp. The trucks do not have the familiar dual rear wheels of U.S. Army vehicles.

The elite Australian unit in Vietnam is the Special Air Service Squadron, highly trained volunteers who are paratrooper qualified. In four years of operations in South Vietnam's Phuoc Tuy Province, the Australians have killed 2,840 Viet Cong and driven the only two main force Viet Cong battalions, D445 and D440, from the province.

Intelligence estimates show about 800 Viet Cong guerrillas remain in the province and the Communist infrastructure has been reduced 50 per cent to 1,500 persons. During the 1968 Tet offensive there were an estimated 5,000 Viet Cong soldiers in the province, supported by an infrastructure of 3,000 persons. — And the Australians in Vietnam know more than just how to fight.

"Take a look at the Aussies' pacification program," a civilian official of the U.S. Mission in Vietnam advised a UPI reporter. "It's one of the most effective in the country."

Lt. Col. Keith P. Outridge, 43, of Canberra, commander of the 1st Australian Civil Affairs Unit, said: "We only try to do things as the Vietnamese see it and wish it done, and try to do something to stimulate their development as we see it and hope they see it the same as we do."

The "Australian Province" — Phuoc Tuy —is a 400-square-mile area of mountains, jungle, forests and coastal swamps. Its 105,000 residents are poor and the province has never been self sufficient in food. Before war disrupted its economy, its people made their livelihood by working on the large rubber plantations, lumber mills, salt drying ponds and in the resort hotels along the beaches.

The Australian pacification program is similar to but somewhat smaller in scope than American efforts in other provinces and there is some U.S. pacification activity by the American Civil Operations Rural Development Support (CORDS) program in the province. But most of the effort is Australian.

The Australians, who learned to tackle water resource problems the hard way in the arid areas of their own country, place somewhat more stress on water development than do Americans and somewhat less on agriculture. Otherwise the programs are similar—road and public works building, medical clinics, education.

The principal difference is the administration. Pacification is a civilian responsibility among the Americans, a military responsibility among the Australians.

Col. Outridge sees both advantages and disadvantages in a militarily administered pacification program.

On the plus side, he said, is that fact that "most authority in a country at war is military and there is an empathy between military men; we have closer access to military resources to carry out the programs."

Disadvantages, he finds, are "a lack of expertese in specific fields and lack of continuity in projects" due to the one-year military rotation.

However, he feels that a military pacification program may get to the areas where it is needed most sooner than a civilian program because the soldier is less likely to be kept at a distance by absence of physical security.

"We try to work with the soft moccasin instead of the hob nail boot," Outridge said. "We try to get the Vietnamese into the program as soon as we can. We insist on their input. They must initiate the project, it must benefit the government, and they must help carry it out."

About 22 per cent of Phuoc Tuy Province's population are fishermen, 35 per cent farmers. To stimulate agriculture, the Australians have introduced breeding stock and model farm methods for chicken and hog raising operations.

"We go up and down the highway and persuade a farmer here and there to try it out. After that it spreads from neighbor to neighbor," Outridge said, and added:

"I think we are creating an environment in which the people can win themselves."

This Week In The World

TRIP SCHEDULED — This map spots the four countries — Spain, Italy, England and Yugoslavia — that will be visited by President Nixon during his eight-day European trip, beginning tomorrow. (UPI Telephoto)

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Jordanian civil war flared and cooled this week.

Amman was quieter toward the end of the week than at any time of the war as the Palestinian guerrillas called for a cease-fire in their fight with the Jordanian forces. But about 60 refugees, half of them American, who were evacuated to Beirut reported mortar fire around the airport as they took off.

Syria got into the war, Israel was on full alert and some U.S. military units were alerted. The White House, however, said President Nixon had not made a decision to intervene. The U.S. alert was relaxed late in the week.

Syrian armored units were reported on the Palestinians' side in northern Jordan. The guerrillas appeared to have controlled most major cities of northern Jordan, except Amman.

Israel Deputy Premier Yigal Allon warned Jordan's King Hussein against any deal with the guerrillas allowing them to operate against Israel along the Jordanian River cease-fire line.

Prime Minister Golda Meir of Israel ended her tour of the United States saying she felt American aid to her country would be increased.

On Wall Street, prices fell early in the week because of the gloomy news from the Mideast and in spite of a cut by banks in the prime interest rate. But it rebounded as the news got better, including a jump of 4.93 in the Dow Jones Industrial average as 21.34 million shares were traded Thursday — the second most active day in the history of the New York Stock Exchange.

In other news of the week:

The Eastern Seaboard suffered a power crisis with local companies unable to produce enough electricity. Voltage was cut, selective blackouts were imposed and power was imported from the Midwest.

The United Auto Workers and General Motors got together for the first time since the strike started. UAW President Leonard Woodcock predicted "a hell of a long strike."

Joseph W. White went to his desk in the state Labor Department in Albany, N.Y., unwrapped a rifle he had brought in and shot and killed four female secretaries and himself.

Three adventurers who set out Sunday from Long Island on what was to have been the first balloon trip to Europe disappeared Monday south of Newfoundland.

Two American officials flew to Cuba and returned with Robert Iabadia — the first accused hijacker turned over by Cuba.

The Soviet Union's unmanned Luna 16 landed in Russia after returning from a moon landing with a load of lunar rocks. President Nixon asked Congress to allow the FBI to act in cases of campus bombing or arson.

Soledad's Violence Felt Beyond Walls

By WILEY MALONEY

SOLEDAD (UPI) — Soledad is a Spanish word, meaning solitude, loneliness, homesickness, seclusion — a lonely place such as a desert.

Soledad also is the name of a California state correctional facility — a prison.

Here in a lettuce-growing valley south of San Francisco Soledad prison has been a place of violence and death with shock waves that carried beyond the walls and into a courtroom at the Marin County Hall of Justice where Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley was kidnapped. In the shoot-out that followed the kidnapping, Haley and three other persons were killed.

The tragedy in Marin apparently was rooted in the Soledad prison. It consists of two main facilities, "Central" and "North". Both are concrete, multi-storied cell blocks.

The entrance to the prison is on Highway 101, a main road from San Francisco to Los Angeles. It is beautifully landscaped. Trustees see to that. The prison area covers 966 acres, most of it given to growing vegetables (tilled by trustees) and raising animals to provide food for the inmates.

For nearly a decade the prison has had its problems. The warden denies these are racial. The population currently is 2,570 inmates, 30 per cent of whom are Mexican American and 20 per cent black. There are 275 "correctional officers," or guards.

For the last 10 years there have been stabbings, riots and attempted escapes. In January the situation grew worse. It began when a newly constructed exercise yard was opened. A group, containing all black inmates except for two men, was admitted. A brawl broke out. Tower guard O.C. Miller blew a whistle. Then he began shooting. Three black men were killed and one guard was wounded.

The black inmates, apparently, did not forget.

It was only three days later that a novice guard, John Vincent Mills, 26, was beaten, dragged up three flights of concrete steps and tossed headfirst to his death. Beside him was a note.

"One down, two to go," it read.

Mills had no connection with the shooting by guard Miller.

Shortly afterward two more guards were seized, but were freed by tear gas attacks made by other guards. Their captors had demanded access to locked cells of other inmates.

Then, in late July, William C. Shull, 40, was found with 42 stab wounds in his body and a metal file — prisoner made — stuck in his body.

In the interim, the Monterey County Grand Jury had returned murder indictments for the murder of Mills. Those held were John Clutchette, 24, Fletta Drimgo, 23, and George L. Jackson, 28. They became the "Soledad Brothers." All were black.

During the time the Monterey County grand jury deliberated another 22-year-old "white incorrigible" was found mortally stabbed at Soledad. It was the sixth violent death in Soledad in seven months, but not attributed to racial unrest.

The deaths resulted in multiple investigations. One of the most notable was that by five black California legislators. They charged Soledad prison authorities with cruel and inhumane treatment. A 26-page report called for "independent, thorough and immediate" investigation.

The report charged that food was often contaminated, inmates were not informed on why they were being placed in maximum security cells and that men were being placed in the 6-by-10 -foot maximum security cells to remain for 23 1-2 hours a day.

Supt. Cletus B. Fitzharria then called for professional investigation.

"I don't think it's so bad here," he said.

The resulting investigations gave him a "clean bill of health."

The three "Soledad Brothers" were transferred into the jurisdiction of San Francisco, then Marin County Courts. A "Soledad Brothers" headquarters was set up in San Francisco for defense of the men accused of slaying Mills.

As a result, authorities believe, four other men have gone to their deaths. These were killed in the Marin County shootout.

They were San Quentin Prison convicts James McClain, 37, William A. Christmas, 27, and the young brother of George L. Jackson, a 17-year-old who was said to have been acting as a bodyguard for former philosophy instructor Angela Davis of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Authorities have said the firearms young Jackson carried into the Marin courtroom on Aug. 7 were purchased by Miss Davis.

Miss Davis has been charged with murder and is sought on a federal warrant.

POINTS TO SCENE OF VIOLENCE — Deputy Supt. William Black points to the recreation yard at the Soledad Correctional Facility where three prisoners were shot to death Jan. 13 by a tower guard as they beat two inmates. This incident culminated in the kidnapping of Marin Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley and others at the Hall of Justice on Aug. 7 which resulted in the death of Haley and three others. Marin, Sonoma's Prop. 18 Benefits

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Marin and Sonoma counties would be able to issue some $22 million in bonds to help build a transit system with gas tax revenue under a proposition on the November general election ballot.

This was the prediction yesterday by the author of the controversial measure, Stn. James R. Mills, D-San Diego.

His measure, Proposition 18, would allow counties to use up to 25 per cent of their share of gas tax revenue for transit. Gas tax revenue now is reserved exclusively for highway purposes, a restriction the highway lobby has pledged to maintain by working to defeat the proposition.

Mills said that Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post had figured that $85,623,000 would be available statewide from gas taxes, from which one-quarter could be used for transit if the proposition passes the needed majority vote.

County use of such revenues for transit, in turn, would require approval by a majority of the county's voters.

Marin would get $873,000 a year under current revenue levels, and Sonoma would get $942,000, Mills reported.

These revenues, he said, would finance $10,476,000 in transit bonds in Marin and $11,304,000 in bonds in Sonoma.

Mills noted that his figures were based on his assumption that the revenue would be paid to counties on a formula based on the county's motor vehicle registration as a percentage of the total registration in the state.

Marin has 1.02 per cent, and Sonoma has 1.1 per cent, he said.

The nine Bay Area counties would get $19,077,000.

Mills said he based his bond figures on information from "people in the field of governmental bonds" that bonds 12 to 13 times the annual income could be floated.

Mills also pointed to pending federal legislation that would provide matching funds for transit on a two-to-one basis, thus Bay Area transit systems conceivably could greatly increase the funds available for transit, with Marin funding $31.5 million in bonds, Mills figured.

Even this amount, however, "would not be enough to do more than pay for the costs of construction of a line within Marin county itself," Mills said. The problem of financing a crossing to San Francisco "would remain before the Golden Gate Bridge District board," he said.

Bolinas Road Site Is Picked Out

The Fairfax Planning Commission has recommended to the city council that the controversial proposed public safety building be placed on Bolinas Road across from the city park, according to secretary Ernestine Healy.

Second and third priority sites named by the commission Thursday were the Central School grounds — if the Fairfax School District approves — and the area of the present police parking lot on Park Avenue, she said.

The Bolinas Road site was proposed to the council by the site selection committee of the planning commission, last year but met with mixed reactions and counter-suggestions. A 1968 bond issue of $550,000 for the building was defeated by a 2-1 margin.

The present estimate of the cost of the proposed new home of the police and fire departments is $400,000, Mrs. Healy said.

She said the planning commission discussed size of the lots, price, location and ease of access before re-recommending the Bolinas Road property.

The commission also set sessions for Oct. 15 and 22 to discuss the proposed new zoning, ordinance.

Salaries Corrected In County Clerk's Payroll Report

The salaries of seven persons in the Marin County clerk's office were listed incorrectly in Tuesday's Independent-Journal.

The correct salaries are: Lorraine Healey, intermediate typeist, $6,276; Bonnie McAffee, intermediate typist, $6,276; Janet Wilkinson, intermediate typist, $5,976; Lynn DeCota, legal clerk, $7,428; Marjorie Gade, legal clerk, $7,800; Hiroko Uratsu, legal clerk, $7,428, and Mayday Card, superior court clerk II, $10,188.

The total salaries for the county clerk's office is $261,401, not $263,401 as reported.

Woman, 22, On Probation In Drug Case

A young woman arrested in November 1968 raid on a San Anselmo home equipped for mass production of LSD was fined $100 yesterday for being in a place where drugs were used.

Judge E. Warren McGuire also placed Mary Theresa Rosenbaum, 22, on probation for two years.

Miss Rosenbaum pleaded guilty to the reduced misdemeanor charge earlier this month after previously being accused of a felony count of possessing LSD.

A co-defendant, Andrew Samuel Perri, 21, last month was sent to state prison by Judge Samuel W. Gardiner after a jury had found Perry guilty of arranging the sale of 2,000 LSD tablets.

Another man tried with Perry, Hamilton Bassett Henry, 23, who was found guilty of possessing LSD and marijuana for sale has jumped $20,000 bail and has not yet been sentenced. He reportedly has been located in Amsterdam, Holland, by a bail bondsman, however.

LSD and marijuana valued at $35,000 were seized in the raid on the home at 156 Crescent Road, which drug agents said was linked to heavy drug traffic in San Francsico's Haighty-Ashbury district.

Health Officials Looking For Dog Who Bit Woman

Marin County health officials said yesterday they are searching for a small gray and white terrier which bit a 70-year-old Kentfield woman last Saturday as she was walking through the College of Marin campus.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, said the dog bit the woman on the leg between 1 and 1:30 p.m. as she was strolling past the art building.

Dr. Albrecht said the dog was described as lively with a white face, speckled body and floppy ears.

Persons owning or knowing of such a dog in the College of Marin area should call the county health office or the humane society.

Dr. Albrecht said the county has not had a case of dog rabies since 1937, but unless the dog is found and examined, the woman will have to undergo painful treatment.

Marinite Is Awarded Child Study Grant

Dr. Keith Beery, working through The Child Center in Kentfield, has been awarded a $75,000 federal grant to develop a method of spreading knowledge on teaching children with learning problems, the U.S. Office of Education announced yesterday.

Beery, who for the past two years has taken batteries of experts to local schools to teach methods of dealing with problem children, said he will use the grant to develop a person in each of a dozen Marin and Richmond schools to serve the same function.

SFO COPTER TO CONTINUE MARIN TRIPS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — SFO Helicopter Airlines Inc. will continue its service to Berkeley and Marin.

Trustee Sam Kagel said yesterday that the plans to stop the service had been abandoned and that "the response to our efforts to keep these runs and these helicopters alive has been most encouraging."

He credited "concerted community pressures" from Berkeley and Marin County as being the deciding factors. The company amended its application to the Civil Aeronautics Board to discontinue only its routes south of San Francisco Airport.

False Bomb Threat

A bomb threat at the Pepperland Night Spot, 735 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael, proved to be a hoax last night.

The telephoned threat was received at 11:55 p.m., but the building was not emptied, San Rafael police said.

Health Warning On Old Drugs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Be wary of old medicines, warns the Health Insurance Institute. Some medicines lose or gain strength when they are old, making them ineffective or dangerous. If they have changed color, separated or otherwise changed composition, throw them out — not where children can get at them.

Thai Translation Of Koran Completed

BANGKOK (UPI) —After two dozen years of hard work, a Bangkok businessman has completed a Thai translation of the Koran, the bible of about 500 million Moslems. Direk Kulsiriwasdki, the translator, said the final sections of his translation will be published later this year.

Groundbreaking Is Held For Low-Moderate Housing Units

Groundbreaking for a $1,168,000 low and moderate-income housing development was held today at the First Congregational Church of San Rafael.

The project, called Pilgrim Park, for families in the $4,900 to $7,800 income bracket, is 100 per cent financed by the federal government and is administered by the Federal Housing Administration.

The 61 apartments will be clustered in three acres of the church grounds at 8 North San Pedro Road. Completion date has been set for July of next year. Rentals will be from $103 to $158 per month.

Participating in the ceremony were: Arthur L. Timmel, assistant regional administrator for the Department of Housing and Urban Development; Dr. Richard C. Norberg, executive minister of the Northern California Conference of the United Church of Christ; Douglas Ferguson, president of the Ecumenical Association for Housing, which arranged the financing; Margaret Azevedo, Marin County planning commissioner; Eugene Wedell, Wedell Group Architects; Dr. John A. Starkweather, president of Pilgrim Park Inc., and Rev. Francis Geddes, minister of the First Congregational Church.

American mint growers farm 76,600 acres of peppermint and 27,000 of spearmint, says the National eGographic.

Drug Treatment For Heroin User

Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court has placed Jeffrey Dean Peters, 19, of San Rafael, on probation for three years on condition he commit himself to Mendocino State Hospital for treatment of drug addiction.

He told Peters that if he dropped out of the treatment program he would be returned to court for sentencing.

Peters had earlier admitted possessing heroin when arrested by San Rafael police on May 30 after he was seen walking unsteadily on Fourth Street.

Sharp Quake Is Recorded In Colombia

First reports made no mention of damage or injuries, but the area is primitive and communications are spotty.

The director of the Geophysical Institute in Bogota, the Rev. Emilio Ramirez, said the temblor was recorded on seismographs here and in the city of Pereira 125 miles to the west.

Ramirez said the epicenter was apparently located off the Pacific coast.

Beer Starts, Ends In Glass

NEW YORK (UPI) —Today's scientifically brewed beers, which normally end up in glass bottles, begin their lives in glass containers, too.

The containers in this instance are the huge brewing vats where the beer is aged after fermentation. In the old days, the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute says, beer was aged in oaken vats lined with pitch. Today's precisely formulated beers are aged in immaculate tanks of glass-lined steel.

Bill Bredlau Likes The Old Cars Best

A Marin Man And His Love Of Cars

Bill Bredlau Owns Four

By DON KEOWN

"I wouldn't own a new car, if they gave me one," says Charles William (Bill) Bredlau of Sausalito.

And true to his words, the closest he comes to owning a new vehicle is the 1965 Ford pickup truck that he uses in his work.

The real pride and joy of his small automotive fleet, however, are his two Model A Fords, a 1930 four-door sedan and a 1930 sports coupe, and his 1937 "Top Hat" Bentley sedan built by Rolls-Royce.

"Now there are cars with character," says Bredlau, automobile buff, professional car restorer and mail order business man.

BREDLAU IS presently engaged in restoring the 1937 Bentley — "the body is by Freestone" — and will be showing it in the special-interest, noncompetitive category tomorrow as the Marin Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home of San Francisco conducts its eighth annual Concours d'Elegance on the grounds of the Silverado Country Club at Napa from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Once the restoration is completed, Bredlau plans to enter his Bentley in competition in just such prestigious automobile events as the Silverado show.

"We think it is one of but three of its kind in all of the United States," says Bredlau of his car, "and we are currently involved in confirming that."

AND HE ADDS: "I've been told by British Motors that once I have finished the restoration, I will have an automobile worth approximately $9,500."

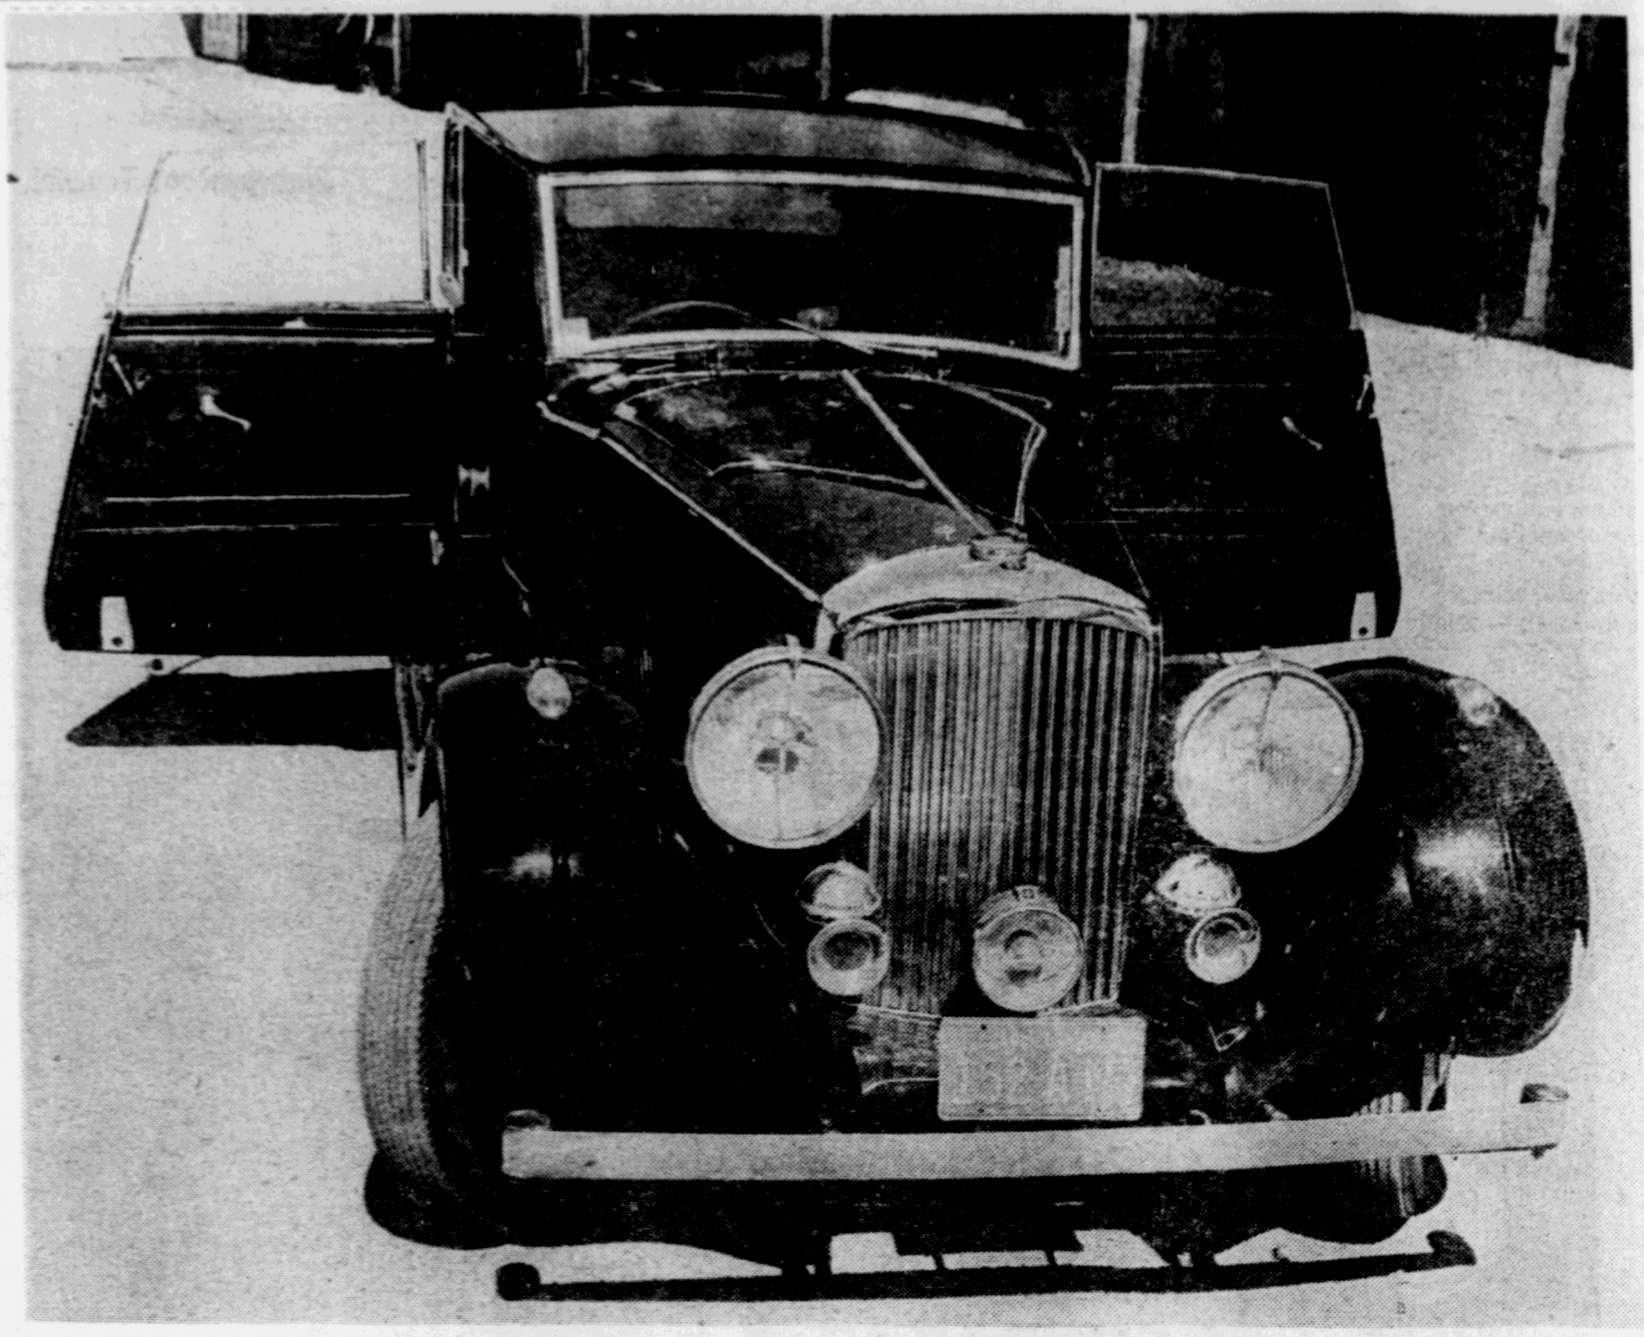
"I saw it, indicated I was interested in it, and Charley and I arrived at what I considered a fair price," says Bredlau.

HE DESCRIBES the car which visitors to the Napa concourse tomorrow can examine close-up as "representing the Rolls product of that era at its very best, with strong, straight, clean lines."



IT WAS THE square, clean, classic lines of the body of this 1937 "Top Hat" Bentley by Rolls-Royce that first attracted the attention of Charles William (Bill) Bredlau of Sausalito and caused him to acquire it. He believes it is one of but three of its kind in the entire United States. Now he is engaged in restoring the fine old car and will be showing it as a "special interest" vehicle at tomorrow's eighth annual Concours d'Elegance benefitting the Florence Crittenton Home of San Francisco on the grounds of the Silverado Country Club in Napa, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The classic body style features razor-edge sharp, rather than rounded, angles at the top that is sufficiently high to accommodate a gentleman's top hat inside.

While Bredlau has made a profession of acquiring, restoring and re-selling at a profit vintage automobiles, he says: "I hope to hang on to the Bentley the rest of my life, even though it might be a little rich for my blood."

BREDLAU ALSO restores fine old cars for other owners, working at the Sausalito Sports Car Center on Gate 5 Road, and operates a mail order business, Bill's Model A Parts, out of his home at 99 Glen Drive, Sausalito.

Looking with affection at his own two Model A's, Bredlau says: "I've always had a soft spot for Fords," and especially for the Model A."

Even his ownership of the Bentley has not lessened his enthusiasm for his two representatives of the four-cylinder car which the automotive empire founded by Henry Ford turned out with such success in the years 1928, 1929, 1930 and 1931. He belongs to the Marin Model A Club and is becoming increasingly active in that group, part of an effort to involve himself more and more in car owner activities — "I'm considering joining the Rolls club, if I can qualify with my Bentley."

BREDLAU'S involvement with cars began in his high school years back during World War II "when I began buying, fixing up and selling cars like old 1934 Fords to pick up a little income."

He continued with that work after his school years. "I would work for a garage as a body and fender man" he says. "But always I would be on the watch for some old Ford that I could pick up, tear apart and repair, and then sell on my own."

Others, seeing the impressive results of Bredlau's skill and knowledge, began bringing their old cars to him for overhauling and rebuilding.

"THE FIRST real show class car to be brought to me was a 1931 Cadillac coupe convertible," Bredlau remembers. "A neighbor turned it over to me for restoration. And for that, I really had to put in some research before I began working, to make sure I would get it back together properly."

All this was in Southern California where Bredlau spent his early years.

Twelve years ago he moved to Marin County to take on a job which had been arranged by relatives living here.

"BUT IT WAS outside the car field," he says, "and so it just didn't work out, and didn't last long. Automobiles were in my blood. And pretty soon I was back working with cars."

Again Fords were a priority interest. He estimates that he has restored a score of them for himself and others through the years.

But he has also worked on Auburns, a Duesenberg, '35, '36 and '37 Buicks ("I owned a '38 Buick myself for a time") and other vintage, antique and classic cars.

it," says Bredlau of car restoration. "It's exciting to know that you have taken a car that might have been wasted in a junk heap and returned it to a condition where it is as good or better than the new cars you see on the streets or in the showrooms.

"There's a lot more than just sentiment to the saying that the old things are the best."

While there are thousands of dedicated Model A Ford owners remaining in the country, and hundreds in California, Bredlau points out that they face increasing difficulty in finding replacement parts of their old cars.

Bredlau supplies them with their needs. Generally, Bredlau gets his parts from an eastern wholesaler who remanufactures them out of old parts. Original Model A parts still usable are extremely hard to come by.

"I GUESS THERE are eight or 10 people in the country engaged in this business," Bredlau says, "and about four large distributors supplying us retailers."

Bredlau has also given a helping hand to a couple of the few remaining Model T owners, although the Model A remains his prime interest.

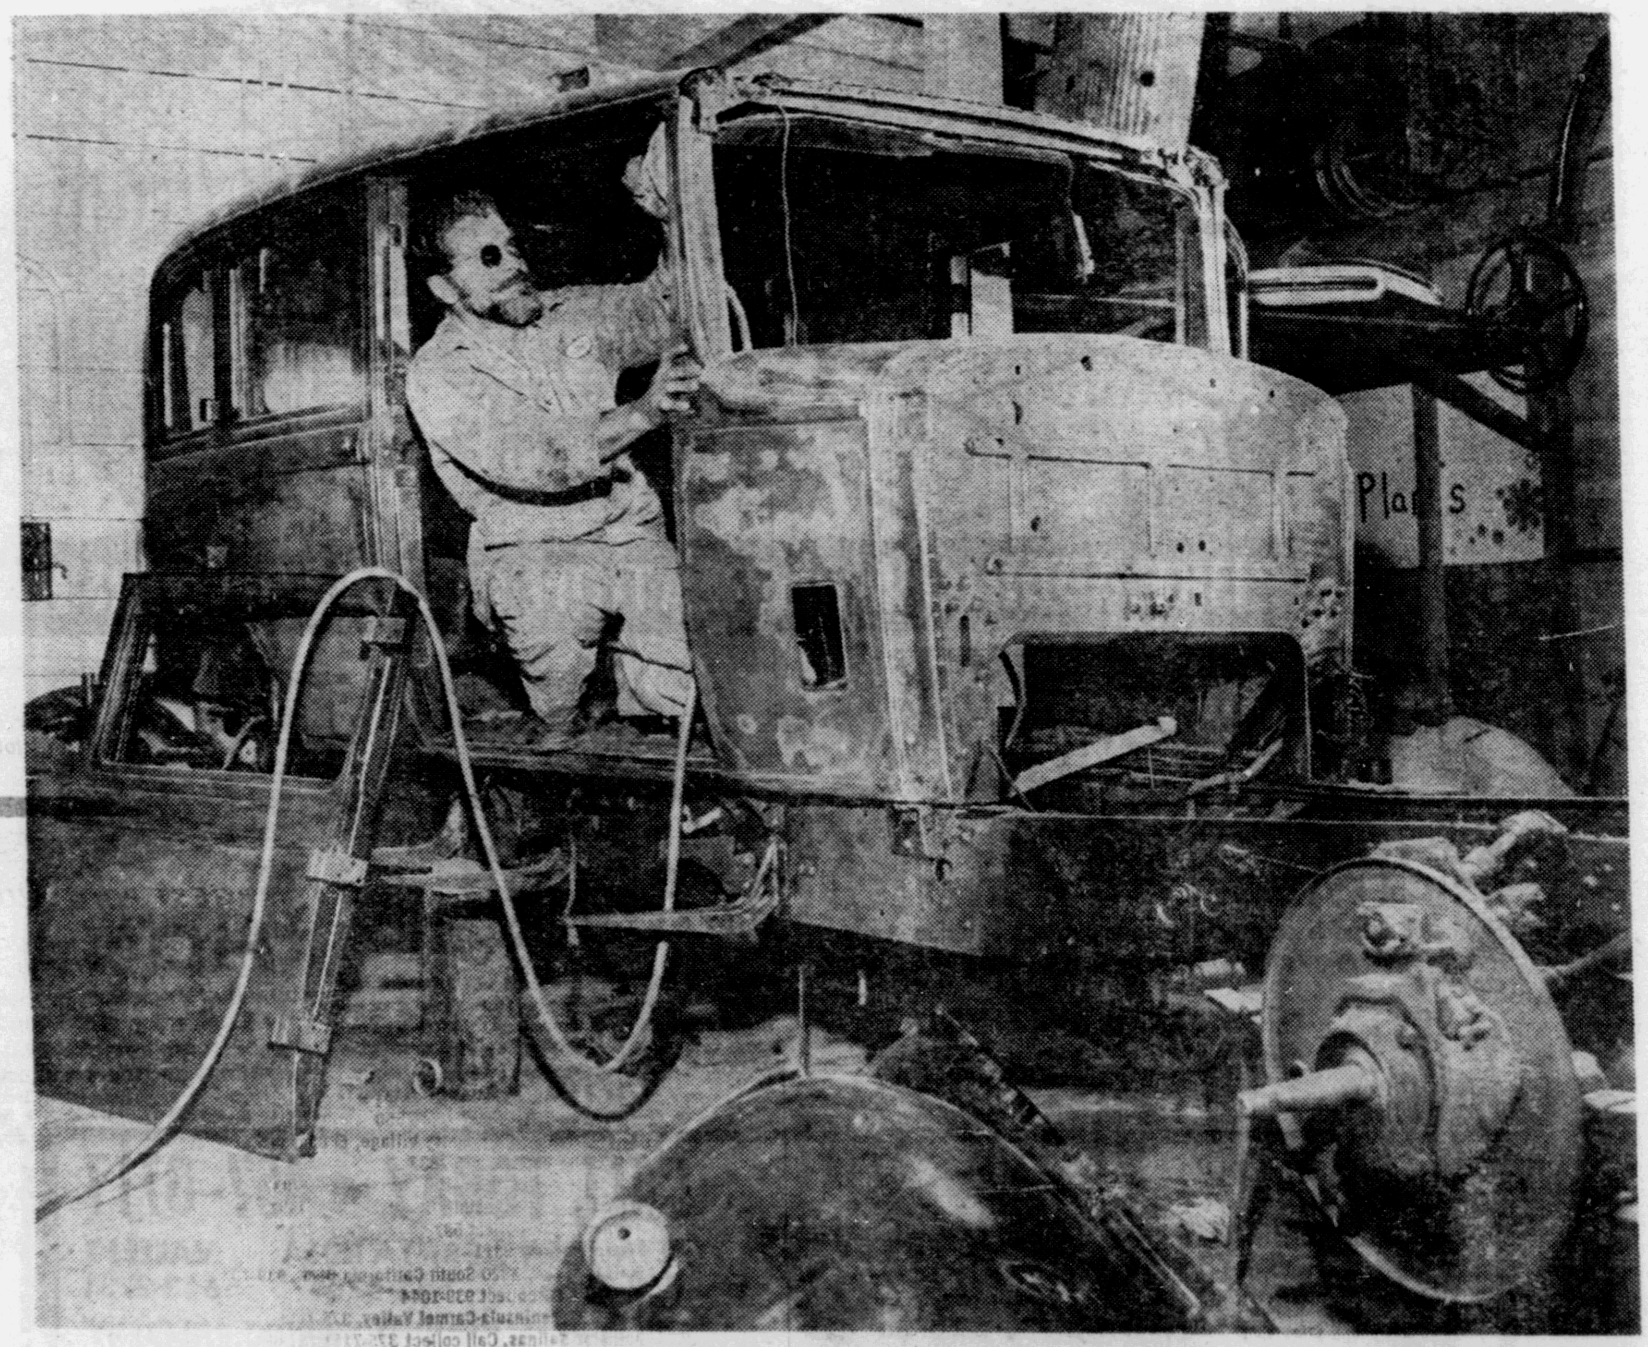
The car show to be staged tomorrow at Napa by the Marin Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home is strictly a charity event with all proceeds to go to the San Francisco institution that provides care for unwed mothers. There will be special attractions such as Mrs. Ed Reinecke's 1918 six-cyclinder Saxon and a 1931 Bugatti Royale from the famed Harrah's Collection, along with the usual array of competition cars.

FOR BILL BREDLAU it is the kind of event that he enjoys most. For it puts him among people who live, love and talk cars. And for Bredlau, there is no more fascinating subject.

So he'll be there with his Bentley eager to answer any and all questions about that car, about the profession of car restoration, and even about Model A Fords if your interest lies in that direction.

For even surrounded as he will be by Rolls-Royces, Cadillacs and Mercedes Benzes, Bredlau will confess a strong attachment to the Model A.

"It was my first real love among the automobiles," he says, "and to me it still has a personality — a strength of character — all its own."



AS A PROFESSION, Bill Bredlau restores old and valuable cars for their owners. Here he is at work rebuilding a 1928 four-door Cadillac belonging to a San Francisco attorney. Other current projects: A 1958 Four-Plus Morgan and a 1952 Porsche. And his past work has included the likes of Auburns, Duesenbergs and a considerable number of the Model A Fords that were his first and are his continuing automotive love.

William Baer: 'We Must Communicate'

Theater Figure Has Some Strong Ideas On Education

"Did you know that 50 per cent of the people in the United States are illiterate? That's a staggering figure, but it's true!"

William Baer, extensions director of the American Conservatory Theater and San Rafael resident, was discussing education, a subject with which he is continually concerned.

As head of ACT's active "out-repertory" program, which tours communities throughout Northern California performing for schools and organizations, Baer also serves as administrator of the conservatory or training programs that are an integral part of the the total San Francisco-based operation.

"COMMUNICATION is of vital importance," continued Baer. "Education, exposure and desire all cause us to be more stimulated and more stimulating. Too often we tend to deny ourselves the enjoyment of discovery — curiosity, really — and pass this failure along to our children.

"ACT's training programs attempt to arouse that curiosity, that marvelous discovery of 'other possibilities,' and to cause us to wonder more about ourselves and the people and the world around us. This kind of discovery is by no means limited to the actor — it's as basic as the educational process itself."

An inhabitant of San Rafael since he came to the Bay Area with ACT in 1966, Baer's views on education derive from personal as well as professional experience. One of the main reasons he and his attractive wife Wanda chose Marin County for their home was their daughter, Johanna, who is now 8 years old.

ALTHOUGH THEY were delighted by the opportunity to raise Johanna in a metropolitan area where a variety of "cultural" activities are available within easy driving distance, they preferred to locate in a community where a real "neighborhood" situation existed, where a little girl could keep her cats and ride her bicycle.

Johanna has her cats, rides her bike, watches television and skins her knees. But when she was 10 months old, she had a reading vocabulary of more than 500 words, and when she was 3 years, she was reading at a level considered well above that of a child in the second grade of public school.

The Baers have, as he puts it, "made a conscious effort to bring into this society a person capable of finding the answers. She may become one of the greatest ballerinas of the century (she has just returned from a tour of the Orient as a featured performer with a San Francisco ballet company), or a housewife.

"BUT, IN EITHER case, she'll have the capacity to discover things about herself and others that she might not have had if, for example, we'd communicated with her at the start in sounds like 'goo goo' instead of words.

"We must communicate with our children on an intellectual level. It's just as easy to lead yourself and your child along a more interesting and creative path than to lead yourself and that child nowhere."

Baer, who began his career in the arts as a classical musician, once aspired to be a concert pianist. He turned to conducting a number of years ago, however, and still actively pursues this endeavor. Now in his third season as conductor of the Napa Valley Symphony, he still prepares all of the scores at the piano.

HE HAS SERVED as director of the opera theater department of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, and before joining ACT he spent seven years as producer and musical director for the Phoenix Musical Theater (Arizona), where he also served as conductor of the Phoenix Chamber Orchestra and manager of the Sombrero Playhouse. Baer has served as assistant

THE RANGE OF activity in the conservatory or training phase of the American Conservatory Theater's program includes a wide range of activities for both the professional or potentially professional actor and for the layman interested only in broadening his horizon through mastering some of the techniques of the drama. Above, students warm up in a dance class at which they are encouraged to discover new things about themselves as individuals. At lower left, the circus skill of juggling is demonstrated by instructor Hovey Burgess and a student. And at lower right, ACT leading actor Paul Shenar, left, experiences "the enjoyment of discovery" in a voice class taught by Mark Zeller. William Baer of San Rafael, who heads the training section of the ACT, believes that "exposure to all sorts of mental and physical disciplines" ultimately benefits the student not only as a performer, but as an individual as well.

Training For Actors And For Individuals

conductor with the Lyric Opera in Chicago, as stage manager with the Civic Light Opera in Pittsburgh and as chorus master and coach with the Ft. Worth Opera Association (Texas), where he helped form a ballet company with Mia Slavenska.

He studied with Nadia Boulanger in Paris, and served in an administrative capacity during the rebuilding of Ft. Worth's Casa Manana. (The original Casa Manana, built to house Billy Rose's spectacular "Jumbo," had burned down.)

HE LATER became musical director of the new Casa Manana, and it was there that he met his talented future wife. She auditioned as a singer for the company, and Baer hired her.

In the spring of 1966, he joined ACT, which was on the move with engagements at Westport, Stanford and Chicago. Happily, the young but already nationally-acclaimed company found a permanent home in San Francisco, and Baer's job has been involved with the "extension" of ACT into the outlying communities of the Bay Area ever since.

During ACT's first season in San Francisco, 54 out-repertory performances were given before an estimated audience total of 65,000. During the second season, away from San Francisco more than 106,000 people saw 102 performances of ACT presentations in their own communities.

APPROXIMATELY 200,000 persons attended 218 such performances during the third season, and last season, ACT played 285 "out-reps" for an estimated audience of 320,000.

"The aim of ACT's out-repertory program," says Baer, who is currently taking bookings from schools and organizations for the upcoming season, "is similar to that of our training programs, in that exposure is the keyword.

"As much as I hate the term 'grassroots,' even in 1970 that's where it's at. Getting out into the community, reaching and showing, should be the number one priority for those in the performing arts.

"I don't believe that ACT's appearance at a school is going to make every student run out and buy a ticket to one of our shows at the Geary Theater. But in the long run, that's not what I feel is the most important function of our out-rep program."

"FOR ONE THING," he continued, "students and others outside the company are exposed to the performers as people, and this is very important. Perhaps they're seeing something they've never seen before and perhaps they're enjoying it. That's important.

"They may enjoy their English or history class the next day more than they had before, or they may go look up a word that was in a script."

A similar philosophy is exemplified in ACT's various training programs.

THE READING of Shakespeare is a normal part of the life of the William Baer family. In their San Rafael home, William Baer, wife Wanda and daughter Johanna, 8, a fifth grader, enjoy such a session with the Bard. Johanna has been so acquainted with Shakespeare since age 4. Another Baer family enterprise: A December production of "Hansel and Gretel" in Napa at which Baer will conduct the Napa Symphony Orchestra, Mrs. Baer will sing and Johanna will dance.

The "Conservatory" part of American Conservatory Theater has always been considered as important as the finished professional presentations the audiences see on the stage. The unique concept of training concurrent with performing was one of the basic principles upon which William Ball, general director, originally founded ACT, and it remains the foundation upon which ACT functions.

ADVANCED professional training for persons interested in theater careers is offered by ACT, but training is by no means restricted to potential actors.

"We hope, of course," said Baer, "that the training we provide makes for better performances on the stage, but we also hope that it enables an individual to become — and here we go again — more curious."

Baer is currently involved in final preparations for the upcoming fall training programs, for which applications are now being accepted.

ACT's third annual "academy" will be held from Oct. 12, 1970, through Jan. 23, 1971. Fully accredited by the state of California and Veterans Administration-approved, the academy is an advanced program of comprehensive training in mime, acting, voice, movement and speech, with classes conducted by members of the ACT acting company and a resident training staff.

THE EVENING extension program, beginning Oct. 12 and continuing for 10 weeks, will consist of professional training in the same subjects, and will be taught by the same instructors as the day-time sessions. Participants can take one or more classes and can also earn college credits for evening class hours.

ACT's new Children's Theater School is a novel addition to the total training operation, offering training in all theater arts to three separate age groups.

Classes for 7 to 8-year-olds, 10 to 12-year-olds and 13 to 16-year-olds will be given during the week. Each enrollee will take one two-hour class per week and a Saturday morning workshop session.

Applicants will be accepted into this program by interview only, for which an appointment is necessary.

"SOMEWHERE along the line," Baer be lieves, "the kind of exposure ACT's 'out-rep' and training programs offer provides a kind of stimulation to higher things. And, let's face it, we all have to be stimulated before we'll move into those 'other possibilities.' This whole process might be called soft sell or osmosis, but in the long run I'm convinced that it's the best solution to the external exposure, vocabulary, communications problem."

It's a problem with which American Conservatory Theater's extensions and conservatory programs have come to grips. William Baer, a man of deep convictions, driving energy and intellectual curiosity and sensitivity, sees to that.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe

MARIN CLEANERS Phone 454-4792 — Member N.I.D. of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax

"What Causes The Foul Odor In My Clean Clothes Closet?"

The odor to which you object is caused by a resin which has been added to fabrics, by the manufacturer, to help make them resist wrinkles. When this resin is applied and the manufacturer fails to cure it properly, small amounts of urea-formaldehyde remain. Then when the weather turns warm and humid, the objectionable, fishy odor becomes more apparent.

All wrinkle-resistant fabrics do not have this objectionable characteristic. It is well, when purchasing such a garment, to give it the sniff test. If your nose detects that fishy odor, beware. The odor cannot be removed by drycleaning, though laundering may do so.

There's Still A Lot To Do At The Center

Fair Is Gone, But Art And Garden Grounds Buzz

True, it is no longer the home of the Marin Art and Garden Fair.

But in the words of the immortal Mark Twain, any report that the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross is dead is "highly-exaggerated."

Not only has the center survived the moving of the fair. But it is very much alive and kicking up its heels.

IT HAS TO be that way, notes Richard Tyler, president of the 10-acre community cultural center. For with the fair's departure went also a large slice of the center's operating revenues, paid as rent for the fair usage by Marin County. Lost, too, were revenues derived from sales made by various center groups on items offered to fair-goers, monies that eventually went to the center.

So, just what does go on back of those red brick walls of that former estate once known as "Sunnyside," bought through the efforts of the late conservationist, Mrs. Norman B. Livermore, with the help of eight conservation-minded Marin groups?

Part of the story can be told at a glance by looking at the totem-pole marker near the entrance. The pole carries such directional arrows as:

Decorations Guild
Jose Moya del Pino Library
Art and Garden Center Office
Ross Valley Players
Memorial Amphitheater
Marin Society of Artists
Pixie Parents Playground

BUT THAT TELLS only part of the story. Much of the center's activity is not building-centered — therefore no permanent directional arrows. For example, you'll find no directional arrow for the influential and social Northgate Group, headed by Mrs. James E. Egger.

That group, formed back in 1947, was for one purpose only: to raise funds to help maintain the Art and Garden Center. They do this by their prestigious summer fashion luncheons, their annual Market Day in May, and by their upcoming Table Decor and Tea in October.

Even such founding groups of the center as the Marin Conservation League, Garden Society of Marin, Marin Garden Club and Marin Music Chest won't be found listed on the directional pole either. None of these maintain offices on the center grounds, though all are tied closely to it and are represented on the advisory committee. (The center itself is run by a board of directors).

THOSE GROUPS mentioned above are all founding groups and were among those who helped raise the original $25,000 needed to purchase the property back in 1943 from the Kittle family.

Today, Mrs. Edwin G. Weed heads the Marin Garden Club, Mrs. Emmet Rixford the Marin Music Chest, Mrs. John Donnelly the Marin Conservation League and Col. Todd H. Slade the Garden Society of Marin. All are very much a part of the on-going Center action.

Two founders groups do, however, have center facilities.

One, the large 600-member Marin Society of Artists, headed by Phil Smith, runs the Frances Young Gallery, which is open to the public every day from 1 to 4 p.m. The society also runs the popular rental gallery and puts on a continuing series of art shows throughout the year.

Their special annual art auction was held last Sunday.

THE ROSS VALLEY Players, headed by Mario Gianetti, is one of the longest surviving little theater groups in the country. Its headquarters and theater are in the old Barn, one of the two original estate buildings left standing, the other being the Octagon House.

This year the Players will produce four plays instead of the usual three and are currently performing "Wait Until Dark."

Even adding the founding groups, plus the Northgate affiliate, we still don't have the whole center activity story. There are other affiliates and many classes.

While most of the affiliates are listed on the directional pole, the classes aren't. The directional pole is permanent. Classes, in keeping with the center's new educational emphasis, revolve.

Classes, open to the public, have been, are, and will be scheduled in flower arranging, stitchery, beginning and advanced art, children's drama, great books, bridge, ballet and interior design. A call to the center office will produce a schedule.

BACK TO THE affiliate groups which are building centered:

THERE IS SOMETHING for everyone these days at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross — for both old and young and everyone in between. Shown here are Mrs. Harold Wilson, 1025 Via Escondito, Novato, seven times a grandmother and a member of the Decorations Guild, and little Dana Rinefort, a young Pixie playground member of the center. Dana is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Dart Rinefort, 76 Longwood Drive, San Rafael. They are standing before the directional signpost, near the entrance which points the way to many of the building-centered activities going on behind the walls.

Like the Decorations Guild, under the leadership of Mrs. J.J. Navas. These are women who work year-round creating imaginative decorative pieces for sale. Their showroom is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. They are best known for their Christmas Greens Sale, held in early December.

A stone's throw from the Decorations Guild showroom, across old Kittle Creek and past a rhododendron filled patio, is Laurel House Antiques, headed by Mrs. Frank Abbott III.

Every bargain hunter and antique lover in the Bay Area knows this little jewel which accepts merchandise on consignment and is open to the public Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Here you can find such treasures as a 1789 Alpine chalet inlaid table and chair set from Austria. The price of that is $866. Or, if you are interested in an early American sterling silver coffee and tea set, dated between 1830 and 1835, and have $2,500 to spend, that's where you'll find it.

IF, HOWEVER, priceless valuables aren't your bag, shoppers can find odds and ends of sterling silver, glasses, costume jewelry and bric-a-brac from $3.

Laurel House has whole rooms given over to Oriental and Victorian antiques, plus a garage annex which houses bargains one is apt to find in such a setting.

At the opposite end of the antique scale is the youth scene, like the Pixie Parents Playground for pre-schoolers, under the leadership of Mrs. Alfred Noble Jr. Pixie's big event is the highly imaginative Easter Egg Hunt.

The Pixie facilities boast a child's birthday area that can be rented by the public.

OTHER CENTER facilities may also be rented by groups. This spring and summer have seen a rash of beautiful garden weddings and receptions.

Outside organizations are invited to inquire about free center nature tours which are conducted around the grounds and which point out such specimen plants as the famous giant sequoia, planted from a Yosemite seedling in 1880 by the estate's original owner, George Worn. There are some 27 specimen trees on the center grounds.

Though private property, the public is invited to wander through the gardens. Picnicking, however, has had to be banned due to lack of tables and cleaning and maintenance funds.

ANOTHER ACTIVITY appealing to the young is the Art and Garden Unit of the Junior Theater of Marin. It holds a summer workshop and gives one production a year at the amphitheater. This group is led by Mrs. Tom Perry.

One of the latest groups to be organized at the Art and Garden Center is the Center Pathfinders, a young and aggressive organization which operates the Magnolia Tea Room where lunches are served several days a week.

This group, open to new members, is headed by Mrs. William Fuss. The group also caters lunches for outside groups, as well as operating the center's newest showroom, the Garden Path, featuring one-of-a-kind handcrafted articles and plants for sale. Mrs. Robert Cummings heads the Pathfinders.

THE FAMILIAR 100-year old center landmark, the Octagon House, moved to a new location several years ago and completely restored, has become the Jose Moya del Pino Library. It was founded by a group, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Russell Smith, in memory of that Marin artist and teacher who was the first president of the Artist's Association and a center charter member.

The Octagon House, originally constructed over a well, was the old estate's tankhouse. It now houses a collection of art and garden books.

The library is sponsoring a lecture series on the five Fridays of October, and also will be showing the works of Moya del Pino.

Woods And Water—

Jamaica Has Plenty Of Both

By MURRAY J. BROWN

Say Jamaica and chances are that many Americans will picture palm-fringed beaches decorated with mini-bikinied beauties basking in the tropical sun.

They will be right — the beaches along the northern coast are rated among the finest in the Caribbean and have been attracting sun and sea worshippers for years.

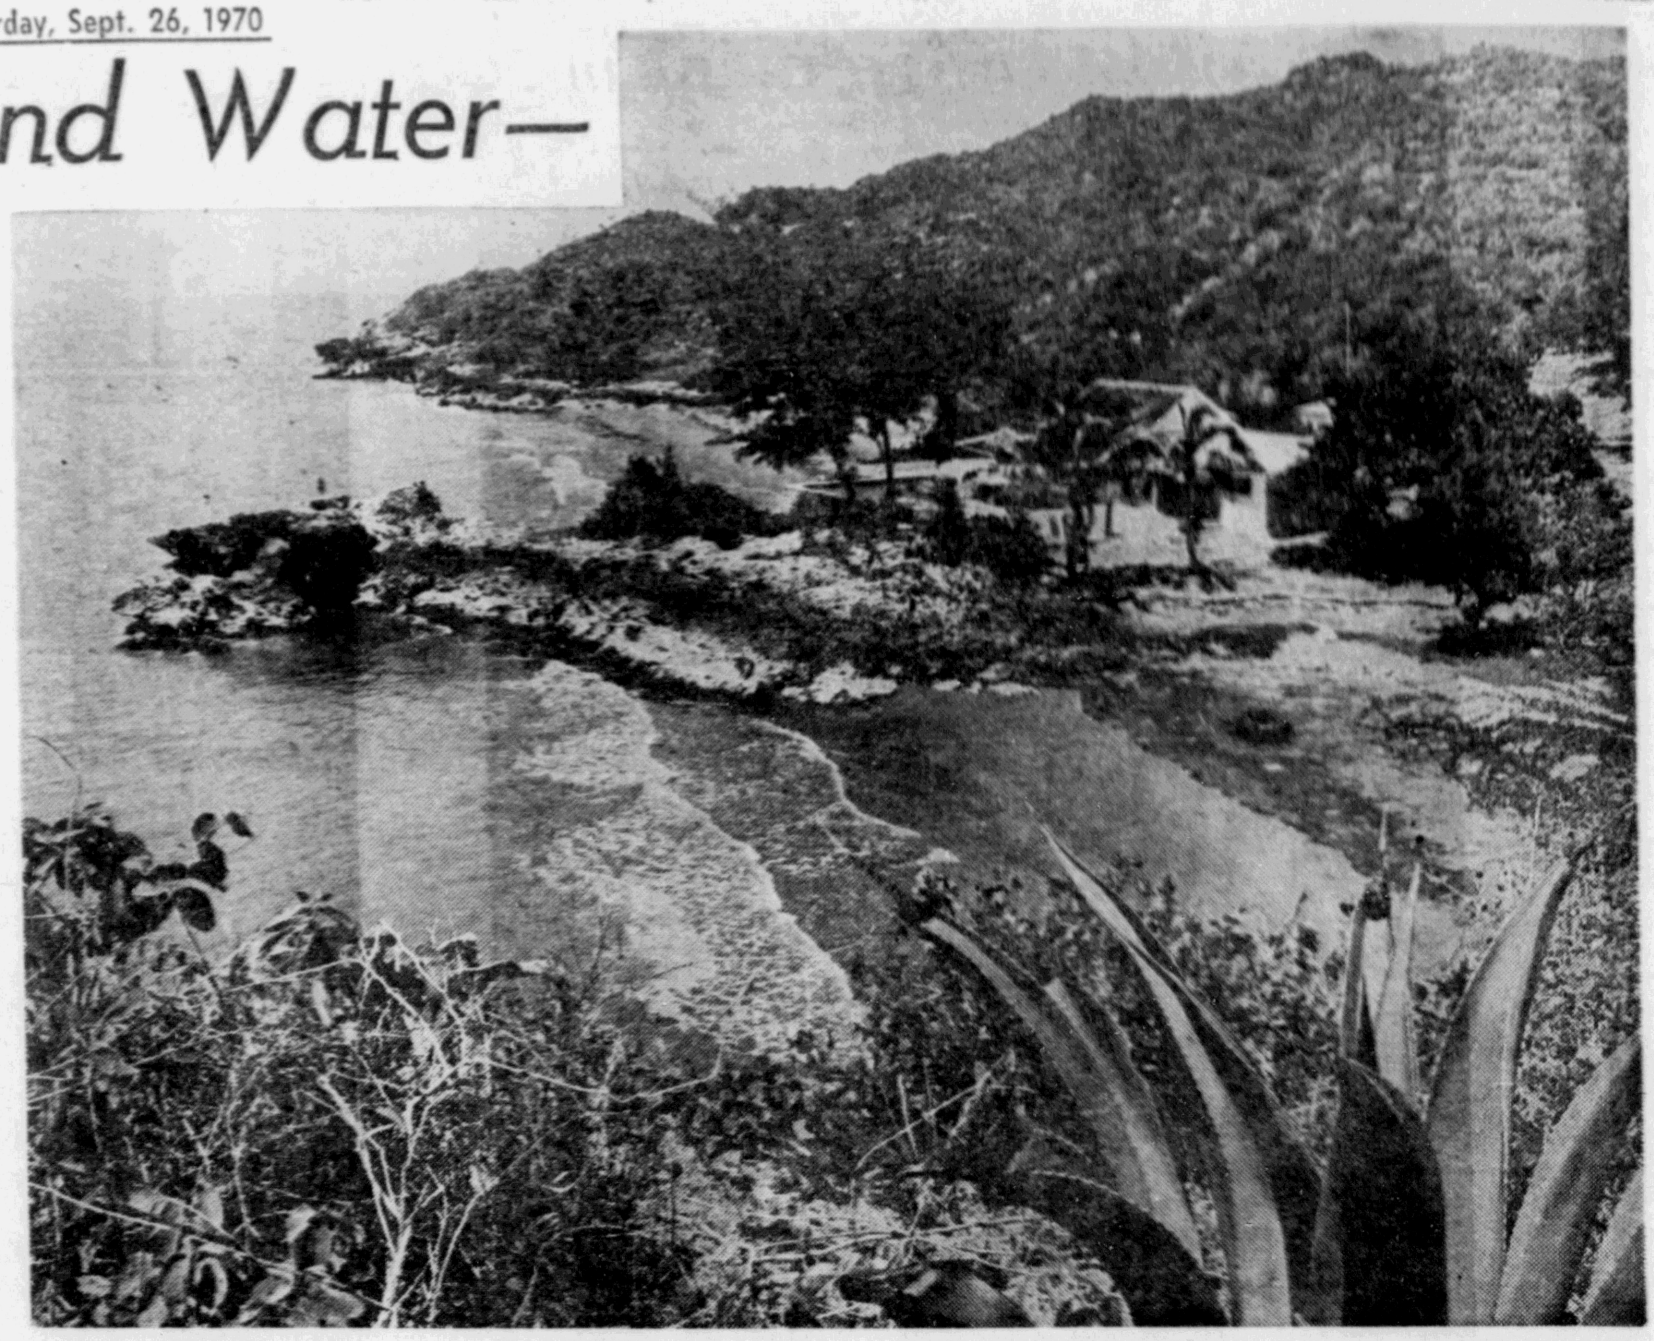
But there is more.

The Arawak Indians called the island Xaymaca or "Land of Woods and Water." The Arawaks are long gone but the woods and water are still here.

JAMAICA IS THE third largest island in the West Indies — 148 miles long and 55 miles wide. It rises out of the sea to nearly 7,500 feet at Blue Mountain peak on the eastern end near the capital city of Kingston.

It has scores of quiet beaches, coves and lagoons along the coast for sunbathing, swimming, skiing, snorkeling, sailing, fishing and other water sports. Many visitors go no farther.

But the interior offers crystal-clear rivers, streams and waterfalls tumbling down to the sea from mountains where hundreds of varieties of exotic trees, plants, fruits, vegetables and flowers grow in wild profusion. There are riding and hiking trails, river rafting trips, bird watching, butterfly hunting and other activities inland.



LITTLE BAY COTTAGE near Alligator Pond along Jamaica's rural southern coast is one of many unusual holiday homes available to tourists for rental through the newly-formed Jamaica Association of Villas and Apartments. The association, newly formed, represents 150 cottage and villa owners throughout the island, and says that families or couples can now rent a fully-staffed private seaside home for as low as $5 a day. But at Little Bay, with its two private beaches and mineral water swimming pool, the rate is $125 a week including meals.

I TOURED THE "Gold Coast" from Montego Bay in the west to Port Antonio in the east with Roy Sangster, a driver-guide provided by the Jamaica Tourist Board. There are regular guided bus tours to the major points of interest and good rail, road and air services for those who prefer to go it alone.

Rental cars are available and all you need is a valid license from your home state. If you do drive yourself, don't forget to keep to the left — a holdover from the days when Jamaica, now independent, was a British colony.

Be particularly cautious on curves and hills — many Jamaicans drive as if they were competing in the Indianapolis Speedway races. Sound your horn and slow down when approaching a curve or top of a hill.

MONTEGO BAY, or Mo' Bay as it is more familiarly known, has long been one of the most famous and fashionable resorts in the West Indies. It has an international airport (there's another in Kingston) and about 40 hotels and guest houses as well as numerous villas, cottages and apartments on or near the beaches.

I stayed at the Half Moon Hotel and Country Club, which has a private beach, tennis courts and an 18-hole golf course laid out by Robert Trent Jones. Guests are accommodated in three two-story high wings branching out from the main reception building, or in cottages, most of which have private pools.

During the off season, which runs to Dec. 15, rates in most of the tourist establishments are as much as 50 per cent below those in the high season. They range from about $7 single without meals to about $30 per person double with two meals a day.

RATES FOR private villas, cottages and apartments also are sharply reduced during the summer, a break for big families.

Those without private beaches generally have pools or are within easy distance of famed Doctor's Cave Beach, with its unique underwater spring, which brought the first tourists to Montego Bay.

Incidentally, Montego is an English corruption of the Spanish word for lard, manteca. In colonial days, the town was a major port for ships smuggling lard, rendered from wild pigs on the island, to the Spanish colony of Cuba about 90 miles to the north. It still is a major port for banana boats and a popular call on Caribbean cruise itineraries.

NEARBY PLACES of interest for the visitor include banana, coconut and sugar cane plantations, pimento and citrus groves, cattle ranches and the Great Houses of colonial days. There also are picturesque fishing villages, sleepy farming communities and old forts.

The Great Houses include Rose Hall, once the home of Annie Palmer who murdered three husbands and became known as the "White Witch of Rose Hall" because of her dabbling in voodoo and her cruelty. She herself was murdered in 1831 and the Great House fell into ruins. It was restored by American industrialist John Rollins at an estimated cost of a million dollars.

Admission to the Great House is $1 and you can tour the plantation in a minibus for $2.50.

WE LUNCHED AT another restored plantation manor — the Sign Great House — on a typical Jamaican meal of fresh fruits, ackee (a vegetable which tastes like scrambled eggs) and dried fish, curried goat with fried plantain, and a steaming cup of Blue Mountain coffee from the slopes of the mountains which actually look blue from a distance.

Air Jamaica and several othed airlines provide non-stop or through services from major cities in the United States and Canada to Montego Bay and Kingston.

I flew from New York aboard an Air Jamaica DC8 jetliner in slightly more than three hours. It is about an hour and 15 minutes from Miami.

Norway's Most Unusual Railroad Is Run By Amateurs

The Setesdal railroad in Norway is one of the most unusual railroads in all of Europe.

It is no longer connected with the venerable Norwegian State Railways, but is run on a voluntary basis by members of the Setesdal Railroad Hobby Club. And it is one of the few railroads in Europe that still has steam power left.

Opened in 1896, the Setesdal railroad connected Kristiansand on the sunny south coast with the secluded Setesdal Mountain valley, its terminal station being the village of Byglandsfjord on the lake bearing the same name. It was built as a narrow-gauge railroad but in 1938 the line between Kristiansand and Grovane (12 miles) was converted to normal gauge, being part of the south coast railroad between Oslo and Stavanger.

THE SETESDAL railroad between Grovane and Byglandsfjord never made profit, and the Norwegian State Railways decided to close down the entire railroad in 1962. This caused such an outburst from Norwegian railroad fans that the elders in Kristiansand — probably knowing a good thing when they saw one — offered to run the railroad as their own, locomotives and all. This is exactly how the Setesdal Railroad Hobby Club was formed.

Since 1964 the Hobby Club has been running their own train every Sunday from June to August, from Grovane to Beiholen and back, a distance of 4.7 kilometres or about three miles. Traction is by "Locomotive 2", which was built by Dub's of Scotland in 1895. It is a tank engine, weight 18.7 tons. It has two cylinders and six passenger cars.

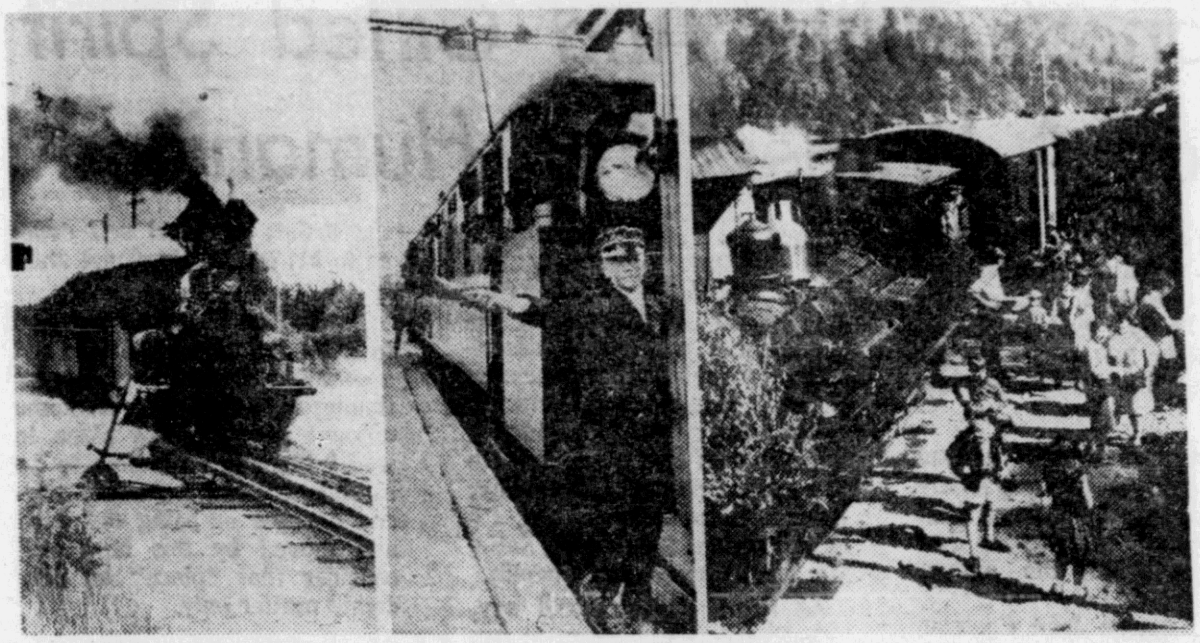
CLUB MEMBERS act as engine drivers and conductors. A junior club with members aged from 12 to 18 is responsible for the cleaning of the road equipment.



THE SETESDAL RAILROAD in Norway is operated by members of the Setesdal Railroad Hobby Club, and the engineer will stop anywhere to allow passengers to take photographs. It runs from Kristiansand on the south coast to the secluded Setesdal Valley.

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

A new directory of golf courses and tennis courts on the Monterey Peninsula has been produced with color by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitors and Convention Bureau. . . This winter British Overseas Airways Corp. is offering a tour package of eight nights in a London hotel (including tours and theater tickets) and seven nights on the Continent's Mediterranean or South Atlantic coasts, at such spots as Mallorca, the Canary Islands or Tunisia (including all meals) at a starting price of $676 that covers round trip fare from the West Coast.

Trans World Airlines' budget guides have been expanded to cover 15 cities now, with Madrid, Lisbon, Hong Kong and Honolulu among the recent additions . . . . Delta Air Lines and Bon Vista Holidays of Sherman Oaks have teamed up to offer a $383 "Jamaica Town and Country" eight-day, seven-night package including air fare between Los Angeles and Montego Bay.

The Depressing Story Of Air Pollution

"Vanishing Air" is the report of the "Nader's Raiders" study group on air pollution, written by John C. Esposito; and as might be expected, it is on the somber side.

Ralph Nader's investigators concerned themselves principally with enforcement — or lack of it — under the Air Quality Act of 1967 and its predecessor, the Clean Air Act of 1963. The first, according to the probers, accomplished little, being built to order for delays and evasions. And the second, which presumably was to tighten up the first, provided instead room for more delays and evasions.

The Air Quality Act of 1967 was the accomplishment of Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine. In the view of Esposito & Co., it was a meager accomplishment. Muskie comes out as no hero.

The San Francisco Bay Area Air Pollution Control District goes unmentioned in the book, but the State of California (for its motor vehicle controls) and the County of Los Angeles get higher marks than most jurisdictions.

"Vanishing Air" recites the story of Los Angeles Supervisor Kenneth Hahn's fight to force automobile manufacturers to do something about pollution from car engines, and its eventual loss — or the equivalent of loss — by a government consent decree. What it does not bring out, though, is that despite that decree, the pressure generated by the fight has caused manufacturers to start moving, and has awakened legislators to crack down on auto emissions.

Much of the history of pollution of the air by industry, electrical power plants and the automobile is here in "Vanishing Air." It is an absorbing but depressing story.

Actually, however, the book does not tell the whole story; for, although it has taken a long time to get anything done about cleaning up the air, quite a few things now are being done that "Vanishing Air" ignores.

JEAN COCTEAU was photographed in 1929 at age 40 by Germaine Krull. (From "Professional Secrets")

France's Blithe And Gifted Spirit Was A Witness For Humanity

PROFESSIONAL SECRETS: AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JEAN COCTEAU edited by Robert Phelps; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 321 pages, $8.50. Reviewed by Margaret Terrien.

Humanity has had a bad press lately; so it is especially satisfying to read a book that bears joyous testimony to that tattered remnant, the human spirit.

At first glance Jean Cocteau (1889-1963) would not seem to be a human spirit with which most of us limited clods could identify. A Frenchman of plural talents, he was — among other things — poet, novelist, critic, painter, sculptor, actor, playwright, scene designer and film director. (More than 20 years after its release his "Beauty and the beast" is still acknowledged a cinema classic.) He enjoyed turning his hand to any creative effort; so he was not above designing perfume ads or Christmas cards. He was an assiduous letter writer and journal keeper.

A brilliant personality and ardent friend, he numbered among his intimates and acquaintances a stunning assortment of acclaimed performers in every branch of the arts. To name a few at random, starting with the turn of the century; Nijinsky, Bernhardt, Diaghiley, Proust, Gide, Rilke, Stein, Picasso, Auden, Stravinsky, Satie, Marlene Dietrich and Chaplin.

As Pearl Bailey would say, "That's not a bad crowd to run around with."

With the exception of the foreword written by editor-biographer Robert Phelps and selected remarks from some of Cocteau's distinguished friends, the book consists entirely of chronologically ordered excerpts from the man's writing about himself, his life, and the people who were important to him.

Given the cast of characters and Cocteau's talent, the book could not fail to be interesting. It also is a delight to anyone who believes that the unique French genius for writing about ponderous matters with wit, rationality, grace and clarity of style — even when that combination must be read in translation — is one of the major ornaments of Western civilization.

Cocteau was more than a blithe and phenomenally gifted spirit. This book is an instructive and moving account of one human being's struggle to transcend himself and to create — using his own life as raw material — a testament bearing the sort of symbolic truth that illuminates mythology. Cocteau especially identified himself with Orpheus.

No one can totally succeed at such an assignment, of course, but it is inspiring to see someone try. Cocteau was well acquainted with Hades and, like Orpheus, his lyric gift did not make his special corner of that country any less dark. He was homosexual. He also suffered all his life from a series of physical ailments which were probably psychosomatic in origin but nonetheless debilitating. Twice he submitted himself to the agony of opium withdrawal, the second time successfully.

He writes of all this with self-conscious honesty and no self pity, but it is obvious he suffered extreme episodes of depression and pain — intensified by that occupational disease of the artist; profound self doubt as to his own professional ability.

Despite all problems he lived to be 74 and retained to the end a child-like joy of life while continuing to produce an awesome amount of work. His place in world literature remains to be established, but I suspect anyone capable of being delighted and moved by this book will consider that "place" an academic matter only.

The People Of One Small Town

The impact of this story, well written as it is, surprisingly comes after a reader has finished; a sort of delayed-action wherein appreciation grows as time passes.

In other words, it's not in the wham, bang style, all flash and no substance, of some modern novels that hit the reader with startling passages and climax after climax, stir excitement and are then quickly forgotten after the book is closed.

The setting is in a small town in West Central Texas, the principal characters three youngsters, and the essence is tragedy, but the scope is beyond all this.

Horgan manages to take certain people, certain events in a certain place at a certain time and convey a universal tone.

Phil Durham, Billy Breedlove and Marilee Underwood, youngsters growing up in a dull small town, are the central characters, but the portrayals of their parents and the other town folks are just as gripping, just as believable.

There are people in that small town who are bound to remind the reader of someone he has known or heard about, no matter where he has lived.

For those who grew up in small towns, Horgan's story will bring back vividly the atmosphere, pace and emotional climate, with the hopes, longings and despair of those who live there.

It will prompt readers to think of life as a whole, and in this age of change, mobility and instant everything, that's not such a bad idea.

Some Songs That Tell A Lot

BALLADS OF THE GREAT WEST edited with commentary by Austin and Alta Fife; American West, 262 pages, $10. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Preservation of western folklore owes much to the collecting and writing team of Austin and Alta Fife. They have been at it practically ever since their marriage while they were both students at what was then Utah State Agricultural College (as was I at the same time).

"Ballads of the Great West" is another worthy addition. It is not simply another collection of cowboy songs, or miners' songs, or songs of the trail. It is a little of all of these, along with some authentically western balladry of more recent vintage, from such writers as Henry Herbert Knibbs and S. Omar Barker.

It thus presents a greater variety, and as a result a fuller picture of the stuff of which the American West has woven its songs.

The volume is classified in four sections: the physical and human environment, the cowboy and other western types, dramatic situations and events, and code of the cowboy. Each has been widely celebrated in song and verse, and for each the Fifes have chosen excellently representative examples, including relatively few of those made familiar through survival in "country music."

A people's songs tell a lot about a people. Austin and Alta Fife have made these tell a lot about the West.

The War Within Us: Our Inhibitions Vs. Aggressions

By DON KEOWN

ARNOLD HUTSCHNECKER
Happiness is the objective

THE WILL TO HAPPINES$ by Dr. Arnold Hutschnecker; Trident, 192 pages, $4.95.

THE LYNCHING OF ORIN NEWFIELD by Gerald Jay Goldberg; Dial, 247 pages, $5.95

THE NEW OLYMPIA READER edited by Maurice Girodias; Olympia Press, 891 pages, $15.

Dr. Arnold Hutschnecker, physician and psychotherapist, followed up his best-selling "The Will to Live" with "The Will to Happiness" in 1964, and that book, now reissued, still stands as one of the best popular explanations of how the layman can apply basic psychological principles to his living.

The book is labeled a "new and revised edition," but updating and rewriting appears minor and the text is fundamentally unchanged from the original.

Happiness — true happiness, "a purposeful release of energy toward a meaningful goal" — is the inborn objective with which man begins his life travel. Inhibition — "inaction, stagnation, frustration" — is the roadblock that hinders his smooth progress, causing detours and breakdowns. Excitation or action is the balancing force that wisely applied can pierce the inhibition barrier. But over-excitation can be as destructive of happiness as over-inhibition.

Hutschnecker, relying heavily upon the research and conclusions of the Russian physiologist Dr. Ivan Pavlov as well as those of Sigmund Freud, divides society's individuals into four categories:

The strongly-excitory or hostile-aggressive; the lively-controlled or adjusted aggressive; the calmly-imperturbable or passive-dependent, and the weakly-withdrawn and inhibited.

It is among the inhibited and withdrawn that unhappiness festers at its worst, although it is by no means their problem exclusively. Only the adjusted or controlled aggressive escapes it, balancing off his aggressions or excitations with just the right degree of inhibitory controls.

The calmly-imperturbable is secure as long as the subject of his dependency is available to provide the necessary assurance. But any threat to that anchor can create serious problems.

The hostile-aggressive does not suffer the inner pangs of repression, being free of inhibition. But he is also lacking in controls over his excitations. His is an abrasive, totally selfish behavior that is likely to pile up troubles within himself and between him and society.

But it is with the inhibited and withdrawn that Dr. Hutschnecker's book is most concerned.

"Inhibition is painful, " the author writes. "It causes illness and danger to oneself and to other people."

And, he continues, we are living in an age where urbanization and technocracy encourage more and more withdrawal and alienation, less and less communication.

It is possible, Dr. Hutschnecker says, for us to discard the unhappiness that plagues so many of us, "for the door is open." But first we must recognize our psychological makeup — in which category do we truly, not just outwardly, belong? — and the makeup of society. Then we can move toward the alleviation of our overly-inhibited, overly-dependent or overly-aggressive tendencies that are at the roots of our unhappiness.

Or we can at least adjust to and accept being the kind of person we really are, then direct our aggressions or inhibitions as creatively, satisfyingly, non-destructively as possible. Enjoyable goals are open to those within all four of Dr. Hutschnecker's categories. It becomes a matter of values.

The passing of six years has not dimmed the optimism or persuasiveness of Dr. Hutschnecker's message of hope for the unhappy.

Sleuths & Suspense

This little tale starts off in the unlikely, at least for a mystery story, setting of a hospital room where an unpretentious pharmacist lies awaiting brain surgery.

The devotee of light reading should not be turned off by this grim reality, however, which serves only as the starting point for an intriguing tale.

Lester Dunn, who before the operation has led a most unremarkable life as the owner of a not very prosperous London pharmacy, seems to be someone else after surgery.

Is one of his existences a dream? Or is it a premonition of a disaster he is going to bring upon himself?

At each turn of the story Welsh author L.P. Davies almost loses the cautious reader who wants a little credibility with his intrigue. Davies finally supplies it, however, and ties up the story with an especially neat and truly surprising ending.

GERALD JAY GOLDBERG
An arid and depressing novel

Is Newfield, the dour, industrious, well-to-do New England farmer, a hostile-aggressive? Or withdrawn-and-inhibited.

Certainly he is aggressive and hostile to a fault, conducting a war of suspicion and ego with the cheerless Vermont community in which he lives.

But withdrawn he is, too. Despite a wife and relatives, he is virtually a recluse. And inwardly a dreadfully lonely man.

Goldberg draws his picture of a complicated and soured self-made man expertly. Unfortunately, Newfield is a most unappealing hero or anti-hero. And even more unfortunately, his antagonists, the people with whom Newfield does battle in this war of nerves, are no more appetizing. The reader is then left in the predicament of being the spectator to a contest in which he has no one for whom to root. It makes for an arid book, short on compassion and humanity. And this dims the reader's enjoyment of the novel, even though he appreciates the skill with which Goldberg delineates his characters and tells his gloomy story.

So keen is the Goldberg writing touch that the reader persists until the final fate of Orin Newfield is spelled out, even though in so doing he struggles uneasily with a distaste incurred by a plot and cast that are unredeemingly depressing.

NO NEED to separate the characters in "The New Olympia Reader" and place them in fancy psychiatrically-defined compartments. They are simply sick, sick, sick — as is the book.

Edited by Maurice Girodias himself, the anthology is offered as "A Collection of the Best and Newest Erotic Writings Published by the Olympia Press." The immediate reaction is that if these shabby pieces are the best, then spare us from the worst. And from the best as well.

Supposedly, according to the jacket blurb, the Reader, a follow-up to the first "The Olympia Reader" released in 1964, "presents a collection of erotic writings of unprecedented scope, sophistication and variety." Actually it does nothing of the kind. There is a dismal sameness about all these sordid little stories and a crudity that makes public toilet graffiitos seem the essence of culture and wit.

Nor does the fact that the selections include the work of a number of well-known writers (many of whom, understandably, have chosen to sign pseudo-names) help any. Dragged through the gutter, the brightest talent becomes as odiferous and despoiled as the sorriest hack specializing in pornography.

The jacket blurb tells us the book "certainly demonstrates the distinction to be made between the erotic and the pornographic, in a powerful and definitive manner." Well, we'll accept this as representative of pornography. Now where's the contrast?

It is a tiresome repetition of detailed descriptions of the perversions perpetrated by tiresome people. Editor Girodias concludes the book with an account of his struggles against the censors. It stretches one's conviction on behalf of freedom of expression to take any satisfaction in his ultimate victories. Never was there greater furor over such a shoddy cause.

LUCY IN three languages? Too much!

But there she is, on the covers of three simultaneously published books, the world's greatest unlicensed psychiatrist, dispensing advice and insults to a plainly befuddled Charlie Brown at a nickel a barb.

It's the newest "Peanuts" book by Charles M. Schulz. "You Need Help, Charlie Brown" in English, "Hay que Ayudarte, Charlie Brown" in Spanish and "Ca ne va Pas Charlie Brown" in French.

Holt, Rinehart and Winston is the publisher of the softcover books, priced at $1 each.

And what less painless reading fare could you hand the young student of Spanish or French than a collection of the misadventures of Lucy, Charlie Snoopy and company?

HART PUBLISHING Co. Inc. has printed a 95-cent paperback version of Peter Fletcher's "Emotional Conduct," now bearing the title "Understanding Your Emotional Problems."

"Emotional conflict is the outcome of ignorance when the package we are trying to handle is life itself," Fletcher wrote. "We are thrown off balance because we have grown up with faulty ideas about ourselves, or with wrong-headed notions about the significance of the experiences through which we have passed." The book is his attempt to correct those faulty ideas and wrong-headed notions with an intelligence "uncloudedby pity, fear or shame."

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Youngsters who followed with avid interest man's first lunar landings should be entranced by "The Moon Explorers" (Four Winds, no price listed) by Tony Simon.

Not only does it contain Simon's well-written account of the Apollo II flight, and of the historic Armstrong-Aldrin walk on the moon, but it contains as well the essential space program background and some forecasts of its future.

What converts "The Moon Explorers" from a good science history book into a novel package with unusual child appeal is the inclusion of a seven-inch record of the voices of the astronauts and other excerpts from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's official transcript.

Equally important are the large number of photographs that have been clearly reproduced, and in dimensions suited to their contents.

While the inclusion of the record might cause some to suspect a "gimmick," it is nonetheless excellent coverage of an exciting subject. Not surprisingly, there is the usual space enthusiast's tendency to exaggerate the accomplishments and their significance, and to minimize the disappointments and the costs, both monetary and in neglected programs on our own planet.

Some other new books for juniors:

"Spaceship Medic" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Harry Harrison is the latest science fiction novel for juniors by a veteran writer in that genre. It is a workmanlike, satisfactory account of a space trip from a lunar station to Mars in the era when such flights are generally routine, but this one is not. Science fiction buffs will enjoy it.

"Just Morgan" (Walck $4.50) by Susan Beth Pfeffer is a well-done novel for girls, centering around Morgan Goodstone, recently orphaned, who agrees to spend a summer in Manhattan with her uncle, a famous novelist, that she has never seen. It proves to be a horizon-broadening summer for young Morgan, as she makes a host of interesting new acquaintances. More important, she learns some new things about herself. Miss Pfeffer shows respect for her young readers in making her novel believable and meaningful.

There's a touch of the old "Our Gang" comedy feeling to "The Day the Gang Got Rich" (Viking, $3.50) by William Kotzwinkle, a fun romp that begins when George Dugan finds himself the surprised owner of a five-dollar bill. His chums are willing and eager to help him spend it. And small readers, 5, 6 and 7, will delight in accompanying them to the candy store, the soda fountain, the toy department, etc. Joe Servello's excellent sketches are full of energy and humor.

"Secret Writing" (McGraw-Hill, $5.50) by James Raymond Wolfe must be rated one of the most appealing books for young readers of recent months. Author James Raymond Wolfe takes up an intriguing subject, cryptography, and covers it well. Ciphers and codes have long challenged and fascinated both young and old. Wolfe, who has been a criminal investigator and a government and private business security agent, makes the subject, both historically and presently, yet more engrossing. Mathematically-inclined boys and girls will revel in the explanations of how to make or break ciphers.

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

A Quick Survey Of Some Of The Best Recordings From The Ranks Of Rock

By JOHN SUNIER

While Epic has seen its last days as a classical music label, much fine pop material is still to be found on this associate of Columbia Records.

A most enjoyable quartet of young fellows in the Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young bag is Poco.

Their album "Pickin' Up the Pieces" (Epic BN 26460) features close and yet swinging harmonies with not a little country flavor. The pedal steel guitar heard in several of the tracks contributes to this special flavor. A few of the tunes add strings or horns, but with great restraint throughout.

"Nobody's Fool" as well as the title tune were highlights.

ANOTHER LOCAL rock group has a cute little LP on Epic titled "Supersnazz" (BN 26487).

The Flamin Groovies hit the 50's rock bit pretty hard on their recent album on another label, but this effort is balanced by numbers in the "good-time music" area and a generally lighter touch, tasteful and witty. Lead vocalist Ron Loney writes some quite original and spirited tunes, and old-timers like "Pistol Packin' Mama" add to the fun brew.

One of the most under-rated rock groups seems to be Kaleidoscope, a talented and original quintet that delves into both hard rock and country as well as Eastern sounds. Their new one on Epic (BN 26467) is fascinating listening for those who are getting their fill of "rock copy-catism." How many of your ordinary run-of-the-mill rock ensembles include oud, clarinet, violin, caz, jumbus and feet?

An 11-minute epic (if you'll pardon the expression) titled "Seven-Ate Sweet" closes the album spectacularly.

"DAN HICKS AND His Hot Licks" (BN 26464) have made a name for themselves in the Bay Area with a continuation of the good-time music we used to enjoy with The Lovin' Spoonful, Sopwith Camel and others. Two ladies in the group add a nice sound to the vocals and one of them is great on the celeste and piano.

"Milk-Shakin' Mama" is a good one, but then so is the whole album when you come right down to it.

"Beck-Ola" (Epic BN 26478) is the latest from the talented albeit not-terribly-original guitarist Jeff Beck and his Group. "Girl from Mill Valley" looked interesting but fell flat. "Rice Pudding" is a lot of repetition without much to say. The liner notes even excuse the lack of originality in the session.

A dud I'm afraid.

SLY AND THE Family Stone raise the rafters again with "Stand!" (Epic BN 26456). Probably the most successful blend of soul and rock around, this group is exciting, versatile and musicianly all at the same time.

The gutsy yet optimistic slant of the title tune is typical of Sly, a former disc jockey here in the Bay Area. And the lengthy "Sex Machine," with its female voice fed through Leslie speakers for a totally instrumental effect is way out!

A totally trippy LP is to be had in Paul Horn's "Inside" (Epic BXN 26466).

The jazz flutist had visited the magnificent Taj Mahal numerous times on visits to India to see the Maharishi. One day he played a few notes on his flute inside the structure and was astounded by the effect. As he put it, "I'd just let the notes hang there. I could play whole chords and they came back sounding like a chorus of angels. There was a whole orchestra invisibly suspended in the obscurity of the dome."

One night Horn brought along a recording engineer and some portable equipment shortly before the monument closed up for the night, when the visitors were few, and they taped some of the unearthly sounds. A Taj Mahal attendant adds his vocal chanting to the angelic sounds of Horn's golden flute.

The feeling of immense space is captured in the disc, and with stereo headsets prepare to wig out!

"NILSSON SINGS Newman" is a recent RCA Victor album (LSP-4289) that convinced me there was some truth to all the praise composer-singer Randy Newman has been receiving of late. The problem was I was listening to Newman's own versions of his quite unique songs and I was frankly bored to death.

The voice of Nilsson ("Midnight Cowboy" theme) is another matter entirely, bringing the beauty of the songs to the fore in a masterpiece of interpreting another composer's efforts. "Vine Street" and "Living Without You" were my favorites.

Don't Delay On Bulbs

Garden Page

So unless you use the autumn to do your planting, you can't expect to reap the floral harvest in the spring.

And right now, Marin nurseries have their peak selection of spring-blooming bulbs. This is the time to make your choices, while the supply is at its best. If you don't, your neighbors will. And you will have to settle for the leftovers in late October or November.

To get the particular bulb that meets your planting and landscaping needs, confer with the nurseryman. But keep this in mind: It pays to choose top quality bulbs, regardless of the kind.

IN FEW OTHER gardening areas is quality more important than in flower bulbs.

It takes an equal amount of time to plant either an inferior or a top-quality bulb. But only the latter will assure you of the desired results.

A California favorite is the ranunculus, and nurseries have these bulbs in a variety of exciting colors, as well as in a mixture.

THE MIXTURE provides a riot of garden color, and the separate colors permit you to demonstrate a creative flair — massing a bed of one solid color or grouping two or three colors together for a delightful planting.

The golden hues, yellow, pink, red and white camellia-like blooms are also excellent for cutting.

Daffodils are a universal favorite, but with each passing year, more and more of the non-trumpet types are coming into their own — as Californians see the exquisite and colorful blooms in neighborhood gardens.

THE YELLOW and white trumpets continue to lead the pack, but the Poets, large and small cup varieties, clusters, and doubles — in solid and bicolors — are closing ground on the favorites. Shop your nursery's selection of daffodils and choose several types for your garden.

Plant clusters of five or seven bulbs (or more) of the same variety together. Don't use them in a row — like so many wooden soldiers. Come spring, you'll be glad you did.

Hurry to shop for tulips, too, while the selection is at its peak — even if you do not plan to plant them for a time.

SOME GARDENERS, quite understandably, are reluctant to uproot still-blooming annuals to make way for the planting of bulbs that will not show color until next spring.

However, bulbs bought now can be stored easily for several weeks. They can be kept in the refrigerator, but not the freezer. Or they can be kept very adequately in any cool, dark, dry place, open to the air and not bagged. It won't affect their planting potentiality in the slightest.

DEEPER PLANTING of tulip bulbs is recommended in California. In some inland areas, 10 inches isn't too deep, providing the soil is sandy.

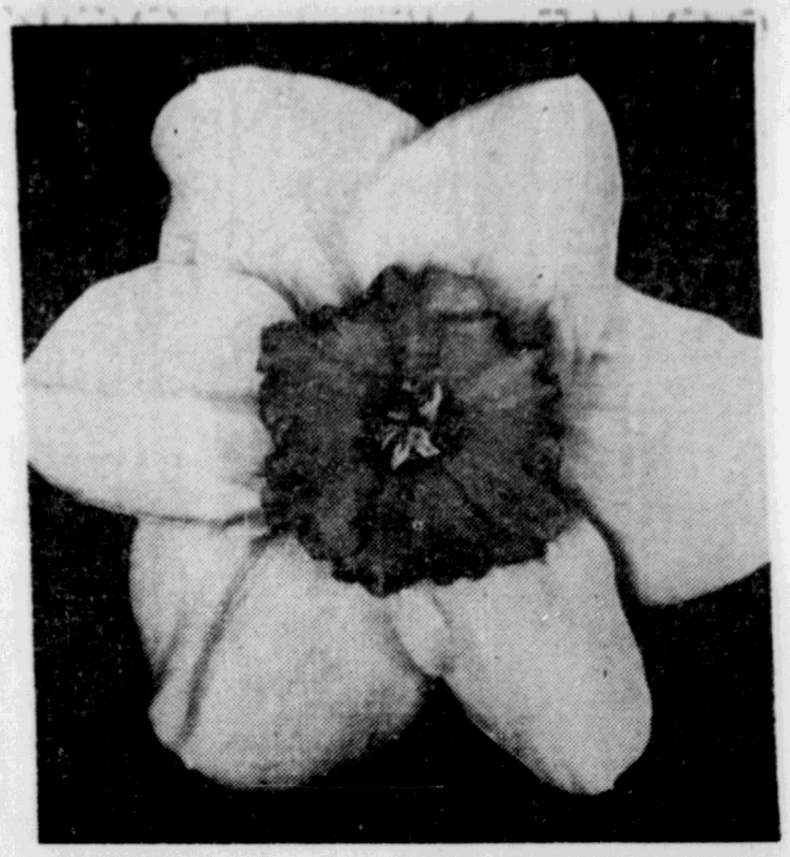
Many gardeners like to chill hyacinth bulbs, too.

The colors — many shades of blues and violets, pinks and rose hues, white — are delightful in semi-shady locations. The California Association of Nurserymen recommends planting the bulbs for mass effect rather than seeing how far a dozen bulbs will stretch. It's more effective to concentrate the color, rather than having sparse blooms showing at random.

ALSO AVAILABLE now are Dutch iris bulbs — in great variety of colors. Though aristocratic in appearance, they are easy to grow and the magnificently-decorated blooms are a source of pride when you cut them for indoor bouquets and arrangements.

There is a multitude of small bulbs which Californians should use to assure continuous color in the cool season garden. Crocus, for one, is the harbinger of spring and in separate colors, or a mixture, the wee growers are a cheerful sight.

Sparaxis, Grape Hyacinths, Star of Bethlehem, Snowflakes, Scilla and Freesias are other dependable performers in our county. If you're not familiar with these, visit your nursery and make their acquaintance. They will, with your providing a home for them for the winter, perform their garden magic — which nothing else can rival.



THE DAFFODIL is one of the earliest spring-blooming bulbs that you should be planting this fall. And the Jezebel, pictured here, is one of its most fascinating flower forms. Its petals of rich, reddish gold are crowned with crimson and make a most arresting sight. You should buy daffodil and other spring-blooming bulbs now while the supply is at its best, even if you do not plan to plant them for awhile. They are easily stored.

For Fall Color In Marin, You Can't Beat The Berries

While New Englanders may thrill to the autumnal hues provided by various trees and shrubs; for Marinites there is another source of fall color — the wonderful world of berries populated by pyracanthas and cotoneasters.

What members of these two families lack in foliage color, they more than make up with a fall and winter seasonal show of red and orange berries.

The pyracantha choices range from the newer dwarf-type introductions (Red Elfe and Tiny Tim), with red berries, to Lalandi, an upright grower with sprays of bright orange berries, to Victoria, the latest variety to color-up, but whose clusters of intense red berries are among the showiest of all varieties.

FOR LANDSCAPE purposes, the dwarf types add a new dimension to the garden; the larger growers are excellent background plants and are also used for accent in the foundation setting near the house.

The Santa Cruz Pyracantha is a prostrate grower that excels as a groundcover, on slopes or banks, or wherever a low grower is needed. It is covered with masses of large red berries in fall.

This list merely scratches the surface of pyracantha varieties. Your nurserymen will have the varieties best suited for our area.

THE RED BERRY colors of cotoneasters are more subdued, but as a garden backdrop, where the plants shine, the effect is a season's delight. Larger varieties make excellent screens; the prostrate ones nicely cover banks and fill-in parkways.

Silverleaf Cotoneaster is a traditional favorite and Red Clusterberry is appealing — especially when trimmed to expose its interesting trunk and branch patterns. Lower-growing varieties include Grayleaf Cotoneaster and Rock Cotoneaster.

The patterns of growth lend themselves to contour plantings — or to grouping for effect.

The foliages vary as to their growth habits — but all can be relied upon to provide 12 months of beauty and a cool season show of color.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Hurry to plant the flowering annuals that will give you cheery winter color. Snagpdragons, calendulas, stock, pansies, violas and Iceland poppies are only a few of the possibilities.
- The earliest camellias, the Sasanqua varieties, are showing color at the nurseries now, so that you can shop for them in bloom. Use them as featured garden shrubs, as hanging basket display pieces, or even as groundcovers.
- Rework compacted soils this fall, adding humus and chemical or organic soil conditioners. Your nurseryman will recommend a ready-to-use conditioner or soil builder if you confer with him and explain your special problems.
- This is a most favorable time to seed a lawn.
- Don't miss out on the selection of spring-blooming bulbs now available for planting.
- Don't rely upon autumn rains to do your work for you, but continue with your watering schedule until the rainy season is with us in earnest.

Shrubs For A Seasonal Show

In the garden, there are several shrubs that color-up well in Marin to put on a fall season show.

Besides the autumn colors they add to the garden, these shrubs are excellent landscape specimens because of foliage textures and form, or manner of growth.

To illustrate, consider the value of the Oregon Grape (Mahonia).

A medium-size, upright grower, the holly-like foliage is a deep, glossy green. It boasts profusions of yellow blooms in the spring, followed by blue grape-like berries. The autumnal hues of the leaves are awe-inspiring.

THE INTRODUCTION of a compact-type Oregon Grape has delighted gardeners and landscape designers alike. The compact Mahonia is used individually or in massed paintings and borders and because of its four-season beauty it can be utilized in cluster-like plantings for effect.

For a change of pace, the light and feathery foliage of Heavenly Bamboo (Nandina) introduces an eye-catching dimension to the landscape. The plant boasts many upright stems of lacy leaves which turn red in autumn.

Plant hybridizers have created recently other Nandina forms that are equally as versatile — and beautiful.

THE COMPACT Heavenly Bamboo is a smaller edition of the forerunner of the group. It's a prized plant in foreground situations where an extra special specimen is required. In the border, or in massed plantings, the compact type fills the bill.

A dwarf Heavenly Bamboo is now available, too. The foliage is bolder and the tight mounded form makes it an extremely showy small plant. The bright scarlet in cooler months is a knockout.

Two Photinias rate honorable mention for fall colors — Chinese and Fraseri.

Both are large, upright growers with a dense branching habit sure to please. The evergreen shrubs have a bronze-to-copper tint to the leaves that is perpetuated into the fall season when masses of red berries also adorn the hardy specimens. As background plants, or informal screens, they excel.

ONE OF the newest, most popular and most effective landscaping aids for both the new home and the older house being updated is the fence-screen. As shown at left, the fence-screen can provide desired seclusion and at the same time add to the personality of the home. Actually, the artfully designed fence-screen serves as the "walls" of a fresh-air room into which the breezes flow freely, but which intruders cannot enter or peer into. Numerous ideas for the creative planning and building of fence-screens with western woods are illustrated in a free color-brochure offered without charge by the Wood Products Industry Fund, 1240 Bayshore Highway, Burlingame, Calif., 94010.

Shower Stall Ends The Bathroom Feuds

This is probably an exaggeration. However, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, surveys do show that feuding over the bathroom is a major cause of family friction, especially where there are two or more growing children.

IDEALLY, THE solution is the addition of one or more bathrooms. Where family finances don't permit this, the answer is a shower stall, preferably with receptor tub.

The bureau points out that a plumbing contractor often can install a shower in the basement or attic, preferably next to existing piping.

At one time, taking a shower could be a "risky business." Whenever water was being used elsewhere in the house, a drop in pressure could cause sudden dousings of icy cold or scalding hot water.

Today, there are temperature controls that enable the bather to select the temperature he wants before turning on the water. It then remains constant regardless of pressure changes.

SPRAY SETTINGS on modern showerheads include fine, medium and coarse, and the heads themselves are self-cleaning.

For free information on automatic temperature controls write to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60601.

TO ADD A NOTE of distinction to the garage, breezeway or even the ranch or traditional style house, top it with this Colonial Cupola. And to build it, send $1 to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Cupola Pattern 589. Include your zip code number. The design is a replica of the cupolas found throughout New England on barns and homes, but construction has been simplified for the amateur handyman. The cupola measures 16 inches square and stands two feet tall, so that it fits either a one-car or two-car garage. But dimensions can be adjusted to fit your needs. No special tools are required to carry out the step-by-step directions.

New Laundry Room Makes Washing More Pleasant Job

It's unlikely that laundry chores will ever be a joy. But labor-saving appliances, a convenient work area, and attractive surroundings can make the job more pleasant.

One family took the blues out of Monday by remodeling a corner of the basement into a modern laundry room. As a bonus they got a handy bar-sink area for parties.

FIRST STEP IN the transformation was to rid the basement of its dungeon-look. Overhead structural beams and ducts were hidden behind a light colored tile ceiling. Worn flooring was replaced with easy-clean grain finish.

Cold, cement block walls and unsightly water pipes were covered with plastic-surfaced hardboard paneling in a warm woodgrain finish.

The choice of plastic-surfaced hardboard was practical as well as decorative. The panels withstand moisture and humidity — common laundry room problems. They resist dents, mars and scuffs as well as stains and water splashes. Most soils can be wiped off with a damp cloth.

IF NECESSARY, the panels can even be washed without harming the surface.

In the new laundry, hard work is handled by a modern washer and dryer. An old-fashioned laundry tub was replaced with a built-in sink unit flanked by roomy countertops. The sink is handy for marginal washing jobs such as pre-soaking (and for preparing drinks). The counter tops are used for sorting and folding clothes (and for stacking glasses).

AT TOP is the eyesore that too many home laundry areas have become, inefficient as well as ugly. And below is the attractive new laundry room that has been developed in the basement, with its ample working space, new equipment and handsome, plastic-surfaced hardboard wall panels that resist moisture and stains, and which can be damp-wiped clean.

Don't Be A Dripper

When using a paint roller, the excess paint should be rolled off on the ridges in the tray. A further precaution to prevent dripping while the paint is being applied is to make the first stroke an upward one.

KQED Film To Be Used By Rangers

"Ascent," a film produced by KQED (Channel 9) in San Francisco, will be used to instruct National Park Service employees in mountain climbing techniques and equipment.

Park Ranger Charles W Wendt, an instructor at the Horace M. Albright Training Center at the Grand Canyon in Arizona, plans to use "Ascent" in classes there. The film received a Golden Eagle award by CINE (the Council on International Non-Theatrical Events).

Produced for KQED by Virginia Duncan, "Ascent" was filmed in the Yosemite Valley and gave penetrating insight into the world of the mountain and rock climber. Film crews actually followed climbers as they scaled the sheer cliffs at Yosemite.

Hair trailing in the wind, youths battle the Los Ranchitos blaze which charred five acres and damaged a home

VOLUNTEERS HELP SAVE HOMES

Firebug Sets Five-Acre Blaze

An incendiarist yesterday touched off a mid-afternoon blaze in Los Ranchitos which roared through five acres of tinder-dry brush, heavily damaged one home and threatened at least 14 others before being contained.

While Marin County firemen today kept a watchful eye on the site of the county's worst fire this year, Chief Louis J. Bloom credited a former Novato policeman and hundreds of volunteers with averting an even greater disaster.

Robinette, who was later treated at Marin General Hospital for smoke inhalation, said he saw a man about 150 pounds with blonde, shoulder length hair and wearing a white shirt, setting the fire on Los Ranchitos Road north of Glenside Road about 2:30 p.m.

The suspect fled on a red trail motorbike, Robinette said. The Novatoan then ran to a nearby home and turned in an alarm and then went into the home of Mrs. George Sawyer of 10 Glenside Way and carried the woman to safety.

The fire, meanwhile, quickly charred the dried brush and did an estimated $15,000 damage to a home owned by Walter Doole of 9 Ginside Way. The fire came within feet of about a dozen other homes but was turned back by firemen and hundreds of volunteers, many of them hippie-types who grabbed garden hoses and shovels to help in the fight.

"Thank God for all the people that helped; I was never so scared in all my life," said Mrs. Dom J. Luzzi of 63 Los Ranchitos Road, whose home narrowly escaped damage.

Bloom, who credited the volunteers with averting a repetition of this week's Berkeley hills fire, said the Los Ranchitos area has been plagued recently with fires believed to have been deliberately set.

"This fire was deliberately set," Bloom said today. In addition to the eyewitness account of the fire's beginning, Bloom said his department investigated the fire's origin and "found proof of the arsonist's work."

Bloom said the county is currently at its peak fire danger period.

"Everything is bone dry and just waiting to go up," he said. "It was amazing how quickly yesterday's fire moved."

Residents of the area said the fire ravaged the brush-laden slope so quickly that the blaze "seemed several feet ahead of the smoke trail."

Marin County Fire Department responded with about 30 men and four trucks, the San Rafael department had two trucks and the Kentfield Fire Department sent a civil defense truck to the scene.

END OF HIS BATTLE — Louis R. Robinette is strapped onto a stretcher after being overcome by smoke at the Los Ranchitos fire. Robinette, who spotted the incendiarist who set the blaze, then sounded the alarm and carried a 76-year-old woman to safety.

Jordan Civilian Regime In

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

King Hussein appointed a new civilian government for war-torn Jordan today. Radio Amman said the government headed by Premier Ahmed Toukan was charged with restoring peace to the bleeding kingdom.

There was no immediate reaction from guerrilla leaders to the new administration. But they had demanded a civilian regime instead of the military government Hussein installed earlier this month.

In another development, diplomatic sources in London said 16 hijack hostages liberated from the Palestinian guerillas were being flown back to Europe via Cyprus. None of the 16 are Americans. Fears mounted for the 38 Americans still in guerrilla hands.

Israeli Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Haim Barlev said meanwhile that his army was prepared to take "military steps" if the situation in Jordan deteriorated. He said developments so far did not require Israeli military intervention.

Radio Amman said Toukan, a 72-year-old Palestinian, was ordered to implement a four-point peace plan. It calls for guerrillas to leave Jordanian cities, return to the Middle East cease-fire border lines and obey the laws of the land, and affirms the right of the Jordanian army to police the nation's metropolitan centers.

Hussein charged earlier today that some "criminal elements" were still operating in cities despite the Jordanian army's observance of the cease-fire.

Although fighting was reported subsiding today in Jordan,

Brush Fires, Winds Are Playing Havoc

Southern California Is Hard Hit

LOS ANGELES (UPI)— Brush fires lashed by winds that gusted up to 80 miles per hour, burned uncontrolled today across Southern California destroying scores of expensive homes.

Residents of many areas were evacuated in the face of the oncoming flames. Authorities said there had been some scattered instances of looting in the evacuated areas.

Fire officials said the main fire was started by burning rubbish that was picked up by the winds and blown into nearby brush.

During the night the winds died down allowing firefighters to establish tractor lines along the northern perimeter of the fire which they hoped would prevent further spreading in that direction.

WINDS INCREASE

However, no containment of the fire was in sight as daytime winds began to increase.

At least 100 homes in the $60,000 to $100,000 class were destroyed when giant flames from a 35,000-acre fire that started Friday afternoon ate their way into the Porter Ranch development in Chatsworth and spread in all directions.

In the coastal city of Malibu, at least 45 homes, some in the $125,000 range, were burned to the ground when a ring of fire shot down two canyons and surrounding hills. Officials estimated that it covered 25,000 acres.

The two blazes spread into each other, separated only by the Ventura Freeway, which was closed to traffic. Containment of the fires was not in sight, fire officials said early today.

At least 20 fire fighters were injured battling the blaze. Hundreds of others suffered smoke inhalation and eye irritations.

12,000-ACRE FIRE

A third fire in Mint Canyon near Lancaster, 35 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, charred more than 12,000 acres but there were no reports of structual damage.

Another fire in Lopez Canyon in the foothills area around metropolitan Los Angeles destroyed two homes and severely damaged 12 mobile homes while charring 600 acres.

In Agua Dulce Canyon, 20 miles southeast of nearby Palmdale, flames of another fire raced over 3,000 acres destroying at least six homes.

Two evaucation centers were set up by the Red Cross and that at least 1,000 persons were housed in them for the night.

Gov. Ronald Reagan declared Los Angeles county a disaster area. He issued the proclamation from his ranch in the Malibu mountains which was threatened by flames. After the proclamation he stripped the ranch of its furnishings and left the area with hundreds of other residents.

Temperatures in the 90s and dry, gusty winds called "Santa Ana" winds from the desert provided tinder-box conditions

SUPERIOR COURT

Broderick Named To Fill Vacancy

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Henry J. Broderick of Tiburon was appointed yesterday by Gov. Ronald Reagan to fill the Marin Superior Court vacancy left by the death of Judge Harold J. Haley.

Broderick, 43, an attorney practicing in San Francisco, was among eight known candidates for the vacancy, and had been regarded generally as the strongest candidate. He has close connections to the Reagan administration through Marinites who won top jobs in Sacramento.

The governor's office, which reportedly decided on the appointment early this week, advised Broderick of his selection yesterday afternoon. The job pays $33,396 a year.

"I accepted with great pleasure," a clearly relieved Broderick told the Independent-Journal. "It was like being somewhat pregnant and not being sure — and waiting for the rabbit test."

He said that he expected to be sworn in before the end of October, but that arrangements had not yet been worked out with the presiding judge of the court, Joseph G. Wilson.

"It's a question of tying up all the innumerable ends," Broderick said of his closing a law practice he started in 1954.

He will serve the remainder of Haley's term, which expires in June 1972. He then would have to run for reelection.

Broderick also was a candidate for the superior court in 1968, but the seat, then a new one, went to E. Warren McGuire. Marin attorneys objected at that time that judges should be appointed from attorneys practicing in the county.

Broderick is a member of the San Francisco firm of Barbagelata, Broderick, Carmazzi and Arnold.

Among his clients has been Governor Reagan.

A native of San Francisco, Broderick was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley and from Stanford Law School. He served in the Army's Judge Advocate General

Judge Orders Contract To Schoonmaker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge ordered the Defense Department to award a multimillion dollar contract for electrical generators to a Sausalito Calif., firm which had accused the Army of furnishing private information to a competitor.

U.S. District Court Judge Joseph C. Waddy issued a permanent injunction preventing opening of bids on a second round of invitations the department had issued for the generators. He ordered the contract awarded to A.G. Schoonmaker Co., Inc., of Sausalito, which had submitted the original low bid of $31.7 million.

Saddy said the Army had offered a competitor, the Bogue Manufacturing Co. of Paterson, N.J., a unique competitive opportunity and advantage over other bidders.

He granted a preliminary injunction against the Pentagon June 26. The Justice Department sought summary reversal of the order in the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here and was turned down.

Schoonmaker had filed suit against Army Secretary Stanley R. Resor and other government officials after losing out on a bid for engine-driven generators first sought by the Army Feb. 18, 1969.

In his findings of fact, Waddy said the Army gave Bogue information about its contract requirements in a telephone conversation initiated by Bogue last Feb. 16, and followed it up with a telegram. He said the Army did not give this information to Schoonmaker or a third bidder, nor did it incorporate it into a written amendment to the original invitation to bid.

On Feb. 27, the Army opened bids and found Schoonmaker lowest at $31.7 million followed by Bogue at $32.2 million and

JAZZ GREAT Cal Tjader and his quintet will be heard in concert tonight at 8 o'clock in the Fine Arts Theater on the College of Marin campus, Kentfield. Along with vibes virtuoso Tjader the quintet includes Paul Horn, flutist and formerly a group leader in his own right, and a rhythm section of Armando Peraza, Wilfredo Vicente and John Rae. It's an opportunity to hear jazz in a setting other than the smokey nightclub atmosphere. And the price is right—$1.

FURS FOR THE GENTRY were very much a part of the 16th Century county faire. And so the fourth annual Renaissance Pleasure Faire and Ha' Penny Market must include its rustic and colorful furrier's stall. The Pleasure Faire concludes a run of four weekends with a closing day of activities tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Some of the West's finest craftsmen show their wares and skills in a wooded setting at 1000 North San Pedro Road north of San Rafael.

CORTE MADERA MARSH

Some original beauty remains;
The main channel's bank
Carved by innumerable tides;
Tiny inlets, back sloughs,
Pickle grass, dogwood, tarweed,
Sometimes the taste of salt
In the breeze off the creek.
But machines are carving up this ancient gem,
And cash registers ring triumphant
On bulldozed land where once
White heron stabbed abundant fish.
The rail's cry was heard then, and the curlew
Moved, watchful, through the tall grass.
The mud was alive, sustaining
Flighty sandpipers and happy ducks.
Here and there a "Vote for" sign
Is stuck in the apolitical mud.
The final vote has been cast against this doomed marsh,
And we all have lost.

THE INVISIBLE WALL

We enclose ourselves
With an invisible wall,
Too high for others to climb
And see what lies behind it.
In time we become
Like the proverbial miser,
Whose pretended piety
And uncharitable heart,
Denies him the very things
Which he withholds from others.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Stockade Battle

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—Prisoners and guards fought with mops, brooms and fists Friday in a stockade flareup at this Army post.

Only minor injuries were reported in the fray. Officials said the incident was caused by prisoner impatience over administrative discharges for six inmates.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI)—The page boys in the nation's capital soon may have to be called "page people." Sen Charles H. Percy said Friday he will appoint a girl to that traditionally all-male group.

The appointment would be the first time a woman has served as a page in Congress, although there are female pages in many state legislatures.

IBM Stock Stolen

MIAMI (UPI)—Eight persons were indicted by a federal grand jury Friday on charges of conspiring to convert stolen IBM stock through the Key Biscayne Bank, whose president is C. B. "Bebe" Rebozo.

No charges were placed against Rebozo, a close personal friend of President Nixon, or any other officers of the Key Biscayne bank.

Baker Appeals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert G. "Bobby" Baker, former secretary to the Senate Democratic majority, has appealed to the Supreme Court his conviction on larceny, income tax evasion and related charges.

Baker, once a protege of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, was sentenced to one to three years on charges he received $137,000 under false pretenses and evaded paying taxes on most of it.

Nixon's Irish Visit

DUBLIN (UPI) — Premier Jack Lynch will greet President Nixon on the American president's arrival at Shannon Airport Oct. 3, government spokesmen said Friday.

A military escort will accompany the presidential motorcade through Dublin to Dublin castle for a luncheon Oct. 5 before Nixon leaves for home.

Hendrix Estate

Since Hendrix, 27 did not leave a will, a court-appointed administrator will handle the disposition of the estate, it was disclosed in New York Surrogate Court Friday.

Gang Sentence

CALGARY, Alta. (UPI)—Thirteen men, 11 of them members of the Grim Reapers motorcycle gang, were sentenced to life imprisonment Friday for chainwhipping to death the president of another motorcycle gang.

Amidst protests from defense attorneys, the prosecutor argued, "A man ought to know that if he whips someone with a chain, he's going to die."

The 13 were jointly convicted of the March 7 slaying of "Outcasts" president Ronald George Hartley.

RUSSIAN SUB BASE SITE?
Stern public warning from U.S.

Washington Warns USSR On Cuban Submarine Base

WASHINGTON (708) —The White House has publicly told the Soviet Union the United States will take "appropriate action" if the Russians construct a nuclear submarine base on the southern coast of Cuba.

Eight years after President John F. Kennedy forced the Soviet Union to remove offensive land-based missiles from Cuba, the Pentagon announced Friday Russia may be building a base to support missile-firing nuclear submarine operations in the Western Hemisphere.

A Defense Department spokesman said, however, it was too early to say if construction activity in Cienfuegos Bay, less than 200 miles from Key West, Fla., was definitely intended to be a submarine base.

"The Soviet Union can be of no doubt that we would view the construction of strategic bases in the Caribbean with utmost seriousness," said the White House official, who asked not to be named.

"We are watching events in Cuba. We're not in a position now to say exactly what they mean. But at the right moment we will take whatever action is indicated."

The official said in response to a question that Kennedy's warning to the Soviets on Nov. 20, 1962, not to introduce offensive weapons into Cuba, is still American policy. Kennedy said there would be peace in the Caribbean only if "all offensive weapons are removed from Cuba and kept out of the hemisphere in the future under adequate verification and safeguards."

The Russian activity at Cienfuegos bay was spotted by American U2 spy planes. As late as Thursday, seven Soviet vessels were spotted near the suspected site.

The seven vessels, the fourth Soviet task force to sail into the area in the past two years, included a submarine tender, a salvage ship, a tug and a landing vessel believed to have carried three heavy barges that were towed into the deep water port.

The Pentagon refused to say if the barges could be assembled into a floating dry dock.

Also in the area were a Soviet guided missile cruiser, guided missile destroyer and an oiler.

Although there are no Russian submarines in the port now, the Pentagon said several have visited it in the past, including two capable of firing missiles.

U.S. officials have little doubt that a few of the Soviet Union's 13 nuclear submarines, each built to carry 16 missiles, are operating off the North American coast. There is speculation the Russians want to establish distant support bases for its submarine operations.

Nine Named To New Postal Service Posts

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The nine-man board of governors for the new independent U.S. Postal Service has been named by President Nixon. It includes the chairman of a commission that originally proposed removing the Post Office from government control.

Postmaster General Winton M. Blount was not on the list of appointees, giving rise to speculation he may be in line to head the new service.

Nixon appointed Frederick R. Kappel of New York to a two-year term on the board. It was Kappel's commission that proposed originally that the Post Office be turned into a nonprofit government- chartered corporation.

The nine members were appointed for terms ranging from one to nine years. Future appointments will be for nine years.

In addition to Kappel, Nixon appointed these members:

—M.A. Wright, 59, New York, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Humble Oil and Refining Co. of Houston, Tex., nin-year tem.

—Patrick E. Haggery, 56, Dallas, president of Texas Instruments Inc., eight-year term.

—Charles H. Codding, 51, Foraker, Okla., a rancher, seven-year term.

—Crocker Nevin, 47, New York, president of Marine Midland Grace Trust Co. six-year term.

—George E. Johnson, 42, Chicago, founder and president of Johnson Products Co., five-year term.

—Andrew D. Holt, 66, Knoxville, Tenn., former president of the University of Tennessee, four-year term.

—Theodore William Braun, 68, Los Angeles, president of Braun and Co., a labor-management consulting firm, three-year term.

—William J. Curtin, Washington, an attorney, one-year term.

The postmaster general selected by the board will serve as an ex-officio board member. The 10 members then will chose a deputy postmaster general who also will serve on the board.

Pope Paul Observes 73rd Birthday; A Busy Workload

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI turned 73 today in the midst of preparations for the longest journey in papal history —his visit to the Philippines and Australia in November.

At an age when most men have retired and although he never has been a robust man, the Pope was pushing ahead with a particularly heavy work load.

Vatican sources said the Pope's birthday would be work as usual. Italians generally celebrate the feast day of the saint they are named after rather than their birthdays.

As well as planning for the Asian trip —the first made by any pontiff to that part of the world —the Pope was closely following Middle East developments with the hope of offering Vatican intermediation if necessary, the sources said.

The Vatican released the text of a letter Friday in which the Pope instructed Msgr. Jean Rodhain, president of the Vatican relief organization Caritas Internationalis, to spare no effort in aiding victims of the Jordanian civil war.

He also gave $50,000 from his own purse to help the war victims, officials said.

The Pope was preparing for his meeting Monday evening with President Nixon. Vatican sources said the Pope wanted to talk to Nixon about Indochina peace prospects in preparation for the speeches he will make in the Far East. The sources said Paul VI also could be expected to encourage the United States to continue its peace initiative in the Middle East.

Training For Air Marshals Begins Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Nixon administration says the first of 800 military guards, prepared to shoot hijackers if necessary, will begin training Monday for duties aboard commercial airliners.

The first contingent of military air marshals to be trained at Ft. Dix, N.J., will join FBI agents and U.S. marshals deputized by the federal Aviation Administration (FAA) by weeks's end.

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe said at a news conference Friday the military guards would shoot "if it comes to the lives of 200 Americans or a hijacker."

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, making a rare personal appearance attended the news conference with Volpe and Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

Unlike the 200 civilian guards already on the job, the military agents will not have the powers to search and arrest.

So-Called Slowdown By CHP Slows Down

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A move by some California Highway Patrolmen for a slowdown in writing traffic citations to protest Gov. Ronald Reagan's cut in their pay raise is apparently ended.

Conflicting statements were issued by the parties concerned on Friday, but a spokesman at the CHP's headquarters in Sacramento said a check around the state showed CHP service and activity was normal.

Supervisory Inspector Gil A. Stokes also said any type of slowdown was illegal and that officials "would take positive action against any patrolman found to be involved."

The slowdown in issuing traffic tickets, which apparently never really got started, received support from patrolmen all over the state, according to a group of disgruntled officers.

They were protesting the governor's action in slashing their five per cent pay raise voted by the Legislature to three per cent. The CHP officers had received a five per cent boost earlier this year along with other state employees.

There are 5,600 CHP members, of whom 4,900 are traffic officers earning between $834 and $965 monthly.

The disgruntled officers argue that they rank 47th among California law enforcement agencies in pay, but "no. 1 in the number of officers killed in the line of duty."

The move for a slowdown was started by unhappy officers in the Modesto and San Francisco Bay areas.

Veteran Patrolman Thomas Munthe, a spokesman for the disgruntled officers in the Modesto area, said Friday that "the men are returning to normal operations because of the approaching weekend and its heavy traffic."

Spokesmen for disgruntled officers in the San Francisco Bay Area, who asked not to be named, said only five citations were issued by officers in Contra Costa County and only 20 by those in San Francisco.

They said the slowdown was continuing.

In San Jose, Oakland and Solano County, disgruntled patrolmen said ticket issuance was about 20 per cent of normal.

West German Taxis Changing To White

BONN (UPI) —West German taxi drivers are winning their battle to have all cabs painted white instead of black. The change is expected to be made official by the end of 1970.

Judge Sets Second Huey Newton Trial

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—The second manslaughter trial of Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman will start Jan. 11.

Newton was freed last Sept. 5 by the California Supreme Court after serving two years of a 2-to-15 year term on a previous conviction in the gun-battle death of Patrolman John Frey.

The state's high court ordered a new trial and Superior Judge Harold B. Hove Friday set the Jan. 11 date over the objections of Newton's attorney, Charles Garry.

The retrial was ordered because the original trial judge erred in failing to instruct the jury that unconsciousness on the part of the defendant is a legitimate defense. Newton asserted he was unconscious after being wounded in the gunfight and couldn't remember what happened.

Newton attended the court hearing Friday but made no comment other than that he was "bored" with the case.

The oldest discovered shoe is an Egyptian papyrus sandal dating from about 2000 B.C., says the National Geographic.

Home is the sailor, home from the sea and Gallo, too.

Gallo is the 6-year-old brown gelding quarter-horse who somewhat rudely deposited Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum on his backside last Wednesday and then went AWOL.

He's home after being found today by the four children of Dr. John Conway of Mill Valley.

Wornum, who offered a $50 reward for the return of the horse, rented a helicopter Thursday at $95 an hour and vainly scoured the Mount Tamalpais area.

Wornum had just acquired the horse in Sonoma County and had not yet even paid the $300 price tag. The saddle slipped while he was riding, leading to the steed's gallop to freedom, Wornum said.

Fairfax Agrees To Help Fund Projects

Fairfax City Council last night agreed to put up part of the money for a new drainage system and resurfacing of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from Kent Avenue to Pastori Avenue in cooperation with the City of San Anselmo.

After more than an hour of discussion, the council decided to enter into a joint powers agreement with San Anselmo for the project, which is expected to be completed before winter rains flood the area. The joint agreement was necessary because the street is in San Anselmo and the houses affected by the street's flooding are in Fairfax.

No estimate of the cost of the drainage project was available, but cost of the resurfacing of the 8001foot section of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard was put at about $5,000 by Councilman Cornelius Van Vliet.

The Fairfax City Council Also:

MUD SLIDES — Directed the city's legal staff to ask the developer Wally G. Laster to install a drainage system to prevent mud slides in the San Gabriel Drive area.

MERCHANTS — Took under consideration complaints from several Fairfax merchants concerning stray dogs running loose in the city, panhandling, hitchhiking and inadequate parking; also took under consideration merchant complaints against substandard housing, particularly on Broadway near Bolinas Road.

TEEN-AGE DANCES — Accepted a report from the parks and recreation commission complaining of trouble at teen-age dances at the pavilion. The commission announced it was considering new rules for the dances.

APPOINTMENTS — Appointed Gilbert P. Murphy of Bolinas Road to the design review board and Noel A. Cimino of 74 Spring Lane to the parks and recreation commission.

NEXT MEETING — Set the next meeting for 8 p.m. Oct. 12 in the Women's Club.

the war deeply split both Hussein's kingdom and the Arab world. As many as 20,000 persons were reported killed or wounded and thousands were said to be dying of hunger, thirst and unattended wounds.

President Gamal Abdel Nasser accused Hussein's army of massacring Palestinian guerrillas and breaking the cease-fire which began Friday. Hussein denied this and said his nation is pledged to peace despite "continued provocations."

Hussein's new government replaced that of Brig. Mohammed Daoud, who resigned as premier Thursday night. It was Daoud's appointment to head the military government 11 days ago that touched off the war.

When Daoud quit Friday he left a letter in a Cairo hotel room saying he wanted to step down to open the way for establishment of a civilian government of national unity.

Although the new cabinet is civilian oriented, Toukan is not known to be sympathetic to the guerrillas.

Assailant Grabs Man's Money Bag

A San Rafael resident was robbed of $48 in coins by a man who jumped from the rear of a motorcycle and punched and kicked him at 1:15 a.m. today on B Street near Third Street in San Rafael.

Lee Allen Miller of 121 Tamalpais Avenue told police a motorcycle passenger knocked him down and kicked him in the head before fleeing with a money bag containing the coins.

Miller declined medical treatment for a cut lip and ear, according to police.

Youth Arrested On Pot Charge

A 19-year-old San Anselmo youth was arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana at 3 a.m. today near San Anselmo's Memorial Park.

Paul Edward LeClair of 23 Durham Road was in Marin County jail today with bail set at $250. Police discovered the suspected marijuana while questioning LeClair on a suspicious person complaint. Another young man at the scene was released after questioning.

LeClair is to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Wreck Injures Two Teen-agers

The hospital reported Robert Paul Henas, 17, of 4109 Shelter Bay, Mill Valley, was treated for multiple bruises and Anthony Santos, 17, of 412 Hickory Lane, San Rafael, for a mild neck sprain.

Henas told the California Highway Patrol that a skidding car forced him to drive off the road at 9 p.m. Santos was a passenger.

Libby Welding at $39.7 million.

The same day, Bogue filed a protest claiming Schoonmaker had not fulfilled the expressed contract requirements. Schoonmaker also protested, contending that award of a contract would be a violation of law.

Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats directed Resor to cancel the original and solicit new bids. These have never been opened because of the law suit.

Teens Arrested Inside School

Two teen-agers were arrested inside Miller Creek School in Marinwood shortly after 12:30 a.m. today, according to the sheriff's department.

The sheriff's office said the two 17-year-olds, a boy and a girl, were booked into juvenile hall on suspicion of burglary, but had no details of the arrest.

The names of the two were not available.

Cambodians Retake City, Rout Reds

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Cambodian troops today consolidated position in the recaptured city of Tang Kauk and cleared remaining pockets of Communist resistance in the area, Cambodian military officers said.

Cambodian forces conducting their biggest offensive of the six-month war moved into the city 52 miles north of Phnom Penh Friday. North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units had held it and blocked the advance of the Cambodian task force north of Highway 6.

There was no major resistance Friday, although the 2,000 Communists in the area had held off the Cambodian column for several days.

Military officers said they believed the Communists had withdrawn to the east to the safety of a rubber planation 10 miles east of Tang Kauk.

"The Viet Cong pulled out before our final assault," the spokesman said. The Cambodian Command had said the army was trying to entrap the Communist defenders in Tang Kauk but the strategy apparently failed and the defenders escaped.

"By this victory we can press on with our drive to Kompong Thom," the spokesman said. "It proved the Viet Cong, even when they are firmly dug in, cannot stop the Cambodian army.

American spokesmen in Saigon reported eight GIs killed and 34 wounded in light and scattered ground action in South Vietnam Friday. Four Americans were killed and 10 wounded when their trucks hit mines in Quang Tin and Quang Ngai Provinces, 50 miles south of Da Nang.

South Vietnamese spokesmen said government troops killed 54 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese soldiers in two battles northwest and southwest of Svay Rieng, in the Parrot's Beak area of Cambodia, 72 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

The task force launched its drive from Skoun, 35 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, Sept. 9 and reached the southern edge of Tang Kauk Sept. 13 but ran into intensive rocket and mortar fire from Communist forces so well entrenched that even American air strikes failed to dislodge them.

The purpose of the drive was to clear Highway 6 between Phnom Penh and Kompong Thom, an important communication center of 10,000 persons 80 miles north of the capital and to relieve the siege of the northern city, the target of almost nightly rocket attacks for two months.

The task force began with eight battalions or some 4,300 troops and reinforcements added another eight battalions for a total of some 10,000 soldiers earlier this week for the final assaults on Tang Kauk.

Suspect Nabbed On Grand Theft

A 24-year-old San Francisco woman was arrested last night on suspicion of grand theft after a sheriff's deputy stopped the car in which she was a passenger for a traffic violation.

Jill Roberta Dunn, who also was booked on suspicion of failure to furnish identification, was taken to county jail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

The sheriff's office reported the arrest was made a 9 p.m., but had no other details.

FIRES

for a fire and hampered hard-pressed fire fighters whose ranks were stretched thin by several other widely separated blazes.

Mark Jones, a UPI reporter who surveyed the fires from a police helicopter, described it as a "cauldron of flames."

"It looked like 10,000 campfires. The hills were peppered with small blazes and showers of sparks would erupt as the wind shot through," he said.

Jones said the Chatsworth blaze, 30 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, and the Malibu blaze, west of Los Angeles, appeared to be heading towards each other. They were two miles apart.

Roy Klein, who lives in a housing tract in Chatsworth, said, "I was gone 30 minutes to pick up my kids at school and when I returned my house was destroyed."

The Malibu fire erupted at Calabasas on the inland side of the mountains which parallel the coast. A six-mile wide wall of flames, shooting up to 100 feet high, swept 14 miles across the mountains to the coast, destroying 15 Salvation Army cabins. When the flames reached the Pacific Coast highway, site of many expensive beach homes of celebrities, a fireman said he saw "a couple of dozen" residences go up in flames.

A condominium apartment house on a bluff overlooking the Pacific was surrounded at one point on three sides by the Malibu fire but was saved by water-drops from one of the four helicopters employed by the Fire Department. However, the powerful winds—up to 80 miles an hour—hampered the use of helicopters.

The Malibu blaze also destroyed the Catholic Church's Sierra Retreat, a monastery, and severly damaged the Hughes Aircraft Co. research facility.

The latest fires were the worst in Southern California since the fall of 1961 when a blaze in the Bel Air and Brentwood sections of Los Angeles damaged or destroyed 496 homes.

Also destroyed in that blaze were four schools and 20 other buildings. Property losses, excluding automobiles, totaled an estimated $24 million.

Big Crowd At Prison Art Show

Between 7,000 and 8,500 persons turned out at San Quentin for the 16th annual prison art show prior to 11 a.m. today, according to a prison official.

Associate Warden Wayne Bartels said receipts for the morning reached $15,000 in the first two-and-a-half hours of the show, which was to run to 6 p.m.

Last year's crowd was 13,000.

OBITUARIES

CHARLES SCHRADER

Funeral for Charles Henry Schrader of Sacramento, father of Willis R. Schrader of San Rafael, will be Monday at 1 p.m. at W.H. Gormley and Son Mortuary, Sacramento.

Schrader, 83, had been a journeyman painter in Sacramento since 1922, but also operated a fishing boat, the Zulu, out of Bodega Bay when not painting.

Schrader suffered an apparent heart attack while painting the bottom of his boat in Sausalito and died Thursday at a local hospital.

Born in Genesco Township, N.D., he moved to Miles City, Mont., as a child.

He belonged to the Painters' Union and attended a Lutheran Church in Sacramento.

Also surviving are his wife, Mabel of Sacramento; a son, Raymond E. Schrader of Sacramento; a daughter, Caroline Erbele of Richmond; a brother, William Schrader of Richmond; six grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

Friends may call at the W. H. Gormley and Son Mortuary after 5 p.m. today. Burial arrangements are pending.

TONY ANTONIO

Tony Antonio, 60, of Fremont, formerly of Novato, died yesterday in a Fremont hospital after a brief illness.

Antonio was a warehouseman for the American Distillery Co., moving to Fremont with the company when it left Sausalito several years ago. He was a member of the Union City local of the warehousemen's union.

Born in Newman, Stanislaus County, Antonio had lived in Novato for about 20 years before moving to Fremont.

Survivors are his wife, Edith; a son, Ralph of Novato; three daughters, Helen Giossi of Bell, Napa County, and Alice and Betty Antonio, at home; seven brothers, Joseph and Walt of Novato, Frank, Harry and Bill, all of Sonoma; John of Petaluma and Raymond of North Sacramento; three sisters, Bea Correia of Sacramento, Mary Azevedo of Sonoma and Rose Silva of Novato, and three grandchildren.

Funeral will be at 1 p.m. Monday at the Redwood Chapel Mortuary in Novato, with burial in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery. Friends may call at the mortuary tomorrow.

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, faced with the unanimous opposition of San Francisco supervisors to any long-range transit plan using city streets for commuter buses, yesterday radically altered a controversial study of extending rail rapid transit to Marin from Richmond.

The study by the district's consultants doing its long-range plan was to have assumed that Southern Marin commuters would be served by a bus system using Highway 101 and San Francisco streets. By yesterday's vote, however, the study was changed to assume that such a bus system would have the advantages of both its own right-of-way in Southern Marin and of underground routes in San Francisco.

The head of the Kaiser Engineering team doing the study, Gifford Randall, objected that such a system probably would fail to meet the goal of the Richmond loop. The goal of the loop, which was urged by the citizens advisory panel to the consultants, was to disperse residential and work patterns north and east away from San Francisco.

But Randall noted that such a high-speed bus system in Southern Marin still would encourage use of the direct bus link to San Francisco instead of the dispersion sought by the Richmond loop.

Randall was speaking strictly from the point of view of making the Richmond loop study valid to show if it would have the effect its proponent's favor. Randall, however, previously has said he favors one of the four other possible solutions, all of which use a direct connection to San Francisco via either a second deck on the bridge or an underwater tube.

The long-range transit plan was ordered by the 1968 Legislature, and is due for presentation to the 1971 Legislature in early April. The consultants' findings are to be subjected to a series of 21 public hearings throughout the district from November to February. Six hearings would be held in Marin.

The hearing schedule assumed, however, that the consultants would meet the original deadline late next month, but the consultants already have said that the unexpected study of the Richmond loop will stretch their work until mid-December. The hearing schedule, therefore, may be subject to extensive revision.

Completion of the consultants' work also will mean that cost figures for each solution will become available for the first time. One peek at the findings was disclosed yesterday by Randall when he said "our preliminary judgment is that a bridge would be cheaper than a tube" if the Richmond loop were built. This would have to be a new bridge, since the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge cannot carry trains, according to state engineers.

The Richmond loop study will add up to $49,165 to the $520,000 cost of the long-range plan. The loop, an extension of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District line, would take rail transit to Novato.

The vote to make the change in the study was approved, 10-3, the bare minimum of votes needed. Marin's three representatives voted for the change.

In a related matter, the citizens advisory panel submitetd its "statement of goals" which it designed as a guide for the board to use in choosing among the transit solutions studied by Kaiser and Okamoto-Liskamm, the urban design consultants.

The panel, chaired by Margaret Azevedo of Tiburon, questioned the assumed level of population that was the basis for the planning of the long-range system. "Do we really want 14 million people and 2,400 square miles of urbanized area in the Bay Region 50 years from now? What would life be like under such circumstances?" the panel asked.

The "overriding task," they declared, "is to diminish our dependence on the private automobile. To us, this means a total transit system serving not only commuters, but off-peak and weekend users as well."

The panel also questioned the possibility of planning "with any certainty" for the year 2015, the end of the plan's projections. Its statement favored a system keeping "options open for new developments in transportation and style of life."

Directors agreed to discuss the panel's report in depth at a later date. The 16-member panel's findings were distilled from the work of a committee of about 75 citizens.

Mrs. Azevedo, presenting the panel's report, said "we expect there will be some disagreement" with its findings.

Bid Accepted For Premiums On New Insurance; Some Criticism

Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday warily accepted a low bid of $38,500 for premiums on new insurance, but sharply criticized the district's insurance advisers for turning in an earlier bid for $12,000 for the same coverage.

The advisers, Marsh & McLennan, previously had submitted the higher bid, but it was rejected by the bridge directors as too high.

Director L. E. Castner of Sonoma County, chairman of the insurance committee, said the company explained it "went to new sources" the second time, resulting in the lower offer. But saveral directors grumbled that the huge drop in the second bid indicated something was wrong with the first.

Director C. Paul Bettini, a San Rafael councilman, suggested that the board "watch our insurance advisers closer." The disparity between the two bids, he declared, was "outrageous. There 's no excuse — they should have gone to all markets the first time."

Director Stephan C. Leonoudakis of San Francisco suggested that consumer advocate Ralph Nader be called in to check the matter. "No one around here's going to do it," he said.

The disputed insurance is for $10 million in comprehensive personal injury and property damage liability coverage. The premium is for three years of coverage. Two other brokers also bid, one at $58,125, the other at $75,037. All three bids were with $50,000 deductible provisions for any one claim.

The previous coverage was for $7 million. The increased coverage resulted from the district's entry into the transit business.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring said that the drop in the second bid was because the entire insurance industry was "chaotic."

In the end, the new coverage was approved, 12-1, Leonoudakis dissenting.

The Golden Gate Bridge District Board Also:

CLOSED — Held a 30-minute closed meeting to discuss "condemnation of some parcels," reportedly of land on Corte Madera's waterfront for a ferry terminal. The district's attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, reported afterward that no decision had been made in the closed session.

REPAIR — Approved a $355,000 contract with Ammann and Whitney, New York engineers, to engineer bridge repairs totaling $5,225,000, including replacement of every other suspender rope.

BICYCLES — Approved opening the bicycle path on the western sidewalk from 4:30 p.m. to sunset on Friday and days before holidays, effectively immediately. It already is open on weekends and holidays.

SUICIDE — Invited the San Francisco architectural firm of Anshen and Allen to submit, at no cost to the district, its proposed designs for a suicide barrier on the bridge.

PRINTING — Approved a $14,699 contract with Recorder-Sunset of San Francisco to reprint 1,000 copies of the original chief engineer's final report. Copies are disbursed as part of the district's public relations, and original copies no longer are available.

LIQUOR — Received report from Luehring that the district is appealing the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control's denial of a liquor license for the district's ferryboat, and cut the percentage of gross revenue due from the ferry caterer from 21.7 to 8 per cent pending approval of the permit.

GREYHOUND — Authorized Transit Mgr. Donald White and Jenkins to oppose Greyhound Lines' application to cut back midday service in Marin.

Ky May Not Give Victory Rally Speech

PARIS (UPI) — Diplomatic sources said today South Vietnamese Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky has decided not to attend a controversial rally in Washington next month.

The report came as Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's foreign policy adviser, arrived in Paris for conferences with Ky and Ambassador David K.E. Bruce, chief U.S. delegate to the Vietnam talks.

Ky is scheduled to appear on "Face the Nation," a CBS Television interview program at 11:30 a.m. EDT Sunday and diplomatic sources said his decision on the rally would be made public then.

Ky has been invited to attend the "Rally for Victory" in Washington Oct. 3 by its sponsor, radio evangelist Carl McIntire. White House officials have left the clear impression that Kissinger would try to discourage Ky's appearance.

Hayward Accord

HAYWARD (UPI)—A three-day strike by 100 city employes has ended by unanimous approval of a "memorandum of understanding" hammered out by negotiators.

Major item included in Friday's agreement was initiation of a grievance procedure involving final binding arbitration. Anaheim is the only other city in California to have a comparable clause.

Deposits Trickle In To Hunger Hike

Only about $1,200 of between $20,000 and $30,000 pledged as a result of the Marin "Walk Against Hunger" had been deposited by yesterday, the Crocker Citizens Bank of San Anselmo said.

The 20-mile walk Sunday drew more than 1,000 walkers who were pledged an average of $1 a mile, according to organizers.

The bank said deposits to benefit the Marin Economic Opportunity Council, the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation and the South Korean campaign of Meals for Millions are expected to continue through next week.

Hayakawa Sure College's Mass Unrest Is Over

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco State college head S.I. Hayakawa believes prospects are "excellent" for another peaceful year at his school.

The outspoken 64-year-old educator, from Mill Valley, told an enthusiastic audience at the Commonwealth Club Friday that the "dreadful winter of 1968-69 is now ancient history."

The public and the news media must now realize that at S.F. State "it's a different kind of ball game."

He says the days of mass turmoil and confrontation are over and all that he now fears are isolated incidents of "silent thuggery," such as bombing.

He said it was important for the school to be in a permanent state of unrest" in its intellectual life, but said it should be "normal, healthy controversy."

In 1869, Alameda became the terminus for the first transcontinental railroad.

UAW Resumes Talks With G.M. Today

DETROIT (UPI)—Their last General Motor Corp. paychecks in hand, striking United Auto Workers prepared today for what a UAW negotiator called the "slow, tough, painful" job ahead.

Strike benefit checks of $30 to $40 a week start Tuesday for workers who have done their picket line and other duties since the strike began at midnight, Sept. 14.

Negotiations resume today and were scheduled again Sunday, despite pessimistic reports on any progress toward a new three-year contract covering G.M. plants in the U.S. and Canada.

Altogether, 349,910 UAW workers were on strike and 36,065 others have been laid off at unstruck G.M. plants producing parts for other automakers. Other layoffs were spreading.

Another 2,000 members of the International Union of Electrical Workers were laid off indefinitely Friday at the Delco Products division plant at Rochester, N.Y. Uniroyal, Inc., announced Friday it will close tire plants at Los Angeles and Chicopee, Mass., for one week starting Monday. About 2,900 workers will be affected.

Uniroyal, which produces tires for G.M. cars, previously had laid off 2,350 workers at plants in Alabama, Louisiana and Detroit.

Friday's negotiating sessions were concerned mainly with noneconomic issues. Earl Bramblett, chief G.M. negotiator, said "some issues were resolved today, but no major ones."

Closed Meeting

A closed meeting of the Novato Unified School District board has been set for 9 p.m. Monday in the administrative offices to instruct Supt. James G. Bunker on employee salary negotiations.

Walker Basin Grass Blaze Is Unchecked

CALIENTE (UPI)—A grass-fire raged uncontrolled at Walker Basin several miles northeast of this Kern County Community today and embattled firemen said high winds and hot weather are stifling efforts at control.

The fire, of undetermined origin, started about noon Friday and by 7 a.m. today had charred over 1,000 acres of scrub and brush land.

Fire officials said no injuries had been reported to the 280 men fighting the blaze and no property damage had occurred.

The southward moving fire was fanned during the night by high winds. Kern County fire department spokesmen said many fire crews had been sent to Southern California to fight fires in that area and Kern crews were shorthanded.

A spokesman for fire officials said predicted high winds and hot weather for today may delay containment for "one or two days." A plea was again issued to hunters to be extra careful because of the extremely dangerous fire conditions.

Carbon Monoxide Kills Wife Of Top Surgeon

The victim was Mrs. Abraham Sirbu. Her husband, a distinguished orthopedic surgeon, also was a victim of the accident.

His condition was reported as critical in the intensive care unit at Mount Zion Hospital where he served for years as chief of orthopedic surgery.

Police believe Mrs. Sirbu failed to turn off the ignition in her car and fumes were carried through air ducts into the bedroom.

The engine was not running when police opened the garage door but the engine was still very hot.

Mothers Often Forget To Show Love When Busy Raising Kids

DEAR HELEN:

I love my mother, but if she loves me, I hate the way she shows it.

She thinks I'm boy crazy. If I just say hellow to a boy, she thinks I'm in love with him, or acting like a cheap pick-up. The other night I was walking a little ahead of my folks downtown and some teen-age boys drove by in a car. One said, "Hi" and I said it back, and Mom flipped. I was just being friendly and so were they.

She yells at me constantly about stupid things. One minute she's mad, the next l o v e y-dovey. That means she wants me to do something like make breakfast or grocery shop, etc. After that's done, I'm crawling the walls because she starts to yell again. If I defend myself, she slaps me for talking back.

She tells me she wants me to be decent. Everyone I know and some of Mom's friends think I'm a sweet kid.

Like I say, Helen, I'm sure Mom loves me, but isn't there a more affectionate way of showing it? I'm tired of being used as a whipping post. — THE SUCKER

P.S. Please print this so my mother can read it.

DEAR SUCKER:

I've printed it so every mother can read it. All too often parents are so busy "raising their kids right" that they forget the vital importance of empathy, friendship, humor, demonstrated love.

Give your mother points for the right upbringing—otherwise you woudn't be a sweet kid. But I hope she reads your letter and remembers how necessary those other points are too.—H.

DEAR HELEN:

My best friend is always telling me I am her best friend. The strange thing about her is she is always inviting boys and girls over to her house for parties. They're nice kids and I know most of them — but she never invites me. The next day she calls and tells me about the parties. She says most of the kids act dumb but she keeps on inviting them, while leaving me out.

Why does she do this if I am her best friend? If she doesn't want me, at least she shouldn't mention the parties to me afterwards. — LONELY

DEAR LONELY:

Best friends should be able to tell each other what bothers them. If you nurse resentments, you won't be best friends long.

Ask this girl how she would feel if you gave a party and left her out, then expected her to hear all about it next day. If she truly likes you, she'll have a good explanation or start being more considerate.— H.

DEAR HELEN:

I was going steady with a guy. Then my girl friend came over one day and he fell for her because she is top heavy for her age, which is 13. (His age.) Are all boys like this? — T.E.

DEAR T.

Only age-13 types who judge girls by their measurements. Maybe you'd be better off without him? — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Battel in care of the Independent-Journal.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS F. COOK

Pamela Vassar Wed To Thomas F. Cook

Pamela Olene Vassar of Belmont b e c a m e the bride of Thomas Frederick Cook of San Rafael last Saturday in a ceremony at St. Raphael Catholic Church. A reception followed at Dominic's restaurant in San Rafael.

J u d y Hedberg of Millbrae was maid of honor, and the bride's sister, Cheryl Vassar of Livermore, was the bridesmaid.

Best man was Skip Kirchner of San Anselmo, and guests were ushered to their seats by the bridegroom's brother, Mike Cook of San Rafael, and the bride's brother, Robert Vassar of Livermore.

Pamela is the daughter of Robert J. Vassar of Clearlake Highlands. She was graduated from Weaver Airline School in Kansas City, Mo., and is employed by Air West Airlines inn San Francisco.

Thomas is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cook of San Rafael. He was graduated from San Rafael High School and attended College of Marin. The bridegroom is employed by Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in San Rafael. He is also the brother of Kenneth Cook of Petaluma, and his grandparents are Mrs. Augusta Pfeffer of San Rafael and Mr. and Mrs. John Cook of St. Helena.

Following a wedding trip to Martinique in the French West Indies, the couple will live in South San Francisco.

Vinyls Need Top Stitching

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm going to bravely tackle a vinyl coat and expect to complete it for a tiny fraction of the cost of the ready-made coats. I notice that some of the ready-made coats have top stitching on them, one row about ¼-inch from the edge and one row exactly on the edge of all outer parts of the garment, including the sleeves and the hem. Why is this stitching used on some garments and not on others?

MRS. J.E.P.

DEAR MRS. J.E.P.,

The details of a garment are entirely up to the manufacturer, and you will always find a variation. Usually, the more top stitching you find on a garment, the more t a i l o r e d it looks. Sometimes a coat is designed for dual purposes.

I have checked with many of my friends who have these vinyl coats that they have purchased. It seems that in every case, the ones that have the two rows of machine stitching, especially the one row that is on the exact edge of the garment, don't seem to crack or peel as much as the ones without stitching. Wherever there is a break or fold in the garment, you will find a tendency in the vinyl to peel or crack. However, the machine stitching seems to prevent this.

From hy observation, I would suggest to machine top stitch any of the outer edges of your garment. This must be done very accurately because it will certainly be a detail that will be obvious.

"Since waistlines are no longer a thing of the past, and we'll all be needing belts again, I wish to add a little tip that I learned the hard way.

"Before making a fabric covered belt, shrink the belting or grosgrain you use for the backing before you make the belt. The belting does have a tendency to draw up and the fabric of your garment doesn't, thus you have a wrinkled up belt that often ends up too short. It's a good idea to shrink zippers too when they are to be used in washable clothes."

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm just learning to tailor my first coat, and our teacher says we should buy wool for our tailoring project. I think it would be much easier and much less expensive to use a polyester knit, but I can't argue with her. What do you think?

MRS. L.M.

DEAR MRS. L.M.,

I agree with your teacher 100 per cent and wish there were more like her. When you are studying an art as involved as tailoring a garment, you must use the media that will lend itself to the skills you will learn. Only wool shapes, eases, presses and tailors the way you want a finished garment to look.

For the most part, you will be working with wools most of the time when it comes to suits and coats. It's just a little extra, rather than q u i c k l y making s o m e t h i n g out of polyester knits, whether it's a dress, coat or suit, and you would be cheating yourself of the opportunity to learn how to handle much more difficult fabric.

A f t e r you have completed your tailoring course, it will be simple to use some of these techniques on cottons, silks or whatever. You'll be glad you listened to your teacher, and this is certainly the year to learn to tailor because most of us will need at least one new coat.

MRS. M.F. SAYS: "Everytime I go to the fabric departments, my little boy is simply fascinated with the beautiful fake furs and just loves to cuddle up to them. Since this is his first year at school and the small children were asked to bring a small rug for their rest period, it occurred to me to buy a piece of fake fur instead of a rug for him. This is the greatest security blanket a child could ever have. He simply loves it and is the envy of all the children. I thought this might be a good idea to pass on to your readers. It only takes minutes to bind the edges where the fur was cut, shake it out thoroughly to prevent any loose fibers that could cause sneezing, and you're in business."

DEAR EUNICE,

I often hesitate to make anything out of corduroy because there are so many garments available already made up that are so reasonable. Lately, I've been looking at better sports clothes and find the prices are between $100. and $200. I am wondering what makes such a difference in price? Also, many of the ready-made garments in the higher prices use the corduroy with the lines going around instead of up and down.

MRS. F.E.R.

DEAR MRS. F.E.R.,

It is true, corduroy is ordinarily a very inexpensive piece of cotton. Because of it's easy care and wearability, it is mass produced and therefore, very inexpensive.

The minute a designer takes a piece of fabric to his heart, regardless of the initial cost, and places it in limited quantities, you will find the price is astronomical. Many of the thick, thin, or uneven wale corduroys are much more effective when cut on the cross-grain. This is again one of the features that makes the garment stand out among the masses.

Corduroy may be cut in either t h e lengthwise or crosswise grain, but you must remember to always cut each piece in the same direction. If your pattern doesn't call for the cross-grain, and most of them don't, use your own creativity, be different, and you'll be proud of your results.

Social Worker Tours Orient And Attends Conference In Philippines

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. Julia Rose Phillips of Mill Valley, a social service consultant with the State Department of Social Welfare in San Francisco, has returned from a study abroad tour vacation highlighted by attendance at the International conference of Social Welfare held in Manila Sept. through 6-12.

Mrs. Phillips says she was amazed at the resourcefulness of the Philippine people's handling of the conference right after the disastrous floods in Manila.

Emphasis under the conference theme, "New Strategies for Social Welfare," she says, was on the need to deal with issues on an international level and the necessity for more honesty in facing issues and recognizing the role of youth.

Preceding t h e conference Mrs. Phillips's tour included Expo '70, Kyoto, Tokyo and Hakone in Japan, Bangkok, Singapore, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Penang. She visited welfare agencies in the major cities. An active member of the Marin County Humane Society and deeply concerned with animal welfare, she was pleased to find organizations comparable to the SPCA in Singapore and Penang. In Bangkok she found the condition of animals deplorable.

In Singapore she was interested to learn about SOS (Samaritans of Singapode) dealing with suicide prevention and other personal crises. She was surprised to find the suicide rate in the Orient highest among students.

RADIATION STERILIZES LIZARD — This is one of several score leopard lizards exposed to radiation in a controlled experiment sponsored by the AEC and UCLA. Relatively low amounts of radiation produced sterility within three years, a result scientists said was unexpected. Mice also exposed to the radiation exhibited significantly reduced life spans.

UNEXPECTED RESULT

Radiation Sterility Shock

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

JACKASS FLATS, Nev. — Female leopard lizards exposed to low levels of gamma radiation in their native habitat became sterile after three years.

This is one of the conclusions of a six-year, computer-aided study conducted by University of California at Los Angeles scientists here in the sandy desert scrub 70 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

Scientists and technicians from the UCLA Laboratory of Nuclear Medicine and Radiation Biology monitored native populations of plants and animals, using a computer at the school's Los Angeles campus to process the data.

Regular computerized censuses were taken in a 20-acre fenced desert area exposed to low levels of gamma radiation from a radioactive cesium source perched atop a 50-foot tower. The area is part of the Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada Test Site.

"In 1967 we observed that leopard lizards in the irradiated plot were failing to reproduce," said Dr. Frederick B. Turner, who supervised reptile studies. "Autopsy of three females from the area two years later revealed that they lacked ovaries and had highly increased amounts of body fat." Radiation was considered the reason.

The scientists said these results were remarkable in view of the relatively low amounts of radiation received. These lizards were exposed to about 1,500 units of radiation from 1964 through 1967.

The investigation relied heavily upon various computer procedures, particularly the sorting and merging of new information into existing material. The computer processed some 65,000 project records.

"Another species of lizard in the irradiated area, the side-blotched uta, apparently survived exposure without ill effects," Dr. Turner continued. "This difference may be due to the much shorter life-span of the uta, which rarely survives longer than two years.

"Thus the cumulative dose received by the longer-lived leopard lizards, whose life span is eight or nine years may account for the observed sterility in females of this species."

Tiny pocket mice exposed to the constant radiation exhibited a significantly reduced life span, according to studies by Dr. Norman R. French.

Another aspect of the study revealed that pocket mice have an ability to "turn off" during lean years these one-fourth-ounce mammals apparently are able to survive food shortages by sleeping in their burrows, thus reducing their nutrition requirements sharply.

The studies turned up 25 pocket mice that had survived two markedly lean years, when plant growth and seeds were even more scarce than usual in the desert.

Dr. Turner pointed out that the fenced area provided a measure of control that made the studies especially accurate.

DANCE REVIEW

Bayanihan Group Rich In Folklore

By MARIE RAMEAU

SAN FRANCISCO — The Bayanihan Philippine Dance Company might best be described as a full theatrical display of the unique cultural heritage of the Philippines. Last night three prominent strains — indigenous tribal, Arabic-Malayan and Spanish — were evident. The program was a prologue — "The Pledging of the Peace" — and five suites.

"Kalinga — Of Signs and Omens" drew its inspiration from the Mountain Province of north-central Luzon and included warriors, ceremony and a wedding dance, culminating in a frenzied celebration.

The impact of Europe was apparent in "Ecos de la Ermita." A strong Spanish influence led to the "Philippinization" of such dances as the waltz, Habanera and Jota. Elegantly styled, these presented a haunting evocation of the aristocratic Spanish quarter of old Manila.

From the Muslim island of Mindanao came the "Mindanao Tapestry." Its first strands belong to the authentic "Tutungan Festival," whereas the last are distinctly Maranao and Magindanao, presented as festival entertainment. Most notable is the "Singkil," in which a prince and princess dexterously weave among crossed bamboo poles clapped in syncopated rhythms.

"Tagabili" proceeds from a tribe of that name. Chanted by a narrator and chorus, it unfolds into a solemn, tragically dramatic structure. The ruling datu slays his brother and his daughter is consequently fated to die. To avert misfortune, a noble suitor receives her hand, but the girl is stricken, and with her death catastrophe overcomes the village. A symbolic burning of his house tolls the extinction of the datu's line.

"Bayanihan" is a Tagalog expression for "working together," and the company propagates no stars. After this name, the final suite presented a lowland festival condensing the full cycle of village life and ending with the "Tinikling," most celebrated of Philippine dances.

Bayanihan features the entire spectrum of Philippine musical instruments, as well as a diversity of authentic costumes corresponding to the area and period of the dances.

The company's present organization traces to an intensive study by San Francisco's Asia Foundation. It is indeed worth crossing the bridge for this repertoire, to be repeated today at 8:30 p.m. at the Masonic Auditorium.

Campsites Shut Temporarily On Mount Tamalpais

Although Bootjack is temporarily closed to overnight camping, Pan Toll is still open, and groups may make reservations to camp at Alice Eastwood Camp and Kirby Cove, according to Robert K. Crawford, Marin area manager for the state Department of Parks and Beaches.

Crawford's office said the Bootjack closing is not a result of the vandalism which closed it and several other grounds in Mount Tamalpais State Park in previous years. It's more a case of being "tired out."

Plans are to repair, replant where needed, and give the vegetation a chance to regrow, the area office said.

Jordan Granted $5 Million For Emergency Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon announced Saturday that he has ordered $5 million to be made available from government contingency funds for emergency relief for victims of the Jordanian civil war.

The president made the announcement on the eve of his trip to Europe tomorrow.

He disclosed also that he is asking Undersecretary of State John Irwin to take personal charge of the relief effort and coordinate it with those of voluntary American agencies and international organizations.

The President also reaffirmed a disclosure Friday by Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard that the United States will replace military equipment Jordan has lost, and indicated that Jordan might receive some military equipment beyond that.

Her License Plate May Bring A Grin

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Inmates at the license plate factory at Folsom State Prison may get a chuckle stamping out some of the new personalized license plates.

For example, there may be a few grins when they get the order from one woman who wants JKT-34B.

A state Motor Vehicles Department (DMV) spokesman said the JKT stood for her initials. He did not know about the 34B, but the convicts will probably hazard a guess or two.

"If she wants to advertise, it's all right with us," he said. And the prisoners may get a little thirsty when they stamp out the sudsy request for HAMMS.

The DMV spokesman said Thursday that since the new personalized license program went into effect a month ago his agency has received some 4,500 requests.

Gov. Ronald Reagan signed the bill permitting the plates for an additional $25 with the revenue going for improvement of California's ecology.

DMV Deputy Registrar Elmer Brown said that once the plates start hitting the streets "the idea will be even better advertised" and his agency should be flooded with requests.

The most popular request, he said, was for PEACE.

The one who gets the plate will be decided at a drawing next month.

Most car owners want letters spelling out their names.

But, Brown said, some have a penchant for the bizarre.

For example, one request from Southern California was for BRUIN. Brown said he presumed this was from a rah-rah UCLA student.

Another wanted BEAR. A University of California, Berkeley, student? The registrar said he did not know.

There were also requests for BANJO, DERBY, SMILE, MINUS 1, VIP, EGO, MR BUG and GIDGET.

Brown said offensive requests would be rejected.

Drug Hearing For San Rafael Pair

A preliminary hearing has been set in Marin Municipal Court for Oct. 19 for Cathy Brownell and Russell Ellis, both of San Rafael, who were arrested Aug. 6 on drug charges.

Mrs. Brownell is accused of possessing LSD and marijuana and Ellis of possessing pot.

They were arrested after drug agents with a search warrant said they found suspected pot plants, hashish and LSD tabs in their house at 139 Bayview Drive.

Woman's Body Discovered In Lyndon B. Johnson Lake

KINGSLAND, Tex. (UPI)— Llano County Sheriff Gale Ligon does not know how the body of a 44-year-old woman got into Lake Lyndon Baines Johnson but he strongly suspects it was no accident. The woman had been missing five years.

"We don't know yet if there was foul play; we'll just have to wait for a report from Austin," Ligon said Friday night.

"But from evidence at the scene, it looked as if the car had been deliberately pushed or driven into the water."

Former President Lyndon B. Johnson has frequently boated in the lake, which is near his ranch and which was named for him.

The lake is being partly drained for a hydroelectric project. As the water sank below the 25-foot level, it exposed a sunken automobile in which was the skeleton of Mrs. Charlene Frances Sigler of Kingsland.

Mrs. Sigler had been missing since June 2, 1965, when she left Kingsland for her son's graduation from Texas Christian University in Fort Worth.

Mrs. Sigler and her husband operated a motel at Kingsland. The son attended TCU because Mrs. Sigler had lived in Fort Worth from 1942 until about two months before her disappearance.

The skeleton was removed from the rusted automobile, identified through papers on it and sent to the Department of Public Safety crime laboratory in Austin, the state capital.

The son Mrs. Sigler wanted to see graduated, Wayne Brown, said she was missing a week before he learned about it.

"The way we found out about it, I sent her a birthday card and her husband, (Fred Sigler) called and said, 'Isn't she up there?" Brown said. "And we started checking. The family worked almost day and night for two years, even in Austin, but nothing came of it."

Purebred Brahma Cattle Increase

The association numbers about 3,600 members in the United States and 37 foreign countries. Registrations to date total 428,000 head.

"This increase in breed activity can largely be attributed to an increasing demand for Brahman bulls for commercial crossbreeding," said association president Robert L. Massey.

Portable Cotton Candy Machine

KYOTO, Japan (UPI) — A Kyoto firm has developed a portable machine to make cotton candy at home. Crystal sugar is put on a revolving tray which produces the cotton candy by centrifugal force. The machine is small enough to place on a kitchen table.

West To Affect Singaporeans

SINGAPORE (UPI) —Future Singaporeans are expected to adopt more Western attitudes and behaviour.

A survey by Dr. J. A. MacDougal, Singapore University sociologist, said this would result from the growth of English-educated and English-speaking sections of the population. He also said nine out of 10 citizens of various races like to call themselves Singaporeans, not Indians, Malays or Chinese.

Novato Youth Gets Marijuana Hearing

A preliminary hearing has been set in Marin Municipal Court for Oct. 6 for Dennis John Hachmyer, 22, of Novato, who is charged with possessing marijuana on Sept. 6.

Hachmyer was arrested after an officer said he found him and a 13-year-old girl in a pickup truck at 1:50 a.m. in San Marin. The girl was cited for violation of curfew and Hachmyer arrested after a bag of suspected pot was found in the truck.

Agnew Claims Spock's Book Bred Revolt

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew read from the baby care book of Dr. Benajmin Spock Friday night and blamed its advice to parents for helping foster a "pervasive policy of permissiveness."

Agnew told a $150-a-plate fund-raising dinner the book has sold more than 25 million copies. "Don't knock it," he said, and then read: "You have to compromise. Overlook some of his (the child's) less irritating bad habits, realizing that they are not permanent."

Spock's book, Agnew said, advocates careful avoidance of "bossiness."

A TRAGIC MISTAKE

"Who do you suppose is to blame when, 10 years later, that child comes home from college and sits down at the table with dirty, bare feet and a disorderly faceful of hair?" Agnew asked. "As much as sociological soreheads hate to admit it," the vice president said, the recent "pervasive policy of permissiveness has turned out to be a tragic mistake. The age of indulgence has eroded personal responsibility and corrupted discipline. It has replaced respect for authority with fear of repression."

BALONEY INSIDE-OUT

Earlier about 300 young persons passed. out baloney sandwiches to passersby with leaflets asking, "Why pay $150 for baloney inside when you can get it free outside?"

Agnew told the audience of about 2,000 persons his recent campaign trips have a double mission: "Specifically, to help elect men to public office who will lean hard against the trend toward permissiveness;" and, in general, to mobilize a silent majority which has been "bulldozed for years" into thinking their values are "embarrassingly out of style."

But, the vice president said, "the age of indulgences is at long last coming to attend. The time of individual responsibility is at hand.

"Just as past permissiveness led to alienation and disorder, I am confident that the new sense of responsibility that is taking hold today will lead to greater self respect in every American and a far deeper mutual respect between genrations."

Rangers Contain Garberville Fire

—Exhausted firefighters have contained a forest fire which destroyed 12 summer cabins and blackened 3,500 acres of redwood trees in Northern California.

A group of 450 forest rangers and volunteers managed late Friday to secure a fire line around the heavily wooded area 12 miles north of Garberville. Four planes dropped chemical retardants on the blaze.

No injuries were reported and the cause was unknown.

Balloon Hunt May Be Off

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Coast Guard today was considering whether to continue the search for the missing balloon "Free Life" and its three passengers after a search vessel ruled out any connection between the missing balloon and debris floating in the area where the balloon was believed downed.

The Coast Guard said the cutter Ingram, which rushed to the search area Friday with another Coast Guard cessel when a plane spotted the debris about 300 miles southeast of Newfoundland, was ordered to return to port after the flotsam was "evaluated" as an ammunition holder.

The other cutter, Dallas, was ordered to remain in the search area pending a decision by Coast Guard officials whether to continue the search.

Two Men Freed On Pot Charges

Marijuana possession charges against David Joel Shute, 19, and Stanley Allen Jacobs, 21, both residents of a San Rafael hotel, were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court because no chemical analysis of the suspected pot had been made.

Judge Peter Allen Smith dismissed the case. The men were arrested Aug. 4.

THE PUBLIC PAYROLL

San Rafael Salary Outlay

Salaries of public employees have been the subject of strong debate this year in budget sessions throughout Marin, at meetings of the board of supervisors, at meetings of city councils and of school district and special district boards.

Employees and their representatives, pleading for large pay increases, cited the rising cost of living and often argued that more money was paid in other counties, cities or districts for similar work.

Few employees got as much as they requested. Most local agencies granted more than they were willing at the outset.

The 1970-71 payrolls of all local agencies in Marin as of the start of the new fiscal year, July 1, are being published by the Independent-Journal during the next few weeks as a complete accounting of what is now paid public employees and as a basis of comparison from agency to agency.

APPLES NOT FOR TEACHER

Long-haired Dianne Kakleas, 4, (center) and Andrew Robinson, 4, both of San Rafael, decide that sooner than polish their apples for some future teacher, they'll make friends with a horse — it might help them in competition for "Littlest Cowboy" honors at the Grand National Livestock Exposition, Horse Show and Rodeo at San Francisco's Cow Palace. The annual show will run Oct. 23 through Nov. 1. The San Rafael youngsters are among the first to take advantage of the contest, open to children 30 months through 10 years old. (Hal Randall photo)

Parking Lot Under 101 Discussed

That blank space under the Highway 101 overpass through San Rafael may be put to good use, if things go well between city officials and the state Division of Highways.

City Mgr. James H. McCown reported yesterday that city officials met Thursday with a leasing officer from the state highways office for tentative discussions of putting a paved parking lot and landscaping beneath the overpass.

The proposal — subject to revision — calls for 204 parking spaces with meters, lights and some fencing, at a roughly estimated cost of $65,000 under the northbound viaduct between Second Street and Mission Avenue.

The space under the new southbound viaduct and alongside Hetherton Street now contains drainage and a box culvert. The city hopes to see this area landscaped, with use of state funds if possible, McCown explained.

The city manager said the leasing of state highway land is a new concept, and many details remain to be worked out. The city hopes to keep the fee minimal, because costs of preparing the parking lot will probably eat up any expected income tfrom the parking customers, he said.

McCown said the state highway work has affected some of the city's parking spaces, and parking problems are likely to increase east of Irwin Street. The city also must "analyze the impact on the parking district," which does not include the viaduct area, McCown said.

One problem is that the old, northbound viaduct will be replaced within three to 10 years, when state funds become available, he added.

San Rafael hopes to be ready to begin work on the parking project as soon as construction work on the viaduct ends. The contractor's office said yesterday that work should be done by Jan. 1.

More city-state meetings are expected soon, McCown said, but none has been scheduled.

Detergent Industry Claims Enzymes Safe

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The detergent industry says its own tests and the experience of millions of housewives proves that enzyme detergents are safe.

A spokesman also denied the industry was stalling a scientific study into possible health hazards of enzymes.

Detergent makers have been hit in recent days by charges they made false advertising claims for their enzyme detergents and that their products cause allergies, skin ailments and —in the case of detergent factory workers —lung ailments.

A spokesman for Procter & Gamble, a major manufacturer of Enzyme products, said "exhaustive research and extensive use of enzyme detergents in millions of homes have clearly shown that our products are perfectly safe for the consumer."

A spokesman for the Soap and Detergent Association said detergent manufacturers have full confidence in the safety of enzyme detergents based on testing and use going back many years.

President Nixon's consumer affairs adviser, Virginia H. Knauer, accused the soap and detergent industry Friday of stalling on a health study through an attempt to switch the study of detergent safety from the American Academy of Allergy to the National Academy of Science.

Spokesman E. Scott Pattison said the industry wanted the switch because the allergy group was not well known, and the industry could be subject to charges it "bought up five or six allergists." Besides, he said, the NAS could give the study broader coverage.

Mrs. Knauer retorted, "You know what that means. A broader study takes two or three years. Let's go for what they originally agreed to —the allergists."

The Federal Trade Commission and the Food and Drug Administration indirectly joined Mrs. Knauer in her complaint. They invited the Soap and Detergent Association to a meeting in Washington Oct. 8, saying it was time for "immediate action" on the study.

The association accepted, but Pattison repeated the industry's position that there never was any firm agreement that the allergists would do the study, and the detergent association will pay for the study now provided it is done by the National Academy of Science.

Witness Tells Of Pulling Manson Out By His Hair

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Charles Manson was pulled by his hair from beneath the floorboards of a building at the Spahn Ranch a week after the Tate murders and dragged to a police van by sheriff's deputies.

The arrest of Manson and 26 other members of his "family" was not made in connection with the Tate-LaBianca case but in a roundup involving auto theft, a deputy sheriff testified Friday at the murder trial.

The prosecution was attempting to show that the 35-year-old Manson was trying to hide from police because he thought they had linked him to the slayings.

Defense lawyer Irving Kanarek cross-examined Deputy Sheriff Donald Dunlap and brought out that 40 armed deputies were approaching the building where Manson was living. Kanarek suggested that anyone would hide under those circumstances.

Dunlop testified that he twice ordered Manson to emerge from beneath the planking of the ranch shack and finally had to drag him out by his long hair.

The lengthy cross-examination of Dunlop postponed until Monday the testimony of Juan Flynn, a member of the "family" who was the only man to stand up against Manson's orders, according to the prosecution.

Eighteen-year-old Barbara Hoyt testified earlier Friday that she had to go to the psychiatric ward of a hospital in Honolulu three weeks ago because she was given an overdose of LSD.

Miss Hoyt, who testified she overheard Susan Atkins telling about the Tate slayings, told the district attorney's office that she was slipped a hamburger loaded with LSD by another female member of the hippie cult and almost died.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Amnesia Victims May Remember Brief Period After Accident

Van Dellen

More on memory (before we forget). Concussion was noted in four football players after head injuries. All were dazed and when asked immediately what happened, each stated: "I got hit." Moments later they developed amnesia lasting from three to 20 minutes. Two of the players did not recall wandering aimlessly about the field. One stumbled back to the huddle and had no idea where he was. The other was also disoriented for time and place.

Not one could recall how he got off the playing field. Obviously the concussion was responsible for the loss of memory. When it was all over, the team physicians wondered why these boys remembered getting hit immediately after the accident but could not recall what happened in the next three to 20 minutes.

APPARENTLY the recollection of being hit lasted only a second but the recall mechanism for the events thereafter was damaged by the physical effects of the injury. Or, perhaps temporary damage prevents events from registering in the memory centers of the brain and are lost forever.

With age, many people have difficulty recalling names. "I've got a mental block but it will come to me in a little while," they say. Sometimes it does, but more often than not it comes back hours later when the person is relaxed. We believe anxiety plays a role. Surprisingly, names and other events are quickly remembered when the person is relaxed by hypnotism or a sedative such as truth serum has been injected.

MEMORY is a valuable asset. Lower animals learn what is useful for them to survive and very little else. Higher animals go beyond this and consequently have a greater variety of possible ways to insure survival.

Some researchers believe that the memory process is chemical in nature and stems from the synthesis of brain or cerebral protein. This theory is difficult to assess. As one authority put it: "How shall we study that which studies?"

SINUS INFECTION

D.S. writes: Can sinus disease spread from one sinus to all the others?

REPLY

This is possible, but in most instances the infection is centered in the nose and spreads to one or more sinuses. Our leaflet on sinus disturbances can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

NERVE DEAFNESS

W.L. writes: How does an ear specialist determine whether deafness is due to a dead hearing nerve?

REPLY

BUBBLY DRINKS

L.R. writes: Do carbonated beverages have an adverse effect upon the nerves?

REPLY

Not unless they contain a large amount of caffeine or other stimulant.

HONEY AND PRESSURE

H.S. writes: Will taking honey at each meal ward off high blood pressure?

REPLY

No. There is no relationship between the two.

LETTUCE AND FERTILITY

T.R. writes: Does lettuce have an effect upon fertility?

REPLY

No — unless we bring rabbits into the discussion.

NEW YORK (UPI) — There are 325 million cubic miles of water on the earth, but only one percent is considered fit for human consumption, according to Rockwell Manufacturing Company, manufacturer of water meters.

Unseen Menace On Marin's Coast

The sandspit at the mouth of Bolinas Lagoon shines brightly in the sun, giving no hint that it and the entire lagoon have been under quarantine since Aug. 14 because of raw sewage pollution in the lagoon and an outbreak of viral hepatitis. State and county public health officials have admitted they have been unable positively to blame the lagoon for more than a dozen hepatitis cases among the residents of Bolinas, the community in the right center of the picture. But, swimming in the lagoon and surf fishing, boating and swimming in the offshore waters have been banned between Stinson Beach on the far side of the lagoon and Overlook Drive in Bolinas, just above the wooded ravine on the near side of the street grid. Not affected are Stinson Beach State Park on the cliffs beyond the lagoon, nor Agate Beach County Park along the cliffs at the lower right. Meanwhile, the fog sneaks in over the Marin Headlands in the far background, as if to cool off the whole controversy.

Nixon Has Different Approach On Church

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

President Nixon apparently belongs to the school of thought which holds that you don't need to attend church regularly in order to be a practicing Christian.

Most of his predecessors in the White House were conspicuously faithful about church attendance, either out of personal conviction, or because they felt they should set a good example for the nation.

The three most recent presidents, before Nixon, all adhered to the custom of regular churchgoing. Except when he was ill or out of town, Dwight D. Eisenhower showed up virtually every Sunday at 11 o'clock service of the National Presbyterian Church. He always occupied pew 41, in the fifth row on the left side. The Eisenhower pew is now preserved in the Chapel of the Presidents at the new National Presbyterian Church and Center in Washington.

John F. Kennedy attended Mass every Sunday, usually at Holy Trinity Church in the Georgetown section of the capital. Kennedy felt strongly that religion is a private matter and tried his best to behave like any ordinary member of the congregation. To avoid special treatment, he often slipped into the church after the service had begun, and took the first empty seat he found.

Lyndon B. Johnson was not much of a church-goer before he entered the White House, but as president, he set what may be an all-time record for frequency of participation in public worship. With characteristic Texas exuberance, he sometimes attended two or three services in one day.

Nixon established a new custom—holding church services in the White House, with a different guest preacher for each occasion.

Because of their setting, these services have received considerable publicity, and many Americans have gained the impression that Nixon is a strong advocate of regular Sunday worship. Last June, he was named "Churchman of the Year" by Religious Heritage of America.

The record shows that in the 20 months since his inauguration, Nixon has participated in 23 Sunday worship services in the East Room of the White House—an average of just over one a month.

Aside from funerals, he has not set foot in any Washington church since he became president.

He has gone out to church on three occasions while vacationing at Key Biscayne, Fla., once at San Clemente, Calif., and once while in Hawaii to greet returning astronauts.

Nixon's close friend and spirititual counselor, Rev. Billy Graham, acknowledges that the President "is not the world's most faithful churchgoer."

"But I don't think a man necessarily has to go to church every Sunday to be genuinely religious," said the Baptist evangelist. "I am sure Richard Nixon is a person of strong religious convictions."

Annual Mission Conference Set

Valley Baptist Church of San Rafael has announced plans for its seventh annual missionary conference Oct. 3-7.

Opening event at the church, 3 North San Pedro Road, will be an international-style banquet with Rev. Robert Ranney, a member of the Chicago Inner City group, as guest speaker.

Guest speaker at the 8:15 and 11 a.m. services Oct. 4 will be Rev. Dewey Mulholland, a member of the Northeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Floriano, Brazil.

Speaking at the 7 p.m. service will be Rev. Richard Duran, a missionary in the industrial city of Akita, Japan.

Alma Steinhauer, a faculty member at the Ivory Coast Academy in Bouake, West Africa, will be guest speaker at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 6. Prior to her present assignment, Miss Steinhauer taught in Brazil as a member of the Conservative Baptist Foreign Mission Society of Wheaton, Ill.

Closing the service Oct. 7 will be Mr. and Mrs. Larry Allen who are members of the church's mission in Hong Kong.

RACE ISSUE STANDOFF

Rhodesian Church-State Dispute

By PETER NIESEWAND

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesia's churches and government have come to at least a temporary compromise over the country's official race separation policies.

Although a mollifying action by Ian Smith's government averted a major clash with the churches, it didn't solve the issue of government decree versus the tenets of Christianity.

In August the country's churches were solidly united in a determination to defy the most important legislation on the statute books of this "rebel" republic — the Land Tenure Act, which divides Rhodesia between the five million black population and the 250,000 whites.

The Land Tenure Act states that the interests of each race shall be paramount in its own area, and strictly controls the activities of "alien" races on such designated land.

Almost all the Christian churches here are multiracial and straddle the race barrier. A black priest will hear the confession of a white man; a European nun will nurse an injured African.

But the Land Tenure Act required the churches to register as "voluntary associations" if they wished to continue their multiracial work. Failure to register would render them liable to prosecution, and possible confiscation of their property.

Ian Smith's government said that it did not plan segregating Christians but the churches were not impressed by the assurances.

A priest commented: "Mr. Smith may have no intention of forbidding black and white to worship together, but what about his successor?"

The major Christian denominations decided to defy the Act. In a statement, they said they would refuse to register as "voluntary associations," as this would imply they accepted the state's right to grant — or withhold — permission for them to carry out religious duties.

They also refused to recognize either the principle or the practice of racial discrimination.

The defiant Christians were headed by Rhodesia's five Roman Catholic bishops. In a pastoral message last March, the bishops said the Act "conflicts with Christianity." They added: "Henceforth, the Church shall merely be tolerated and may be permitted to exercise her mission only within such limits as Government Ministers see fit to determine . . .

"The whole future of the church in Rhodesia is at stake."

A month later, as opposition to the Act grew, the bishops warned that if the government implemented the legislation, then, on an appointed day, the Roman Catholic church would close all its institutions — including more than 700 schools, 47 hospitals, old age homes and orphanages.

As the Sept. 2 deadline for the churches' registration as "voluntary associatiois" approached, meetings were arranged between a delegation of heads of denominations and Premier Smith.

Finally, less than a week before the deadline, Smith announced he was prepared to make one major concession to help remove friction between church and state.

He told Parliament that the Rhodesian government would "deem the churches to have registered" under the Act — but only as far as mission land was concerned. Smith added that the state retained the right to cancel such registration.

Father Richard Randolph, secretary of the Roman Catholic Bishops' Conference, commented later that the churches had asked the government to make it possible for them to lawfully continue their work.

Randolph said: "The government has shown its good intentions by making some areas a little bit more lawful than they were — but with the right to stop the work at any time."

Technically the church-state position has not altered greatly. Other areas are still affected by the Land Tenure Act — only Mission Land is exempt. Legally, many church schools, hospitals and religious communities are still required to apply for permission before all races can mix freely.

The churches don't know whether Smith intends making an issue of this.

"We can still plan ignoring the Land Tenure Act," a priest said, "and we just hope government will leave us alone.

"If they do, then the crisis is over. If they don't, we have made our position clear — we will fight, we will close down affected institutions. As the Catholic bishops said: The church, like its founder, is prepared to lose all in order to gain all."

Church Relief Agency Marks Fund Projects

NEW YORK (LC) — More than $170,000 has been earmarked by Lutheran World Relief directors for a variety of development projects, relief and reconstruction, and regular on-going programs.

A breakdown of the grants showed $70,000 for development projects in Asia, Latin America, and Africa; $50,000 for rehabilitation in flood-ravaged Rumania, and $50,000 for various programs in the Middle East and the Far East.

High among the development projects approved by the agency was a proposed program in India through which orphaned children will receive special education in the field of agriculture.

Forty students will be trained over a three-year period under the agency's $29,318 grant. Training will be provided at a school on a 42-acre farm located just outside the city of Kesavanputhoor.

The school is operated by Christian Mission Service, a German-based agency that has received on several occasions recognition and encouragement from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi for its work in behalf of orphans.

A second project in India, which was also approved by the board, will aid farmers in the village of Tandulwadi to complete a lift irrigation program that was begun about five years ago.

Under the $5,600 grant, channeled through the Department of World Service of the Lutheran World Federation to India's Christian Agency for Social Action, such items as valves, motors, switches, and pumps will be provided.

According to spokesmen for LWR, the completion of the irrigation project will result in more and better crops from 250 acres of land in an area normally classified as part of a drought region.

The project is expected to be completed in a three-month period.

Also approved was a $5,310 grant toward a vocational training program that will be offered to underprivileged children and unskilled adults in a community in Brazil known as Arroio Grande.

Located in an agricultural area near the Brazilian-Uruguayan frontier, the town and its surrounding countryside have a total population of about 18,000.

Under the grant, machinery, tools, and other equipment will be provided and training will be offered in such areas as carpentry, weaving, dress-making, and electrical installation. The vocational workshops will be conducted at a local elementary school.

Directors also authorized a $29,860 grant for the construction of a girls' hostel near a government high school in the Ethiopian town of Gondar.

EUROPEAN NUNS SEEK GREATER CHURCH ROLES

BRUSSELS (London Express Service) — Catholic nuns have joined women's rights organizations in demanding equality for the sexes — but this time in the church.

A motion was accepted by more than the two-thirds necessary majority, denouncing discrimination against women, at a recent conference of 200 Catholic theologians, including Belgium's Cardinal Leo Suenens and three bishops.

It was also the first major Catholic conference to have women participants. Several nuns were among the delegates who demanded equal rights for women.

"We must denounce," declared a resolution accepted by 143 votes to 21, "discrimination against women in the church, a discrimination which often exists also in the rest of society. The church should examine seriously the possible role of women in the ministries."

All-Night Peace Vigil Is Announced

An all-night vigil for reparation and prayer for peace will be held Oct. 2 and 3 at St. Peter Chanel Seminary Chapel on Grand Avenue in San Rafael.

It is under sponsorship of Our Lady of Fatima Crusade, Legion of Mary and Third Order of Mary of Marin County.

The service will begin with a mass in Latin at 8 p.m., Oct. 2, followed by the Benediction, enrollment in the Brown Scapular and 5 a.m. mass Oct. 3.

Services will consist of the rosary, stations of the cross, homilies and meditations under didection of Rev. George Kathrein. Assisting him will be Revs. John Hayes, Paul Flynn and Robert Logrip and Deacon Daniel Kugler.

The vigil is open to the general public.

BISHOP MEDEIROS

Unusual Devotion To God, Church

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

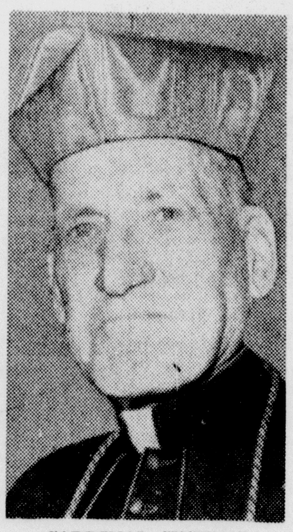
Bishop Humberto S. Medeiros, a man who swept floors as a teen-ager in a Massachusetts textile mill and later held nearly every office in the local diocese, is a man with unusual devotion to his God and his church.

Medeiros, a native of Arrifes, Sao Miguel in the Azores, was appointed recently to succeed Cardinal Richard J. Cushing as Archbishop of Boston and his farewell mesage to the people of his Brownsville, Tex. diocese reflected his feelings toward his church and its people.

"The divine providence, through the sacred apolostolic authority through Christ's vicar on earth, wills I leave you to shepard the people of God in the archdiocese of Boston," he said. "Trying to follow our divine saviour, I will seek the will of the father in order to obey him and please him. It is in this spirit that I accept the wish of the father to leave you.

"It is painful to leave those we love and I love the people of God of this diocese with all the power God has given me.

BISHOP MEDEIROS
New Boston prelate



CARDINAL CUSHING
Decides to retire

Frankly I do not deserve to be your shepard as I did not deserve to be the shepard of the justly renowned church of the apostolic," he said.

"I will leave enriched in spirit by you as my brothers. May it please God that my being with you has brought you and me closer to our Lord Jesus, the bishop and shepard of our souls," Medeiros said.

"This has been the first and last and only burning desire in my heart."

Thus, Medeiros ended a four-year term as Bishop of Brownwood and prepared to return to the state in which he spent most of his life.

The slight, black-haided priest who speaks Spanish, Protuguese and English fluently and with a Boston accent had never been further south than Richmond, Va., when given the South Texas post in 1966.

On arriving in the Southwest he disclaimed any allegiance to either the liberal or conservative wings of the church and said he wanted to concentrate on becoming a good priest.

"I hope to be a good priest," he said. "I do not belong to any category. I only want to do what the church ask of me. We will try to follow as best we can the teachings of the church gospel.

In his four years, Medeiros enlarged the diocese from 40 parishes to 58 and from 81 priests to 111. He was instrumental in building 39 churches, parish halls and other buildings and spent much of his time working with the Mexican-American poor of Texas' lower Rio Grande Valley.

He became a prominent member of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops and heads that group's allocations committee for Latin America. He became the state chaplain of the Texas Knights of Columbus and is a board member of the Texas Conference of Churches and the Texas Catholic Conference.

Medeiros, along with his mother and two brothers, arrived in the United States from the small island off the coast of Portugal in 1931, the middle of the Great Depression. He went to work sweeping floors in a Fall River, Mass. textile mill before entering high school several years lated.

He was graduated in 1937 and five years later received his masters in philosophy from Catholic University in Washington. That year he was ordained as a priest by Most Rev. James E. Cassidy at St. Mary's Cathedral in Fall River and began a long tenure of service in the diocese.

He received his PhD. in sacred theology from Catholic University in 1947, and did research for his disertation at North American College in Rome.

Until his appointment to Brownsville in 1966 Medeiros at different times was chancery secretary, assistant chancellor, vicar for religion, vice chancellor, domestic prelate and pastor of St. Michaels in the Fall River diocese.

Tomorrow To Be Christian Education Day

Tomorrow has been designated Christian Education Sunday at Grace Lutheran Church in Novato.

Special events will include a special film, attendance awards and new class placements during the 9:45 a.m. Sunday school hour. The two worship services, 8:30 and 11 a.m., will be focused on Christian education with Rev. Robert F. Fickenscher's sermon entitled "What Are You Learning."

Also during the services 20 new Sunday school and mid-week school teachers will be commissioned.

On Wednesday, a special worship service at 3 p.m. will mark the beginning of the mid-week school.

The program for the first through ninth graders will stress in-depth Christian education studies.

Also continuing this fall will be adult education classes on Wednesday mornings and Sunday morning Bible classes beginning Oct. 13 at 7:30 p.m.

Churches Select Discussion Topic

NEW YORK (LC) — "The Teaching Ministry of the Whole Church in Roman Catholic and Lutheran Perspectives" has been cosen as the subjectfor discussion when theologians of the two communions hold the 11th in their series of doctrinal dialogues from Oct. 30 to Nov. 1 in Chicago.

The meeting was originally planned for Minneapolis over the Reformation Day weekend, but no hotel rooms were available because of the football game scheduled between the universities of Minnesota and Iowa.

The subject selected for the coming session, it was announced, will be considered with special reference to "the authority of Scripture, Tradition, Creeds, Confessions, Bishops, Council, the Pope."

Moderator Will Speak

I-J Special Report

RICHMOND — Rev. William R. Laws Jr., moderator of the 182nd General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, USA, will be guest speaker Oct. 10 during the eighth stated meeting of the Synod of the Golden Gate.

Laws, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbus, Ind., will speak at the 10 a.m. meeting at the Richmond Memorial Auditorium.

Bucs Near Flag; Mets, Cubs Collapse

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports writer

Miracles just don't happen every year.

The New York Mets sadly found that out Friday night.

The Mets, who stood the baseball world on its ear a year ago when they went on to become world champions, were practically eliminated from the National League's East Division race when they lost to the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-3.

The loss dropped the Mets 3 1-2 games behind the Pirates with only six games remaining and Pittsburgh's magic number for clinching the division title is only three.

The Pirates won the first game of the crucial three-game series because they played heads-up defensively and were able to cut down two Met base runners in the final two innings to preserve their margin of victory.

FIRST GEM

The first defensive gem was turned in by leftfielder Willie Stargell, who is not known for his work in the field. After the Pirates had snapped a 2-2 tie on a run-scoring single by Matty Alou in the seventh inning, Stargell threw out the potential tying run at the plate in the eighth when he cut down Ken Boswell, who attempted to score on a single by Bud Harrelson.

"I had a good jump on the ball and it was hit hard," said Stargell. "They had to try for the run. I think if they had it to do again they'd do it again. I'd have to challenge it, too, especially with a runner as fast as Boswell, because I know the outfielder has to get in good position and has to make a good throw. If he slips a little or the throw is off a little he scores."

Another big play for the Pirates came in the ninth. Stargell had given the Pirates a 4-2 lead with a run-scoring single in the eighth, but Tommie Agee doubled home Ron Swoboda to start the ninth and there were visions of another Met miracle rally in the making.

After Agee's double, Joe Gibbon replaced Ray Lamb on the mound for the Pirates and walked Joe Foy on four pitches. Cleon Jones then lined out to Roberto Clemente in right and Art Shamsky struck out. As Shamsky swung and missed at the third strike, Agee attempted to steal third but was cut down by catcher Manny Sanguillen for the final out of the game.

GAMBLE PLAY

"He had no orders," Manager Gil Hodges said of Agee's decision to steal. "It was a gamble play."

The evening was not only a total loss for the Mets but also for the Chicago Cubs, who are tied with the Mets for second. The Cubs lost to the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-3, and also seem now to have little chance of overhauling the Pirates.

Tim McCarver and Don Money led to Chicago's downfall with back-to-back home runs in the sixth inning and Rick Wise protected the margin with a five-hitter. Tommy Davis drove in all of Chicago's runs with a homer and a double.

SHORT HAIRS CARRY REDWOOD TO VICTORY

Redwood High School's cross country team, with most of the veteran runners sitting out, still had more than enough firepower in a sophomore-dominated lineup to defeat San Rafael High School in a Marin Athletic League opening match.

The Giants defeated San Rafael's team, 23-32, on San Rafael's 3-mile course Thursday. Junior Rick Norton led the Redwood runners, winning with a clocking of 16 minutes, 25 seconds.

Most of Redwood's returning runners have quit the team over disagreement with the Larkspur school's grooming policies.

San Rafael won the frosh-soph meet, 20-37.

Duncan Star For Bulldogs

San Rafael's Bulldogs, held in check for three quarters by a game but outclassed Montgomery High School team, exploded for 20 points in the final period last night to post their second straight preseason football victory, 34-14 at Santa Rosa.

Quarterback Dirk Gansloser and flanker Scott Duncan combined on two tremendous touchdown bombs, one that tied the score in the first quarter, and the other that put San Rafael ahead to stay.

Between those touchdowns Duncan raced 93 yards from scrimmage for the second Bulldog score. His totals for the night were 101 yards gained running and 133 on pass receptions. Needless to say, he was brilliant.

Montgomery got on the scoreboard first via a 79 yard touchdown run by halfback Glen Stanfield. But San Rafael came back as Gansloser found Duncan with a 61 yard scoring pass, and John Morehouse kicked the extra point to give the Bulldogs the lead 7-6.

ALL TIED UP

The Vikings tied things up in the third period, after Duncan's sensational run. Quarterback Monte Moore hit Jack Graves with an 11 yard pass for the touchdown, and Moore ran over for the two-point conversion.

In the final quarter, San Rafael opened the flood gates, with picture-perfect Gansloser at the controls. His second touchdown pass to Duncan, good for 69 yards, broke the Viking's spirit. After that the Bulldogs poured it on, scoring on a one yard plunge by Craig Hecht and a four yard run by Mark Farrar.

Gansloser threw only nine times in the game, but he completed seven for an astounding total of 173 yards.

in last week's 40-0 win over Washington of San Francisco, Gansloser threw only once — for a touchdown.

Pirates Finally Defeat Vallejo

By DAVID EINSTEIN

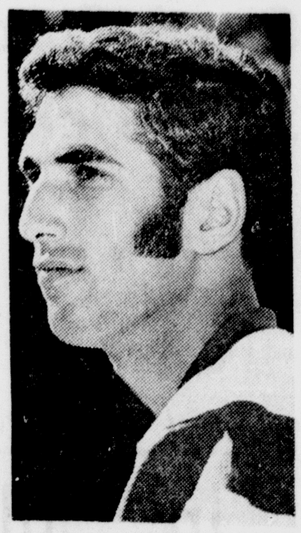
The Drake High School Pirates, winners of only one football game all last year, won their second straight preseason contest of 1970 last night as they defeated the Vallejo Apaches for the first time ever, 26-8 before a somber crowd of 2,500 at Vallejo.

The second chapter in the San Anselmo school's Cinderella story was much like the first, in which the Pirates overwhelmed Petaluma, 39-0 a week ago. Again it was halfback Jim Dominguez and quarterback Rick Mason who led the assault, and again the Drake line opened immense holes, through which Dominquez slashed for 179 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

Only an Apache touchdown in the last half-minute of play prevented Drake from registering a second consecutive shutout.

FIRST BLOOP

Mason drew blood in the first quarter when he dove for a two yard touchdown, and he made it 13-0 early in the second quarter with an 87-yard scoring pass to end John Billings.



JIM DOMINGUEZ
Drake's hero

Then Dominguez went to work. "I don't say I'm going inside or outside, I just run where there's daylight," the 180-pound senior said in explaining his second straight 100-plus yards-gained effort.

Dominguez' first touchdown came midway throught he second quarter, when he swept left end for 48 yards. At the end of the half he had 93 yards in eight carries.

The third period was scoreless, but the Pirates opened the final period with defensive back Rich Bozzio intercepting a pass on the Vallejo 22 yard line. Dominguez needed exactly one play to score. He broke off tackle through a grand-canyon size hole, and then veered down the left sideline to make the score 26-0.

IDENTICAL PLAYS

Ron Burris accounted for all Vallejo's points, scoring from three yards out, and then running an identical play for the two point conversion.

"The kids did a helluva job," Pirate coach Bob Franceschini said afterwards. "The line just opened up tremendous holes."

He commented on Dominguez, "He's really growing up out there. He's got more confidence, more poise. He's got great potential."

Mason hit on 6 of 12 passes for 145 yards, and was only dropped once behind the line. The Drake interior line, spearheaded by tackle Dave MacAusland, protected him like he was made out of crystal.

The Drake-Vallejo rivalry goes back to 1951, the year of the San Anselmo school opened. The first victory over the Apaches was a long time coming, which made it all the sweeter.

Petaluma Upsets Novato

Novato High School got there firstest but Petaluma High got the mostest last night as the Trojans of the North Bay League defeated the Hornets, of the Marin County Athletic League, 14-10 in their football skirmish at Petaluma.

Petaluma had to rally twice to its first victory of the seaon after trailing 7-0 and then 10-7. Victorious Coach Howard Cadenhead noted afterwards: "We are a young ball club that came to play football and finally made up for our mistakes."

For a time it looked as if the favored invaders from Novato would register their second win of the season when defensive end and captain Greg Straw recovered a blocked punt and ran it five yards to a touchdown. Kicker Bob Cooper made it 7-0.

PETALUMA SCORE

But the Hornets were jolted moments later when Petaluma quarterback Dan Hart and end Kevin Gillmore collaborated on a 90-yard touchdown pass, after which kicker Bob Vaz tied it up.

Novato again forged into the lead in the second period when Cooper kicked a field goal for a 10-7 halftime lead.

The Trojans, however, battled Novato on even terms through the third period and drove to their winning touchdown with five minuted left in the game. A 70-yard drive was climaxed by fullback Mike Swallow's one-yard plunge and Vaz' second place kick.

It was predominantly a defensive battle as Novato netted only 71 yards rushing and 87 passing to Petaluma's 64 rushing and 104 passing.

Gals Okay Berkeley Tennis

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Good news came to the Pacific Coast Open tennis tournament Friday from Houston when Billie Jean King and her band of rebellious women players said they would not boycott the tourney.

The development must be credited to San Francisco clothing manufacturer Alvin Duskin. Duskin announced Friday he would underwrite $7,600 of prize money for the women's portion of the tournament, bringing the total prize money to $11,000.

Miss King, Rosemary Casals, Nancy Richey and other top ranked tennis players boycotted the Pacific Southwest tourney in Los Angeles and walked out of the Virginia Slims Invitational at Houston earlier this week.

MONEY PROTEST

The women have been protesting the distribution of tournament prize money which habitually leaves women competitors with 10 per cent or less of the total purse.

The women had said they would not play in the Pacific Coast Open today through Oct. 4 until prize money was hiked from $3,400 to $11,000. Qualifying for the tournament began today in Berkeley.

"The loss of the world's outstanding women players to the Pacific Coast Open would have been a tragedy," Duskin said. "I've already got $1000 from one anonymous donor and I'm going to ask the girls I know to hit up their husbands and boyfriends for the other $6600."

NO GAIN

Duskin, an outspoken environmental critic, said he will make no personal gain by his financial contribution. It had been suspected that he was using his move as a publicity ploy for a new line of women's tennis clothing.

"Nothing to it, because I'm not bringing out a line of women's tennis clothing," Duskin said.

Miss Walsh In L.A. Net Finals

Unseeded Sharon Walsh of San Rafael was to meet top-seeded Leslie Hint of Australia today in the finals of the Pacific Southwest Tennis Championships at Los Angeles.

Miss Walsh overcame first set jitters to defeat Patricia Waldken of South Africa, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 yesterday in the semifinals while Miss Hunt was besting Cecilia Martinez of San Francisco, 6-4, 6-7, 6-0.

The 18-year-old San Rafael girl will be after her second major upset today. On Thursday she knocked off Helen Gourlay of Australia, the second seed.

In men's action, top-seeded Rod Laver, second seed John Newcome, Arthur Ashe of Los Angeles and Tom Gorman of Seattle all advanced to today's semifinals. The pairings are Laver vs. Ashe and Newcome vs. Gorman.

Redwood Gridders Lose

The Redwood Giants lost their second straight preseason football game yesterday, 15-7 to Encinal of Alameda, but in the process they may have found an offense.

Nearly 1,000 hometown fans in Larkspur had nothing to cheer about until late in the fourth quarter, when quarterback Bob Brown took the Giants 63 yards in seven plays, hitting fullback Andy Anixter with a 12-yard screen pass for a touchdown with a minute and three seconds left in the game.

The touchdown itself meant nothing to the final score, but it kept the Giants from being shutout for the second week in a row. Sacred Heart beat them in the season opener, 7-0.

It also showed that the Giants can throw the ball effectively. Brown passed six times during the scoring drive, completing three while the Jets were called for interference on two others.

THE CLINCHER

Encinal wrappd the game up in the third period, scoring twice after leading at halftime, 2-0 on the strength of a safety in the second quarter.

The Jets' hero both on offense and defense was halfback Eric Shelton, the game's leading rusher. He picked up 70 yards on 15 carries, but it was while on defense that he made the big play of the game to score the first touchdown.

Midway through the period, Shelton intercepted a pass thrown by sophomore quarterback Daryl Edralin and raced 72 yards untouched to score.

POISED YOUNGSTER

Edralin, who showed a lot of poise for a youngster seeing his first varsity action, played the entire third quarter and part of the fourth, hitting on three of nine passes for 50 yards. Brown connected eight times in 15 attempts for 91 yards.

But Edralin was also indirectly responsible for the Jets' second touchdown. Safety Rudy Brady intercepted one of his passes on the Redwood 42 yard line, and the Jets proceeded to march to the end zone in seven plays, scoring with no time on the clock when quarterback Bob Leach bulled over from three yards out.

Statistically, Redwood played the East Bay team even, gaining 197 total yards to Encinal's 196. The Giants had 141 yards passing, 56 on the ground, and the Jets gained 155 running and 41 through the air.

Encina:	0	2	13	0	— 15
Redwood	0	0	0	7	— 7

E — Brown thrown for safety.
E — Shelton, 72 interception runback (Leach kick).
E — Lead 3 run (kick failed).
R — Anixter, 12 pass from Brown (Gorman kick).

Makela Paces Marin Runners

Defending Camino Norte Conference champion Don Makela paced College of Marin's cross country team to victory over Laney College of Oakland and San Joaquin Delta College of Stockton yesterday in a non-league meet.

Makela, of Novato, ran the hilly 3.8-mile Marin course near Kent Woodlands in 23 minutes, 19.5 seconds.

Makela's first place finish helped Marin to a low score of 28 points, followed by Lanet with 47 and San Joaquin with 57.

Other Marin runners and the order in which they finished were Keith Krieger, third; Seamus O'Reilly, sixth; Steve Silvey, seventh, and Rob Williams, 11th.

Seals Lose Exhibition

SUDBURY, Ont. (UPI) — The St. Louis Blues, enjoying greater control of the puck, defeated the Bay Area Seals 3-2 Friday night in a National Hickey League exhibition.

LOSES BATTLE, BUT WINS WAR

Pittsburgh Pirates Manager Danny Murtaugh used a finger to try to get his point across, but was overruled by stubborn umpires during last night's vital game against the New York Mets at Pittsburgh. Umps ruled Pirate Willie Stargell (8) out on close play at second to touch off the beef. Pirates won anyway, 4-3, to move closer to the National League Eastern Division pennant.

Raiders Seeking Revenge

San Diego lost running backs Brad Hubbert and Gene Foster with injuries in a 16-14 defeat to Baltimore last week. Halfback Dick Post underwent surgery a week ago and also is out.

Jeff Queen, who started the year as a tight end, will team with veteran halfback Russ Smith as the Chargers' starting running backs. Recently acquired halfbacks Roland Moss and Dave Smith also could play.

Oakland, smarting from a defeat by Cincinnati last week, will count on the passing of Daryle Lamonica to Warren Wells and Fred Biletnikoff. The Raiders are still without injured middle linebacker Dan Connors, but Bill Budness was credited with 12 tackles as his replacement last week.

BRIGHT SPOT

The one bright spot for San Diego is the return to action of punter and place kicker Dennis Partee. The kicking game was a major factor in last week's loss to Baltimore. It is especially important against Oakland as rookie Alvin Wyatt returned a punt 72 yards for a touchdown for the Raiders last week and had another similar return called back because of a penalty.

Oakland relies primarily on its passing game, and San Diego's running attack is so depleted quarterback John Hadl probably will have to throw often.

Browns Rate Slim Picks Over 49ers

This year both the Cleveland Browns and San Francisco 49ers have blended youth, speed and experience into their defensive lines and have thus far been successful. Both won their opening tests against formidable opponents.

The Browns and 49ers collide Sunday at Kezar Stadium with the Ohio club rated two-point favorites on the strength of a 31-21 victory over the New York Jets Monday night. San Francisco downed Washington 26-17 last Sunday.

A rookie has succeeded in cracking the front four of both the Browns and 49ers and opposing quarterbacks probably will run plays at the new linemen all afternoon. But that might be a mistake.

MAT CHAMP

Jerry Sherk, a 253-pound NCAA wrestling champion from Oklahoma State, won a starting tackle berth with the Browns in his fourth pre-season game. He's proven to be a tough customer.

Sherk will team with six-year veteran Walter Johnson to block the middle and try to unseat San Francisco quarterback John Brodie before he lets go of his passes. On the Cleveland flanks are a pair of 250-pound veterans, Jack Gregory and Ron Snidow.

Cedrick Hardman, a 255-pounder from North Texas State, also won a starting job as a defensive end with the 49ers in his rookie season. He and 257-pound Tommy give San Francisco speed and muscle at the flanks while seasoned performers Charlie Kruger and Roland Lakes handle the bruising inside rushes.

FINE RECEIVERS

Fair Hooker, another rookie who hails from Arizona State, also has made the Browns starting lineup as a wide receiver. In Hooker, tight end Milt Morin and Flanker Gary Collins, Browns quarterback Bill Nelsen has three of the finest receivers in pro ball.

Leroy Kelly, as usual, will be back to torment the Prospectors. Speedy Bo Scott helps out with the running chores.

Sherk, Johnson, Gregory and Snidow will be aiming mainly for Brodie, the San Francisco veteran who completed 17 of 20 passes against the Redskins for one of the best performances of his career.

Brodie calls upon Gene Washington, Bob Windsor, Ted Kwalick and Dick Witcher as his favorite receivers.

Prospector coach Dick Nolan says offensive tackle Cas Banaszek and rookie cornerback Bruce Taylor are nearly fully recovered from leg injuries and will see action against the Browns.

Coach Sava Enters Swim Hall Of Fame

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI)—Florence Chadwick, the first woman to swim the English Channel from England to France, coach Charles Sava of San Francisco, and six members of the Cavill family of Australia, who introduced the crawl stroke in the United States were among those named to be inducted into the International Swimming Hall of Fame Dec. 28.

Others voted into the hall, established in 1965, by the 1,300 participating swim coaches were: Clarie Galligan Finney, America's first Amateur Athletic Union national Women's champion; Olga Dorfner Schoenhut, the nation's first woman world record holder; Willy den Ouden' women's world record holder from Holland; Richard Hough, record-setter in the breaststroke at Princeton in the 1930's; Yale triple Olympic gold medalist Jimmy McLane; Princeton Diving coach and two-time Olympic gold medalist Bob Webster; France's water polo star, Henry Padou, Sr.; Walter Bathe of Germany, double Olympic breaststroke champion in 1912; and two coaches, the late Jack Cody and Sava. Sava.

The Cavill family was picked in the "outstanding contribution" category.

Blancas Has Hot Round In Tourney

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI)—Non-winners Harry Toscano and Bob Stanton enjoyed their day in the Georgia sun today as front-runners in the Green Island Open. But the shadow of ornushing Homero Blancas threatened to blot them out as the field teed off for the third round.

Toscano and Stanton, who finished 1-2 in the 1966 PGA qualifying school, had the same scores for the second straight day Friday and moved into a tie for the lead at the halfway point with three-under-par 136s. Each turned in a round of even par 34-38-70 over the Green Island course Friday.

Their scores were good enough for a one-stroke lead over Chris Blocker and two over Tom Shaw, Bunky Henry and Bob Greenwood. Then came Blancas, hot as the weather with a sizzling four-under-par 66 for a 139, stamping himself as the man to watch.

Meanwhile, two of the biggest names in the tournament — former U. S. Open champions Lee Trevino and Orville Moody —failed to make the cut. Trevino had a 75 and Moody a 76 for 148s—two shots too much.

Andrews, Ferrie Gain Finals In Senior Golf

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, (UPI) — Gene Andrews, of Whittier, who specializes in spectacular play, and Jim Ferrie, of Indian Wells, who does it quietly and almost unnoticed, meet today in the final of the 1970 U.S. Senior Amateur Golf Championship.

Both worked hard Friday to make it to the final, Andrews going 33 holes to beat Sam Maniaci of Blue Bell, Pa., 5 and 4, and Ernie Pieper of San Juan Bautista, Calif., 1 up on the first extra hole, while Ferrie disposed of Rodney Bliss of Des Moines, Iowa, 1 up, and Bob Fahy of Banning, Calif., 3 and 1.

Cub Protest Is Denied By Feeney

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—National League president Chub Feeney has not allowed a protest by the Chicago Cubs of their game Sept. 20 against the Montreal Expos.

The Cubs registered a protest after the following play:

With Montreal trailing 4-3 and at bat in the bottom of the fourth, Ron Fairly drove in two runners with a double down the rightfield line.

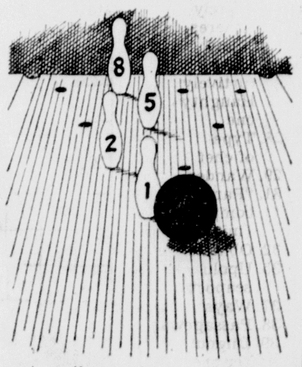
Manager Leo Durocher of Chicago claimed Interference should have been called on the play. He said the Expos' ball boy, stationed against the wall past the rightfield bullpen, kicked the baseball.

Feeney denied the protest Friday because of "lack of evidence that the interference was intentional or that the ball was kicked by the ball attendant."

Feeney continued in a telegram to Cubs general manager John Holland: "Therefore, any interference could be unintentional and the ball would be in play as ruled by the umpires."

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



A strike delivery should convert the 1-2-5-8 into a spare. The 5-pin usually is the most troublesome in this set-up. Consequently, a fairly good "pocket hit" is needed to bring it down along with the others.

A's Shoot For Second Place Loot

ANAHEIM (UPI)—Vida Blue, a 21-year-old fastballing rookie who pitched a no-hitter in his last start, can nail down second place for the Oakland A's tonight. Blue, 2-1, is scheduled to pitch against the California Angels' Rudy May, 6-13.

The A's virtually wrapped up the runner-up place in the American League West Friday night by beating the Angels 6-0 on the four-hit pitching of John "Blue Moon" Odom.

Three of Oakland's runs came on sacrifice flies as Clyde Wright, the California starter, was charged with his 12th loss against 21 victories.

For Odom, it was his ninth win in 16 decisions.

The A's got their first two runs in the fourth inning on only one hit. Joe Rudi opened the inning with a single and Wright walked the next two.

Wright hit Reggie Jackson to force in Rudi and Dave Duncan followed with a sacrifice fly to leftfield.

First Night Game

ELMIRA, N.Y. (UPI) —The first professional football game ever played at night was played here in 1902. The Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Kanaweola A. C. 39-0. Coach of the Athletics was Connie Mack and his star halfback was Rube Waddell, better known as an all-star baseball pitcher.

Padres Now Have Magic Number—1

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The magic number of the San Diego Padres has been reduced to one.

The Padres, in last place in the National League West, need one more victory to be assured of finishing the season with less than 100 defeats. San Diego, now with 95 losses, has five more games left this season.

Righthander Pat Dobson helped reduce the magic number by hurling an unusual nine-hitter in a 7-4 San Diego victory over the San Francisco Giants Friday night .

Dobson allowed nine hits in 7⅔ innings to gain his 13th victory against 15 losses. He turned in an unusual performance by allowing the Giants four homers, all of which came with the bases empty.

Willie McCovey Slammed a pair of homers to run his season's total to 38, while Ken Henderson smashed his 17th and George Foster belted his first in the major leagues.

Cal Commission Outlaws Champ

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —The California Athletic Commission Friday revoked the state boxing license of world lightweight champion Ismael Laguna for failing to fulfill a contract.

Chairman Bob Voigt also announced the commission revoked the license of Laguna's manager, Cain Young.

He said the action was based on the failure of Laguna and Young to honor a contract signed Dec. 26, 1969, with the Olympic Boxing Club of Los Angeles.

Both Laguna and Young have been under temporary suspension in California since last May 22.

Laguna won the title March 3 when he stopped Mando Ramos of Long Beach on cuts in nine rounds in Los Angeles.

Terra Linda Hosts Hogan '11' Tonight

The Terra Linda Trojans, down but not out of the Northern California high school football rankings, will try to get back on the road to prominence tonight when they take on the Hogan Spartans of Vallejo in an 8 o'clock pre-season game at San Rafael High School.

This will be the last game prior to the start of the Marin County Athletic League campaign next weekend.

The Trojans, rated No. 3 in a poll of Northern California coaches after beating Palo Alto, 31-7 in their season-opener two weeks ago, have fallen to 18th position as a result of their 21-7 loss to Riordan last Saturday night.

The defending MCAL champions have spent this week putting the pieces back together. Coach Don Lucas has nothing but praise for Riordan. "If they're not in the top five when the season's over, I'll be damned surprised," he said yesterday.

Lucas says the Spartans have "good size and good speed," but other than that little is known of the team.

The North Bay I league team will have one certain incentive — revenge. Terra Linda upset the highly favored Spartans last year, 25-14.

Lucas will take a less than healthy squad into the game. One player, guard Steve Cupples, is definitely out with a pulled groin muscle. Two others, running back John Scozzafava and tackle Scott Seefeldt, were injured during practice and are doubtful starters.

Australia's Yacht Protest Again Denied By Committee

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

NEWPORT, R.I. — The New York Yacht Club Race Committee early today rejected a second Australian bid to reopen a protest which had led to Gretel II's disqualification after beating Intrepid in the second race of the America's Cup yacht series.

The committee rejected the Australian appeal on the grounds there was no new evidence and the decision left Intrepid, the 12-meter yacht cup defender, with a 3-1 lead going into today's fifth race in the best-of-seven series. The Gretel II was disqualified Sunday for bumping the Intrepid at the starting line.

Ice Hockey

KITCHENER, Ont. — All-Star defenseman Brad Park of the New York Rangers has agreed to submit his contract demands to arbitration.

Park, one of four Rangers holding out in a contract dispute, failed to report for the first exhibition game and was suspended by coach Emile Francis. Francis said details for arbitration of the player's contract had not yet been finalized.

Golf

RENO—Pitcher Juan Marichal of the San Francisco Giants is among early entrants of Harrah's 1st Reno Invitational golf tournament Oct. 12-15.

Coach Jim Davenport of the Giants also has entered the tournment, which will be played at the Hidden Valley and Washoe, course in Reno and the Incline Village layout in Lake Tahoe.

Horse Racing

SAN MATEO — Former Oakland Raider tight end Billy Cannon has savored his first victory as a race horse owner.

Cannon, the 1959 Heisman Trophy winner who spent 10 years with Houston and the Raiders, saw his horse Vital Penny come from last place Friday to win the fifth race at Bay Meadows.

Cannon, who also owns Calaveras and Edies All, is listed in the Bay Meadows program as "Dr. Billy Cannon." The long-time football star has earned a doctorate in dentistry.

Baseball

SAN FRANCISCO — National League president Chub Feeney has announced the purchase of umpire Jerry Dale, a veteran of six years in the Triple-A Pacific Coast League.

Basketball

HONOLULU — Lew Alcindor tossed in 39 points to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to a 129-114 National Basketball Association exhibition victory over the Los Angeles Lakers Friday night.

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Royals Friday requested waivers on three players, second-year veteran Wally Anderzunas and rookies Charlie Bishop and Joe McBride.

LOUISVILLE, KY. — Rookie forward Claude Virden, the No. 2 draft choice of the Kentucky Colonels of the American Basketball Association this year, has been drafted into the Army.

Ex-Bantamweight King Wins Kayo

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI)—Brazilian Eder Jofre, the former world bantamweight champion, knocked out Robert Wong of Mexico City Friday night at 52 seconds of the third round.

Wong, a native of Dallas, was knocked down twice in the second round, and a left hook to the chin ended the bout in the third round.

Syracuse Grid Tilt Picketed

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI)—Football fans moved through lines of pickets at the main gate to Archbold Stadium Saturday without incident for the Syracuse University home football opener against Kansas.

There had been calls for a boycott of the game as well as plans for picketing of the ticket gates by both whites and blacks upset over charges of racial discrimination in the schools athletic department.

Two policemen on horseback moved the pickets away from the ticket booths at the main gate. It was the first time in recent Syracuse police history that horses were pressed into service.

Dense Fog Halts Fifth Cup Race

NEWPORT, R. I. (UPI)—Dense fog along the Rhode Island coastline forced postponement of Saturday's fifth race in the America's Cup yacht competition until Monday after Intrepid, the U. S. defender, escaped serious damage in a towing accident.

Intrepid, leading Gretel II of Australia by 3-1 in the best-of-seven series and needing just one more victory to complete America's 21st defense of the coveted Cup, drifted onto rocks near Castle Hill Light in the East passage of Narragansett Bay when her towline from the tender parted while she was being taken out into Rhode

Judy Will Remember The Alamo

ALAMO, Calif. (UPI)—Slim Judy Rankin takes a two-stroke advantage into today's second round of the $25,000 Alamo Open ladies' golf tournament.

Mrs. Rankin completed the Round Hill Country Club course four under par Friday with a 33-36—69, two strokes better than three other LPGA competitors. Kathy Whitworth, Beth Stone and Gloria Ehret all fired 71s in the 80-degree weather.

Jan Ferraris, San Francisco women's amateur champ three times, also was under par with a 72.

A few of the tournament favorities had their troubles on the narrow but long Round Hill layout. Carol Mann shot a 76, Joan Carner a 77 and defending champion Donna Capone a 79.

Four-time tour winner Shirley Englehorn kept pace with Mrs. Rankin with a 33 on the front nine, only to soar to 41 on the backside for a score of 74. Miss Englehorn hurt her chances by stroking her tee shot out of bounds on the 10th hole.

Mrs. Rankin suffered only one bogey Friday when she shot into a trap on the 15th hole. Miss Whitworth, two over par on the front nine, poured in four birdies in the latter portion to pull into the second place deadlock. Miss Whitworth is the leading LPGA money winner.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Sept. 26, the 269th day of 1970 with 96 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1777 British troops occupied Philadelphia during the American Revolutionary War.

In 1950 U.N. troops took Seoul, capital of South Korea, from the Communists.

A thought for the day: Reinhold Niebuhr said, "Man's capacity for justice makes democracy possible, but man's inclination to injustice makes democracy necessary."

Two Are Convicted Of Burglary Try

A jury in Marin Superior Court has convicted Dennis Victor Chesley, 20, and Robert Sterling Evans, 22, of attempted burglary of a San Anselmo residence on June 10.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Municipal Court, who sat as a Superior Court judge for the trial, set sentencing Thursday for Oct. 15.
for Oct. 15.

Chesley and Evans, both of San Rafael, were arrested in the driveway of a house at 283 Crescent Road, where attempts had been made to enter.

Evans is also awaiting trial on a charge of burglarizing a San Rafael residence on June 27.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

In Bridge, Impatience Kills Many More Cats Than Curiosity

Everybody knows at least one bridge player who takes each trick at the very first opportunity. "Never win tomorrow the trick you can win today," he says with a sage look, but if you trust his sagacity you should have your own head examined. Simple impatience is the reason for his speed, and impatience kills more cats than curiosity.

KING LEAD

West led the king of hearts, continued with the jack, and then led the ace of hearts. South ruffed the third heart and led out the three top trumps. When the trumps broke badly, South began to run the diamonds.

When declarer led the second high diamond from the dummy, West found that he had the right to ruff, and he did so very joyfully. He led another heart, forcing out South's last trump. All the trumps were gone, but South still had a diamond, so he easily won the rest of the tricks.

SIMPLE SIGNAL

West should have defeated the contract by ruffing the third round of diamonds instead of the second round. Then a heart continuation would make South ruff, and South would eventually have to give up a club.

A simple signal would tell West exactly when to ruff. East is supposed to play high-low to show an even number of diamonds; but low-high (the normal order) if he has an odd number of diamonds. In this case, East would play the ten of diamonds at his first opportunity, and a lower diamond later.

The signal would make it easy for West to see that East started with four diamonds. West counts dummy's five diamonds and his own singleton, adds them to East's four diamonds and gets a total of 10 diamonds in those three hands. This means that South has the other three diamonds.

West should wait to ruff the trick that contains South's last diamond. In this way South gets no discards and will not be able to lead a diamond to dummy later.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - A K Q 10 9
♥ - 10 7
♦ 8 7 2
♣ - A K 10.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade.

Do not consider an opening bid of one no-trump, even though you have 16 points and balanced distribution. Your strength is concentrated in two suits, and your powerful major suit is likely to be a surer road to game than no-trump would be.

Hearing Set For Steven Samochin

A preliminary hearing has been set for Oct. 6 in Marin unicipal Court for Steven Gregory Samochim, 33, of San Rafael, who is accused of attempting to burglarize a San Rafael doctor's office on Sept. 7.

Samochin was arrested after a doctor who was working in his office on Labor Day said he recognized Samochim who, he said, was trying to break a glass door.

Highway Safety Bureau's Priorities May Be Faulty

The National Highway Safety bureau wants to see automobile accident fatalities and injuries reduced to the absolute minimum.

It has in its bureaucratic wisdom decided that the way to bring about such a reduction is to establish priorities for use of federal resources available for the effort.

All this of course appears highly laudable.

A note of caution is sounded at this point by Harry D. Holt, president of the American Automobile Association and former president of the California State Automobile Association. "The danger is," Holt warns, "that the top priority will get all the attention while those lower on the list will have to settle for little or no attention."

THERE ARE SIGNS that this would be tragic.

In accordance with its expressed intentions, the National Highway Safety Bureau has announced its priorities.

The safety of the automobile tops the list. (Perhaps this a victory for Ralph Nader.)

Safer designed highways is accorded second priority.

The safety habits of individual drivers is relegated to bottom on the list.

Holt questions whether this order of priorities is proper.

"IT IS HIGHLY unlikely," observes the AAA president, "that we are ever going to build a car which will save the lives of its occupants when it crashes into a concrete abutment at 70 miles per hour."

Nor can the design of a highway make it impossible for a drunken driver to cause fatal collisions, he adds.

Holt hits the nail on the head with his contention that "in the complex interaction between the vehicle, the driver and the road — the driver is the single most important factor."

Latest statistics from the National Safety Council show that more than 80 per cent of all fatal accidents and more than 90 per cent of ALL accidents are the result of improper driving. The council has found that alcohol is a factor in about 50 per cent of all fatal accidents. Speed is a factor in 30 per cent.

"It is the driver not the vehicle or the road — who consumes alcohol and drives at excessive speed," Holt points out.

COULD IT BE that the National Highway Safety Bureau put the driver's safety habits at the bottom of the priority list because they are the most difficult to deal with?

California's standards for driver licensing and the state's program for retesting previously licensed drivers are among the most avanced in the nation. But they will have to be improved — made more restrictive — if we are to have safer highways.

Our provision for driver education in our schools is among the most comprehensive in the nation. But it will have to be made even better if our highways are to be made appreciably safer.

Classes for violators — such as those conducted in Marin — need to be extended and expanded. Phoenix, Ariz., has developed rehabilitation and education courses for drunken driving offenders. Courses of this nature could well be established nation-wide.

THE NATIONAL TRAFFIC Safety Bureau would do well to hearken to Harry Holt's conclusion:

"If we don't give more attention to the human element, other traffic safety efforts will be for naught."

If today's traffic safety efforts are for naught, the future is indeed gruesome to contemplate.

Why Hire An Attorney?

We are left wondering just what Marin County sheriff's deputies hope to gain by hiring an attorney to push their demands for higher pay.

The deputies were incensed by what they felt was discriminatory treatment when they were offered only the same 5 per cent raise given most other county employees. They pointed out that their pay is below that of sheriff's officers in other Bay Area counties, and below that of police in most cities. So far, so good.

They are seeking a 12½ per cent pay hike. The top scale for deputy sheriff (sergeants and lieutenants receive more) is now $892 per month. A 5 per cent raise puts this at $936.60. A 12½ per cent hike would make it $1,003.50 — right up at the top when compared with surrounding jurisdictions.

The difference is $66.90 per month. At that rate, it would require the total increases of 82 man-months to pay the $5,500 retainer reportedly given the attorney.

That doesn't sound like too great a bargain, even if the attorney were somehow able to win the full raise.

But we doubt that he can do it. In fact, we doubt that he can come as close as the deputies themselves could have come without him.

This business of hiring attorneys to push wage demands is a strange one. There is nothing in a lawyer's training that especially qualifies him for it, except that presumably he is a good arguer. And the board controlling the pay is less likely to listen to an outside attorney than it is to listen to its own employees.

San Rafael firemen found that out when they hired an attorney in their wage dispute with the city.

Twin Raccoons

Raccoons sometimes have quintuplets, but we are pleased to have twins at our house. Well, not really at the house, but in our backyard almost every night.

They come with their mother to eat at a special raccoon feeding table, built five feet off the ground to discourage skunks. The twins are about half the size of their mother and are active, inquisitive and plump in the manner of baby bears. They are fascinated by their own shadows cast by our floodlight. And they peer over the edge of the table to see what is underneath.

Normally, raccoons spend the daylight hours asleep in the trees, so they are no strangers to climbing. Even the twins shinny up and down the four-by-four redwood posts with ease.

While they may not be "our twins" they are our raccoons' twins, and we share an extended pride of parenthood. Anyway, we'll bet our raccoons are smarter than your raccoons.

Bouquets—And No Brickbats

BOUQUET to the U.S. Department of the Interior for its "Johnny Horizon Countryside Cleanup" announced for next month at Samuel P. Taylor State Park. The park needs it.

BOUQUET to Marin County supervisors for approving metal detectors and walkie-talkie radios to increase security at the Hall of Justice.

BOUQUET to the City of Petaluma for going ahead with underground utility lines.

BOUQUET to Donald R. Thieler and the Miwok Archeology Reserve of Marin for efforts to preserve an Indian mound in Marinwood.

A Child's Thanks To An Honest Man

It was the 17 of Aug. My family was going camping. We had stopped at Mayfair and when we were putting food in our camper my sister Bridget Lynch left her purse on the bumper and forgot it. A man named Jefferson Stewart found it in the street and brought it to the police department. I want to thank him for what he did. There are not too many people like that left in the world. So thank you Jefferson Stewart.

We Should Think Before Discarding

Once again your paper held sage advice for the people of Marin. Last night's (Sept. 21) editorial on Pepsi-Cola's "deposit and return" campaign was hopefully heeded by all your readers.

We should simply train ourselves to think, "What will result if I throw this away instead of saving it to be recycled? Will it affect anyone in the future? Do I have the right to destroy our environment further?" If we can think of these things, I'm sure that more people will be turning in their old bottles (we did that not so very long ago, didn't we?) and perhaps even begin saving their cans (this was done during World War II, wasn't it?).

Once we all do these things, we can be assured of a happier, healthier citizenry in our future.

Civil Rights Law Not Adequate

You have carried your argument — whatever it may be — beyond any rational limits. Equating the passage of an equal rights amendment with the loss of all sexual distinctions reaches well past the realm of thoughtful evaluation into over-emotional propagandism.

The 19th Amendment (which took feminists more than 50 years to win) granting women the vote, and the 1964 Civil Rights Act (to which sex was added only as a ploy to impede its passage) have not been enough to insure equal treatment for women under the law. An amendment to the Constitution will help fill in the gaps.

Regardless of initial intent, special protective laws act as a deterrent to the hiring and promotion of women workers. These laws also tend to limit earning ability. They need revision. The proposed amendment could help effect this needed change.

Probably no one believes this proposed amendment will automatically solve all our cultural inequities. Private prejudice has been fostered and supported by public institutions over the centuries. If a legal public pronouncement for sex equality is made, private practices may soon follow. A similar argument resounded through the 1960's in regard to civil rights for the Black American. "You cannot legislate morality" was the cliche. Yet, civil rights legislation has proven to be a powerful weapon against unreasoned prejudice. Your position against the "women's" amendment is therefore suspect . . .

LINES ON LIVING

Man Asks, 'Who Am I?' Each Must Be Himself

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

When God blurted out to Adam in the garden, "Where art thou man?" the challenge was not in the physical sense of placing the fugitive man. It was an imperative of spiritual identity. "Where are you," thunders the Voice in the perpetually divine echo, seeking out man. Where do you stand and on what grounds do you fall?

The Voice emanating from the garden his enormous power. It ennobles and fulfills, haunts and bedevils. It is the true mark of distinction of man to ponder "Who am I?"

"You and I," writes W. Macneile Dixon, "possess a supreme talent denied to the universe. We are awake as nothing else in creation is awake. The most enigmatical, indescribable, undeniable attribute of the self is its awareness."

MAN CARES. Man senses. man wants to know. All his life he struggles to know — above all—himself. It's a deadly serious game, in which too many lose.

Who am I? What is the real I residing in me? How much of that real identity has emerged to permit me to live up to my fullest expectations and potential of myself? Extreme self-estrangement can be the cruelest unreality and insanity a person can impose upon himself.

WE CANNOT go around pretending what we are not, that which we are not meant to be. As we do not live someone else's life, we must not imitate some one else's personality and soul. But, alas, many are playing their deadly little games, daily, trying to outguess themselves by pinning on their back other people's identity.

Mass media, mass fashion, mass hysteria, are in the way of the conscious soul, assaulting rootage in a personal identity. Image is the new god of Aquarius modernity; fashion is worshipped with a passion.

People play deadly games. And when they play them long enough they become ritual, worship. And when they worship strange images, when they imitate other lives, they commit idolatry — they lose themselves and in the process banish God from their midst.

Headlessness Pervades Capital In Fight Over Import Quotas

WASHINGTON — The headless horseman, as he rampaged up and down Washington Irving's tight little preserve in the Hudson River Valley, sent ripples of dismay among the simple people of that simple time. There may be no horseman but a dismaying headlessness pervades this capital.

Nowhere is it more apparent than in the backing and filling between Congress and the executive over the trade bill. That bill, as reported out of the House Ways and Means Committee, imposed quota restrictions on imports of shoes and textiles, reinforced the system of oil quotas, and gave the president authority to use the quota system on other goods coming into the country when imports reach a certain level.

While indicating that he favors restrictions on textiles, the President has said he would veto a bill fixing additional quotas. The concession on textiles was laid down even before Mr. Nixon was nominated as part of the southern strategy. As forces within the administration pull in opposite directions, doubt has been cast on the President's resolve to veto the bill if it finally passes both houses with additional quotas intact.

PRESIDENT NIXON'S congressional aids have failed to give a sense of direction to what the White House wants. This leaves only one element knowing exactly what it wants — the powerful and persistent lobbyists for the commercial interests that would benefit by the quota system.

Various ways to kill the bill are still being worked at. Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri believes that in the Senate or the House it can be hung with so many amendments that a veto will be inevitable. A delaying tactic would keep it from passage before adjournment on Oct. 15.

But on the other side of the fence the protectionist backers are working on strategy to slip it around the hurdles of regular procedure. Sen. Ernest F.Hollings of South Carolina gave advance notice that he will try to tie the trade bill as an amendment either to the president's welfare plan (if that ever gets up for passage) or to the bill increasing social security benefits. Tacked onto the latter, with all that it means for millions of Americans, a veto would come hard.

THE AMERICAN public seems harldy aware of the long reach of the quota measure. That is not true in the rest of the world. The profound concern in western Europe is that the United States is going protectionist again, with a trade war at the end of the road.

The parallel is striking with 1930 when Congress pushed through the Smoot-Hawley tariff despite the warning of a thousand leading economists who saw that a protectionist wall could only deepen the growing worldwide depression with incalculable political consequences.

TRADE IS FAR from being the only area where leadership and direction have been sadly lacking. Again and again, between the fumbling in Congress and the failure of guidance from the executive, the rule is drift. Rarely, as in putting over the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile, are forces concentrated to achieve the White House aim.

In black moments it must seem to those trying to keep the train on the tracks that multiple, overlapping crises are beyond the reach of government. Leaderlessness — pale horse, headless rider — is an affliction the times can ill afford.

Can John And Martha Find Happiness? Tune In Next Week

WASHINGTON — Washington has become the setting for several new television programs. "The Bold Ones," starring Hal Holbrook, features a U.S. senator dealing with the problems of legislating for the country. "Nancy" is about a President's daughter who lives in the White House and is in love with a veterinarian.

Another one in the planning stage and written by a Hollywood friend of mine is titled "John and Martha," the story of a simple attorney general of the United States named John and his simple fun-loving wife, Martha.

My friend said in "John and Martha" he hopes to answer the question of whether a man and woman who hate students, professors, educators and Sen. J. William Fulbright can find happiness in Washington.

"WE'RE WORKING on the pilot now," my friend said. "It's really a lot of laughs. We open with the attorney general, John, attending his fourth cocktail party of the evening. He's talking to a woman and tells her professors are 'stupid bastards' who are ruining the educational institutions. He calls Henry Kissinger, the President's assistant, an 'egocentric maniac' who likes to have his picture taken with Jill St. John, and he blames the Democrats for all the woes in the country.

"Well, what John doesn't know is that the woman he's talking to works for Women's Wear Daily and everything he's told her is printed in the paper. John reads it in bed the next morning with an ice bag on his head.

"You can imagine the flap," my friend said, chuckling on the phone.

"The first thing John decides to do is deny he spoke to the reporter. But Martha has a better idea. While John is putting more ice in his ice bag, Martha sneaks to the upstairs bathroom of their Watergate apartment duplex and telephones a United Press reporter and tells her the Women's Wear Daily story is ridiculous."

I started to chuckle myself.

"NOW HERE is where it really gets funny. After denying what John said, Martha makes matters worse by saying the academic society responsible for all the troubles in the country, and is destroying the United States. She tells the reporter that professors make her sick to her stomach, and they're a bunch of sidewalk diplomats and they don't have any right to say anything."

My friend was roaring with laughter.

"It's pretty funny so far," I admitted.

My friend continued. "In the next scene Martha has the ice bag on her head and she's reading what she told the United Press. John doesn't know what to do, so he sneaks up into the bathroom of Watergate and he calls his office and tells them to deny everything."

But while John is on the telephone in the bathroom, Martha starts calling other reporters confirming what she said.

"The next day John has the ice bag on his head and he reads all the things Martha has added to the story.

"Here's where the thing really takes off," my friend said. "Guess who comes to visit John while he's in bed?"

"JOHN KENNETH Galbraith?" I asked.

"No, stupid. Henry Kissinger and Jill St. John! They announce that, thanks to John, they're going to get married. Martha gets so excited when she hears the news that she rushes upstairs to her bathroom and calls the Associated Press."

"That's great," I said truthfully. "But what are you going to do for the next episode?"

"I don't know yet," my friend said. "But John and Martha will think of something."

AUSSIES IN VIETNAM

Equal Expertise: Fight And Pacify

By BARNEY SEIBERT

NUI DAT, Vietnam (UPI) —It's a different kind of war at the Australian task force base at Nui Dat.

The 5,000-man Australian task force, including a battalion size element of New Zealanders, is the only allied unit in the Indochina war with tactics markedly different from those used by Americans, South Vietnamese, South Koreans and Thais.

The South Vietnamese, Koreans and Thais all were trained and advised by Americans. So were the Laotians. Even the Cambodians are learning the American counter insurgency tactics from the South Vietnamese.

But the Australians have needed no advice from Americans in scouring the jungles for the Viet Cong in Phuoc Tuy Province, a lightly populated area of jungled forests and mountains along the South China Sea 50 miles southeast of Saigon.

Japanese infantrymen, who were experts in the craft of jungle warfare, told American captors at the end of World War II that the Australians were the real jungle experts on the Allied side. "Americans are not jungle fighters," one prisoner of war remarked. "They simply remove the jungle."

The Australian expertese in jungle war was forged in expeditions to maintain order in New Guinea, polished in the Australian army's jungle warfare school, and honed in 12 years of campaigning against the Communists in Malaysia.

The Aussies are the only U.S. allies in Vietnam who brought along most of their own equipment and who pay their own way.

In addition to the 5,000-man task force there are another 3,000 Australian fighting men in Vietnam—airmen, sailors and military advisors working with South Vietnamese units. About 50 per cent of the Australians are conscripts.

Because of their jungle warfare expertese, the Australians are less oriented toward air mobility in the Indochina conflict.

One of the first things Americans notice at Nui Dat is the absence of helicopters—the Aussies have only about half as many as a conventional U.S. infantry unit of equivalent size and about one-fourth of the total assigned to an American air mobile division.

Another major difference in the Australian concept is the absence of Vietnamese civilian workers at the base. "We do not have a security problem," one officer said.

Other differences:

The Australians live in tents rather than "hooches," call their infantrymen "crunchies" rather than "grunts," maintain their vehicles and equipment almost as well as the Koreans—the most spit and polish soldiers in Vietnam—leave the trees standing to provide shade when they build a base camp rather than removing the vegetation to minimize the infiltration danger.

The Australians buy their artillery pieces and ammunition from the United States —"in the quantities in which you make it we can buy it cheaper than we could make it ourselves." They also buy machineguns, grenade launchers, armored personnel carriers and some web equipment.

Their tanks are British Centurions. Their rifles are the Belgian NATO weapon, which uses the same cartridge as the M.S. M16; the Aussies say it has better range and is less susceptible to jamming than the M16. Their Jeeps and weapons carriers are various modifications of Australian-built Land Rovers and their trucks are built by the Australian subsidiary of International Harvester Corp. The trucks do not have the familiar dual rear wheels of U.S. Army vehicles.

The elite Australian unit in Vietnam is the Special Air Service Squadron, highly trained volunteers who are paratrooper qualified. In four years of operations in South Vietnam's Phuoc Tuy Province, the Australians have killed 2,840 Viet Cong and driven the only two main force Viet Cong battalions, D445 and D440, from the province.

Intelligence estimates show about 800 Viet Cong guerrillas remain in the province and the Communist infrastructure has been reduced 50 per cent to 1,500 persons. During the 1968 Tet offensive there were an estimated 5,000 Viet Cong soldiers in the province, supported by an infrastructure of 3,000 persons. — And the Australians in Vietnam know more than just how to fight.

"Take a look at the Aussies' pacification program," a civilian official of the U.S. Mission in Vietnam advised a UPI reporter. "It's one of the most effective in the country."

Lt. Col. Keith P. Outridge, 43, of Canberra, commander of the 1st Australian Civil Affairs Unit, said: "We only try to do things as the Vietnamese see it and wish it done, and try to do something to stimulate their development as we see it and hope they see it the same as we do."

The "Australian Province" — Phuoc Tuy —is a 400-square-mile area of mountains, jungle, forests and coastal swamps. Its 105,000 residents are poor and the province has never been self sufficient in food. Before war disrupted its economy, its people made their livelihood by working on the large rubber plantations, lumber mills, salt drying ponds and in the resort hotels along the beaches.

The Australian pacification program is similar to but somewhat smaller in scope than American efforts in other provinces and there is some U.S. pacification activity by the American Civil Operations Rural Development Support (CORDS) program in the province. But most of the effort is Australian.

The Australians, who learned to tackle water resource problems the hard way in the arid areas of their own country, place somewhat more stress on water development than do Americans and somewhat less on agriculture. Otherwise the programs are similar—road and public works building, medical clinics, education.

The principal difference is the administration. Pacification is a civilian responsibility among the Americans, a military responsibility among the Australians.

Col. Outridge sees both advantages and disadvantages in a militarily administered pacification program.

On the plus side, he said, is that fact that "most authority in a country at war is military and there is an empathy between military men; we have closer access to military resources to carry out the programs."

Disadvantages, he finds, are "a lack of expertese in specific fields and lack of continuity in projects" due to the one-year military rotation.

However, he feels that a military pacification program may get to the areas where it is needed most sooner than a civilian program because the soldier is less likely to be kept at a distance by absence of physical security.

"We try to work with the soft moccasin instead of the hob nail boot," Outridge said. "We try to get the Vietnamese into the program as soon as we can. We insist on their input. They must initiate the project, it must benefit the government, and they must help carry it out."

About 22 per cent of Phuoc Tuy Province's population are fishermen, 35 per cent farmers. To stimulate agriculture, the Australians have introduced breeding stock and model farm methods for chicken and hog raising operations.

"We go up and down the highway and persuade a farmer here and there to try it out. After that it spreads from neighbor to neighbor," Outridge said, and added:

"I think we are creating an environment in which the people can win themselves."

The Jordanian civil war flared and cooled this week.

Amman was quieter toward the end of the week than at any time of the war as the Palestinian guerrillas called for a cease-fire in their fight with the Jordanian forces. But about 60 refugees, half of them American, who were evacuated to Beirut reported mortar fire around the airport as they took off.

Syria got into the war, Israel was on full alert and some U.S. military units were alerted. The White House, however, said President Nixon had not made a decision to intervene. The U.S. alert was relaxed late in the week.

Syrian armored units were reported on the Palestinians' side in northern Jordan. The guerrillas appeared to have controlled most major cities of northern Jordan, except Amman.

Israel Deputy Premier Yigal Allon warned Jordan's King Hussein against any deal with the guerrillas allowing them to operate against Israel along the Jordanian River cease-fire line.

Prime Minister Golda Meir of Israel ended her tour of the United States saying she felt American aid to her country would be increased.

On Wall Street, prices fell early in the week because of the gloomy news from the Mideast and in spite of a cut by banks in the prime interest rate. But it rebounded as the news got better, including a jump of 4.93 in the Dow Jones Industrial average as 21.34 million shares were traded Thursday — the second most active day in the history of the New York Stock Exchange.

In other news of the week:

The Eastern Seaboard suffered a power crisis with local companies unable to produce enough electricity. Voltage was cut, selective blackouts were imposed and power was imported from the Midwest.

The United Auto Workers and General Motors got together for the first time since the strike started. UAW President Leonard Woodcock predicted "a hell of a long strike."

Joseph W. White went to his desk in the state Labor Department in Albany, N.Y., unwrapped a rifle he had brought in and shot and killed four female secretaries and himself.

Three adventurers who set out Sunday from Long Island on what was to have been the first balloon trip to Europe disappeared Monday south of Newfoundland.

Two American officials flew to Cuba and returned with Robert Iabadia — the first accused hijacker turned over by Cuba.

The Soviet Union's unmanned Luna 16 landed in Russia after returning from a moon landing with a load of lunar rocks. President Nixon asked Congress to allow the FBI to act in cases of campus bombing or arson.

In Baseball, the Minnesota Twins won the American League west pennant for the second year in a row.

Soledad's Violence Felt Beyond Walls

By WILEY MALONEY

SOLEDAD (UPI) — Soledad is a Spanish word, meaning solitude, loneliness, homesickness, seclusion — a lonely place such as a desert.

Soledad also is the name of a California state correctional facility — a prison.

Here in a lettuce-growing valley south of San Francisco Soledad prison has been a place of violence and death with shock waves that carried beyond the walls and into a courtroom at the Marin County Hall of Justice where Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley was kidnapped. In the shoot-out that followed the kidnapping, Haley and three other persons were killed.

The tragedy in Marin apparently was rooted in the Soledad prison. It consists of two main facilities, "Central" and "North". Both are concrete, multi-storied cell blocks.

The entrance to the prison is on Highway 101, a main road from San Francisco to Los Angeles. It is beautifully landscaped. Trustees see to that. The prison area covers 966 acres, most of it given to growing vegetables (tilled by trustees) and raising animals to provide food for the inmates.

For nearly a decade the prison has had its problems. The warden denies these are racial. The population currently is 2,570 inmates, 30 per cent of whom are Mexican American and 20 per cent black. There are 275 "correctional officers," or guards.

For the last 10 years there have been stabbings, riots and attempted escapes. In January the situation grew worse. It began when a newly constructed exercise yard was opened. A group, containing all black inmates except for two men, was admitted. A brawl broke out. Tower guard O.C. Miller blew a whistle. Then he began shooting. Three black men were killed and one guard was wounded.

The black inmates, apparently, did not forget.

It was only three days later that a novice guard, John Vincent Mills, 26, was beaten, dragged up three flights of concrete steps and tossed headfirst to his death. Beside him was a note.

"One down, two to go," it read.

Mills had no connection with the shooting by guard Miller.

Shortly afterward two more guards were seized, but were freed by tear gas attacks made by other guards. Their captors had demanded access to locked cells of other inmates.

Then, in late July, William C. Shull, 40, was found with 42 stab wounds in his body and a metal file — prisoner made — stuck in his body.

In the interim, the Monterey County Grand Jury had returned murder indictments for the murder of Mills. Those held were John Clutchette, 24, Fletta Drimgo, 23, and George L. Jackson, 28. They became the "Soledad Brothers." All were black.

During the time the Monterey County grand jury deliberated another 22-year-old "white incorrigible" was found mortally stabbed at Soledad. It was the sixth violent death in Soledad in seven months, but not attributed to racial unrest.

The deaths resulted in multiple investigations. One of the most notable was that by five black California legislators. They charged Soledad prison authorities with cruel and inhumane treatment. A 26-page report called for "independent, thorough and immediate" investigation.

The report charged that food was often contaminated, inmates were not informed on why they were being placed in maximum security cells and that men were being placed in the 6-by-10 -foot maximum security cells to remain for 23 1-2 hours a day.

Supt. Cletus B. Fitzharris then called for professional investigation.

"I don't think it's so bad here," he said.

The resulting investigations gave him a "clean bill of health."

The three "Soledad Brothers" were transferred into the jurisdiction of San Francisco, then Marin County Courts. A "Soledad Brothers" headquarters was set up in San Francisco for defense of the men accused of slaying Mills.

As a result, authorities believe, four other men have gone to their deaths. These were killed in the Marin County shootout.

They were San Quentin Prison convicts James McClain, 37, William A. Christmas, 27, and the young brother of George L. Jackson, a 17-year-old who was said to have been acting as a bodyguard for former philosophy instructor Angela Davis of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Authorities have said the firearms young Jackson carried into the Marin courtroom on Aug. 7 were purchased by Miss Davis.

Miss Davis has been charged with murder and is sought on a federal warrant.

William Black points to the recreation yard at the Soledad Correctional Facility where three prisoners were shot to death Jan. 13 by a tower guard as they beat two inmates. Marin, Sonoma's Prop. 18 Benefits

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Marin and Sonoma counties would be able to issue some $22 million in bonds to help build a transit system with gas tax revenue under a proposition on the November general election ballot.

This was the prediction yesterday by the author of the controversial measure, Stn. James R. Mills, D-San Diego.

His measure, Proposition 18, would allow counties to use up to 25 per cent of their share of gas tax revenue for transit. Gas tax revenue now is reserved exclusively for highway purposes, a restriction the highway lobby has pledged to maintain by working to defeat the proposition.

Mills said that Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post had figured that $85,623,000 would be available statewide from gas taxes, from which one-quarter could be used for transit if the proposition passes the needed majority vote.

County use of such revenues for transit, in turn, would require approval by a majority of the county's voters.

Marin would get $873,000 a year under current revenue levels, and Sonoma would get $942,000, Mills reported.

These revenues, he said, would finance $10,476,000 in transit bonds in Marin and $11,304,000 in bonds in Sonoma.

Mills noted that his figures were based on his assumption that the revenue would be paid to counties on a formula based on the county's motor vehicle registration as a percentage of the total registration in the state.

Marin has 1.02 per cent, and Sonoma has 1.1 per cent, he said.

The nine Bay Area counties would get $19,077,000.

Mills said he based his bond figures on information from "people in the field of governmental bonds" that bonds 12 to 13 times the annual income could be floated.

Mills also pointed to pending federal legislation that would provide matching funds for transit on a two-to-one basis, thus Bay Area transit systems conceivably could greatly increase the funds available for transit, with Marin funding $31.5 million in bonds, Mills figured.

Even this amount, however, "would not be enough to do more than pay for the costs of construction of a line within Marin county itself," Mills said. The problem of financing a crossing to San Francisco "would remain before the Golden Gate Bridge District board," he said.

Bolinas Road Site Is Picked Out

The Fairfax Planning Commission has recommended to the city council that the controversial proposed public safety building be placed on Bolinas Road across from the city park, according to secretary Ernestine Healy.

Second and third priority sites named by the commission Thursday were the Central School grounds — if the Fairfax School District approves — and the area of the present police parking lot on Park Avenue, she said.

The Bolinas Road site was proposed to the council by the site selection committee of the planning commission, last year but met with mixed reactions and counter-suggestions. A 1968 bond issue of $550,000 for the building was defeated by a 2-1 margin.

The present estimate of the cost of the proposed new home of the police and fire departments is $400,000, Mrs. Healy said.

She said the planning commission discussed size of the lots, price, location and ease of access before re-recommending the Bolinas Road property.

The commission also set sessions for Oct. 15 and 22 to discuss the proposed new zoning, ordinance.

Salaries Corrected In County Clerk's Payroll Report

The salaries of seven persons in the Marin County clerk's office were listed incorrectly in Tuesday's Independent-Journal.

The correct salaries are: Lorraine Healey, intermediate typeist, $6,276; Bonnie McAffee, intermediate typist, $6,276; Janet Wilkinson, intermediate typist, $5,976; Lynn DeCota, legal clerk, $7,428; Marjorie Gade, legal clerk, $7,800; Hiroko Uratsu, legal clerk, $7,428, and Mayday Card, superior court clerk II, $10,188.

The total salaries for the county clerk's office is $261,401, not $263,401 as reported.

Woman, 22, On Probation In Drug Case

A young woman arrested in November 1968 raid on a San Anselmo home equipped for mass production of LSD was fined $100 yesterday for being in a place where drugs were used.

Judge E. Warren McGuire also placed Mary Theresa Rosenbaum, 22, on probation for two years.

Miss Rosenbaum pleaded guilty to the reduced misdemeanor charge earlier this month after previously being accused of a felony count of possessing LSD.

A co-defendant, Andrew Samuel Perri, 21, last month was sent to state prison by Judge Samuel W. Gardiner after a jury had found Perry guilty of arranging the sale of 2,000 LSD tablets.

Another man tried with Perry, Hamilton Bassett Henry, 23, who was found guilty of possessing LSD and marijuana for sale has jumped $20,000 bail and has not yet been sentenced. He reportedly has been located in Amsterdam, Holland, by a bail bondsman, however.

Still awaiting trial is David Charles Hoye, 22, who is charged with possessing LSD.

LSD and marijuana valued at $35,000 were seized in the raid on the home at 156 Crescent Road, which drug agents said was linked to heavy drug traffic in San Francisco's Haighty-Ashbury district.

Health Officials Looking For Dog Who Bit Woman

Marin County health officials said yesterday they are searching for a small gray and white terrier which bit a 70-year-old Kentfield woman last Saturday as she was walking through the College of Marin campus.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, said the dog bit the woman on the leg between 1 and 1:30 p.m. as she was strolling past the art building.

Dr. Albrecht said the dog was described as lively with a white face, speckled body and floppy ears.

Persons owning or knowing of such a dog in the College of Marin area should call the county health office or the humane society.

Dr. Albrecht said the county has not had a case of dog rabies since 1937, but unless the dog is found and examined, the woman will have to undergo painful treatment.

Marinite Is Awarded Child Study Grant

Dr. Keith Beery, working through The Child Center in Kentfield, has been awarded a $75,000 federal grant to develop a method of spreading knowledge on teaching children with learning problems, the U.S. Office of Education announced yesterday.

Beery, who for the past two years has taken batteries of experts to local schools to teach methods of dealing with problem children, said he will use the grant to develop a person in each of a dozen Marin and Richmond schools to serve the same function.

SFO COPTER TO CONTINUE MARIN TRIPS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — SFO Helicopter Airlines Inc. will continue its service to Berkeley and Marin.

Trustee Sam Kagel said yesterday that the plans to stop the service had been abandoned and that "the response to our efforts to keep these runs and these helicopters alive has been most encouraging."

He credited "concerted community pressures" from Berkeley and Marin County as being the deciding factors. The company amended its application to the Civil Aeronautics Board to discontinue only its routes south of San Francisco Airport.

False Bomb Threat

A bomb threat at the Pepperland Night Spot, 735 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael, proved to be a hoax last night.

The telephoned threat was received at 11:55 p.m., but the building was not emptied, San Rafael police said.

Health Warning On Old Drugs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Be wary of old medicines, warns the Health Insurance Institute. Some medicines lose or gain strength when they are old, making them ineffective or dangerous. If they have changed color, separated or otherwise changed composition, throw them out — not where children can get at them.

Thai Translation Of Koran Completed

BANGKOK (UPI) —After two dozen years of hard work, a Bangkok businessman has completed a Thai translation of the Koran, the bible of about 500 million Moslems. Direk Kulsiriwasdki, the translator, said the final sections of his translation will be published later this year.

Groundbreaking Is Held For Low-Moderate Housing Units

Groundbreaking for a $1,168,000 low and moderate-income housing development was held today at the First Congregational Church of San Rafael.

The project, called Pilgrim Park, for families in the $4,900 to $7,800 income bracket, is 100 per cent financed by the federal government and is administered by the Federal Housing Administration.

The 61 apartments will be clustered in three acres of the church grounds at 8 North San Pedro Road. Completion date has been set for July of next year. Rentals will be from $103 to $158 per month.

Participating in the ceremony were: Arthur L. Timmel, assistant regional administrator for the Department of Housing and Urban Development; Dr. Richard C. Norberg, executive minister of the Northern California Conference of the United Church of Christ; Douglas Ferguson, president of the Ecumenical Association for Housing, which arranged the financing; Margaret Azevedo, Marin County planning commissioner; Eugene Wedell, Wedell Group Architects; Dr. John A. Starkweather, president of Pilgrim Park Inc., and Rev. Francis Geddes, minister of the First Congregational Church.

The contractor is Terra California of Walnut Creek.

American mint growers farm 76,600 acres of peppermint and 27,000 of spearmint, says the National eGographic.

Drug Treatment For Heroin User

Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court has placed Jeffrey Dean Peters, 19, of San Rafael, on probation for three years on condition he commit himself to Mendocino State Hospital for treatment of drug addiction.

He told Peters that if he dropped out of the treatment program he would be returned to court for sentencing.

Peters had earlier admitted possessing heroin when arrested by San Rafael police on May 30 after he was seen walking unsteadily on Fourth Street.

Sharp Quake Is Recorded In Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — A strong earthquake jolted west-central Colombia today.

First reports made no mention of damage or injuries, but the area is primitive and communications are spotty.

The director of the Geophysical Institute in Bogota, the Rev. Emilio Ramirez, said the temblor was recorded on seismographs here and in the city of Pereira 125 miles to the west.

Ramirez said the epicenter was apparently located off the Pacific coast.

Beer Starts, Ends In Glass

NEW YORK (UPI) —Today's scientifically brewed beers, which normally end up in glass bottles, begin their lives in glass containers, too.

The containers in this instance are the huge brewing vats where the beer is aged after fermentation. In the old days, the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute says, beer was aged in oaken vats lined with pitch. Today's precisely formulated beers are aged in immaculate tanks of glass-lined steel.

Bill Bredlau Likes The Old Cars Best

See Page M2

Bill Bredlau Owns Four

By DON KEOWN

"I wouldn't own a new car, if they gave me one," says Charles William (Bill) Bredlau of Sausalito.

And true to his words, the closest he comes to owning a new vehicle is the 1965 Ford pickup truck that he uses in his work.

The real pride and joy of his small automotive fleet, however, are his two Model A Fords, a 1930 four-door sedan and a 1930 sports coupe, and his 1937 "Top Hat" Bentley sedan built by Rolls-Royce.

"Now there are cars with character," says Bredlau, automobile buff, professional car restorer and mail order business man.

BREDLAU IS presently engaged in restoring the 1937 Bentley — "the body is by Freestone" — and will be showing it in the special-interest, non-competitive category tomorrow as the Marin Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home of San Francisco conducts its eighth annual Concours d'Elegance on the grounds of the Silverado Country Club at Napa from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Once the restoration is completed, Bredlau plans to enter his Bentley in competition in just such prestigious automobile events as the Silverado show.

"We think it is one of but three of its kind in all of the United States," says Bredlau of his car, "and we are currently involved in confirming that."

AND HE ADDS: "I've been told by British Motors that once I have finished the restoration, I will have an automobile worth approximately $9,500."

"I saw it, indicated I was interested in it, and Charley and I arrived at what I considered a fair price," says Bredlau.

HE DESCRIBES the car which visitors to the Napa concourse tomorrow can examine close-up as "representing the Rolls product of that era at its very best, with strong, straight, clean lines."

The classic body style features razor-edge sharp, rather than rounded, angles at the top that is sufficiently high to accommodate a gentleman's top hat inside.

While Bredlau has made a profession of acquiring, restoring and re-selling at a profit vintage automobiles, he says: "I hope to hang on to the Bentley the rest of my life, even though it might be a little rich for my blood."

BREDLAU ALSO restores fine old cars for other owners, working at the Sausalito Sports Car Center on Gate 5 Road, and operates a mail order business, Bill's Model A Parts, out of his home at 99 Glen Drive, Sausalito.

Looking with affection at his own two Model A's, Bredlau says: "I've always had a soft spot for Fords," and especially for the Model A."

Even his ownership of the Bentley has not lessened his enthusiasm for his two representatives of the four-cylinder car which the automotive empire founded by Henry Ford turned out with such success in the years 1928, 1929, 1930 and 1931. He belongs to the Marin Model A Club and is becoming increasingly active in that group, part of an effort to involve himself more and more in car owner activities — "I'm considering joining the Rolls club, if I can qualify with my Bentley."

BREDLAU'S involvement with cars began in his high school years back during World War II "when I began buying, fixing up and selling cars like old 1934 Fords to pick up a little income."

He continued with that work after his school years. "I would work for a garage as a body and fender man" he says. "But always I would be on the watch for some old Ford that I could pick up, tear apart and repair, and then sell on my own."

Others, seeing the impressive results of Bredlau's skill and

IT WAS THE square, clean, classic lines of the body of this 1937 "Top Hat" Bentley by Rolls-Royce that first attracted the attention of Charles William (Bill) Bredlau of Sausalito and caused him to acquire it. He believes it is one of but three of its kind in the entire United States. Now he is engaged in restoring the fine old car and will be showing it as a "special interest" vehicle at tomorrow's eighth annual Concours d'Elegance benefitting the Florence Crittenton Home of San Francisco on the grounds of the Silverado Country Club in Napa, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

PROUD OWNER BILL Bredlau shows June Sclafani the battery of very sophisticated and very precise instruments that cover the dashboard of this 1937 "Top Hat" Bentley automobile. Concours d'Elegance visitors at the Silverado Country Club in Napa can have their own close-up look tomorrow.

"THE FIRST real show class car to be brought to me was a 1931 Cadillac coupe convertible," Bredlau remembers. "A neighbor turned it over to me for restoration. And for that, I really had to put in some research before I began working, to make sure I would get it back together properly."

All this was in Southern California where Bredlau spent his early years.

Twelve years ago he moved to Marin County to take on a job which had been arranged by relatives living here.

"BUT IT WAS outside the car field," he says, "and so it just didn't work out, and didn't last long. Automobiles were in my blood. And pretty soon I was back working with cars."

Again Fords were a priority interest. He estimates that he has restored a score of them for himself and others through the years.

But he has also worked on Auburns, a Duesenberg, '35, '36 and '37 Buicks ("I owned a '38 Buick myself for a time") and other vintage, antique and classic cars.

THE MODEL A FORD has long been a special interest of Bill Bredlau. He now owns two. At left, he does some minor repairs upon his 1930 sports coupe. And at right, he gives his 1930 four-door deluxe sedan a bath. Bredlau also operates a mail order business — Bill's Model A Parts — supplying hard-to-get replacement parts to Model A Ford owners, with his home at 99 Glen Drive, Sausalito, as his headquarters.

it," says Bredlau of car restoration. "It's exciting to know that you have taken a car that might have been wasted in a junk heap and returned it to a condition where it is as good or better than the new cars you see on the streets or in the showrooms.

"There's a lot more than just sentiment to the saying that the old things are the best."

While there are thousands of dedicated Model A Ford owners remaining in the country, and hundreds in California, Bredlau points out that they face increasing difficulty in finding replacement parts of their old cars.

Bredlau supplies them with their needs. Generally, Bredlau gets his parts from an eastern wholesaler who remanufactures them out of old parts. Original Model A parts still usable are extremely hard to come by.

"I GUESS THERE are eight or 10 people in the country engaged in this business," Bredlau says, "and about four large distributors supplying us retailers."

Bredlau has also given a helping hand to a couple of the few remaining Model T owners, although the Model A remains his prime interest.

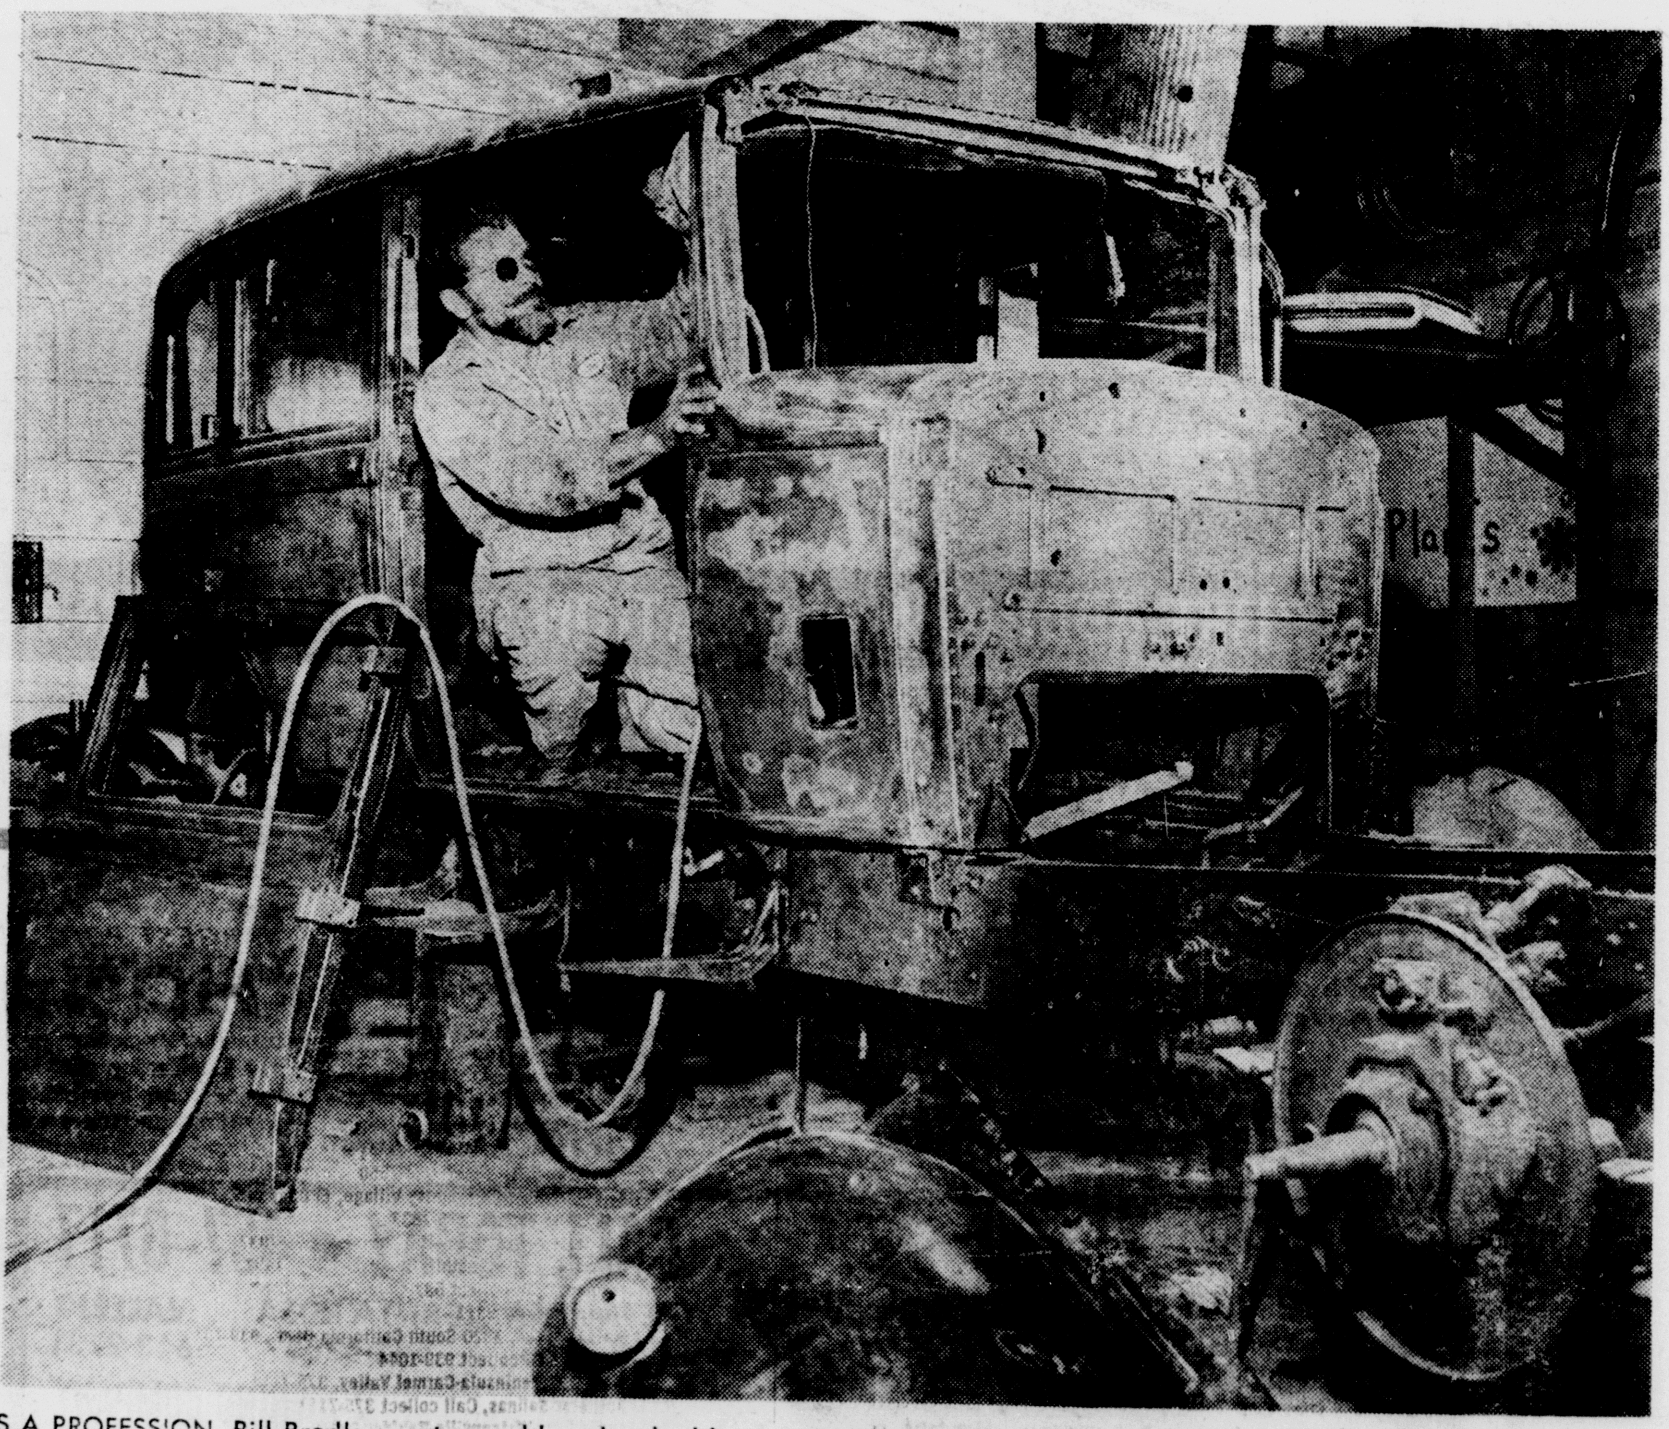
The car show to be staged tomorrow at Napa by the Marin Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home is strictly a charity event with all proceeds to go to the San Francisco institution that provides care for unwed mothers. There will be special attractions such as Mrs. Ed Reinecke's 1918 six-cyclinder Saxon and a 1931 Eugatti Royale from the famed Harrah's Collection, along with the usual array of competition cars.

FOR BILL BREDLAU it is the kind of event that he enjoys most. For it puts him among people who live, love and talk cars. And for Bredlau, there is no more fascinating subject.

So he'll be there with his Bentley eager to answer any and all questions about that car, about the profession of car restoration, and even about Model A Fords if your interest lies in that direction.

For even surrounded as he will be by Rolls-Royces, Cadillacs and Mercedes Benzes, Bredlau will confess a strong attachment to the Model A.

"It was my first real love among the automobiles," he says, "and to me it still has a personality — a strength of character — all its own."



AS A PROFESSION, Bill Bredlau restores old and valuable cars for their owners. Here he is at work rebuilding a 1928 four-door Cadillac belonging to a San Francisco attorney. Other current projects: A 1958 Four-Plus Morgan and a 1952 Porsche. And his past work has included the likes of Auburns, Duesenbergs and a considerable number of the Model A Fords that were his first and are his continuing automotive love.

William Baer: 'We Must Communicate'

Theater Figure Has Some Strong Ideas On Education

"Did you know that 50 per cent of the people in the United States are illiterate? That's a staggering figure, but it's true!"

William Baer, extensions director of the American Conservatory Theater and San Rafael resident, was discussing education, a subject with which he is continually concerned.

As head of ACT's active "out-repertory" program, which tours communities throughout Northern California performing for schools and organizations, Baer also serves as administrator of the conservatory or training programs that are an integral part of the the total San Francisco-based operation.

"COMMUNICATION is of vital importance," continued Baer. "Education, exposure and desire all cause us to be more stimulated and more stimulating. Too often we tend to deny ourselves the enjoyment of discovery — curiosity, really — and pass this failure along to our children.

"ACT's training programs attempt to arouse that curiosity, that marvelous discovery of 'other possibilities,' and to cause us to wonder more about ourselves and the people and the world around us. This kind of discovery is by no means limited to the actor — it's as basic as the educational process itself."

An inhabitant of San Rafael since he came to the Bay Area with ACT in 1966, Baer's views on education derive from personal as well as professional experience. One of the main reasons he and his attractive wife Wanda chose Marin County for their home was their daughter, Johanna, who is now 8 years old.

ALTHOUGH THEY were delighted by the opportunity to raise Johanna in a metropolitan area where a variety of "cultural" activities are available within easy driving distance, they preferred to locate in a community where a real "neighborhood" situation existed, where a little girl could keep her cats and ride her bicycle.

Johanna has her cats, rides her bike, watches television and skins her knees. But when she was 10 months old, she had a reading vocabulary of more than 500 words, and when she was 3 years, she was reading at a level considered well above that of a child in the second grade of public school.

The Baers have, as he puts it, "made a conscious effort to bring into this society a person capable of finding the answers. She may become one of the greatest ballerinas of the century (she has just returned from a tour of the Orient as a featured performer with a San Francisco ballet company), or a housewife.

"BUT, IN EITHER case, she'll have the capacity to discover things about herself and others that she might not have had if, for example, we'd communicated with her at the start in sounds like 'goo goo' instead of words.

"We must communicate with our children on an intellectual level. It's just as easy to lead yourself and your child along a more interesting and creative path than to lead yourself and that child nowhere."

Baer, who began his career in the arts as a classical musician, once aspired to be a concert pianist. He turned to conducting a number of years ago, however, and still actively pursues this endeavor. Now in his third season as conductor of the Napa Valley Symphony, he still prepares all of the scores at the piano.

HE HAS SERVED as director of the opera theater department of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, and before joining ACT he spent seven years as producer and musical director for the Phoenix Musical Theater (Arizona), where he also served as conductor of the Phoenix Chamber Orchestra and manager of the Sombrero Playhouse. Baer has served as assistant

AT HIS DESK in his San Rafael home, William Baer peruses the script of a new play. Baer is head of the American Conservatory Theater's "out-repertory" or touring program as well as its conservatory or training program. He has a rich background in both the theater and in music, and joined ACT in the spring of 1966 prior to its coming to the Bay Area. (Independent-Journal photo)

THE RANGE OF activity in the conservatory or training phase of the American Conservatory Theater's program includes a wide range of activities for both the professional or potentially professional actor and for the layman interested only in broadening his horizon through mastering some of the techniques of the drama. Above, students warm up in a dance class at which they are encouraged to discover new things about themselves as individuals. At lower left, the circus skill of juggling is demonstrated by instructor Hovey Burgess and a student. And at lower right, ACT leading actor Paul Shenar, left, experiences "the enjoyment of discovery" in a voice class taught by Mark Zeller. William Baer of San Rafael, who heads the training section of the ACT, believes that "exposure to all sorts of mental and physical disciplines" ultimately benefits the student not only as a performer, but as an individual as well.

Training For Actors And For Individuals

conductor with the Lyric Opera in Chicago, as stage manager with the Civic Light Opera in Pittsburgh and as chorus master and coach with the Ft. Worth Opera Association (Texas), where he helped form a ballet company with Mia Slavenska.

He studied with Nadia Boulanger in Paris, and served in an administrative capacity during the rebuilding of Ft. Worth's Casa Manana. (The original Casa Manana, built to house Billy Rose's spectacular "Jumbo," had burned down.)

HE LATER became musical director of the new Casa Manana, and it was there that he met his talented future wife. She auditioned as a singer for the company, and Baer hired her.

In the spring of 1966, he joined ACT, which was on the move with engagements at Westport, Stanford and Chicago. Happily, the young but already nationally-acclaimed company found a permanent home in San Francisco, and Baer's job has been involved with the "extension" of ACT into the outlying communities of the Bay Area ever since.

During ACT's first season in San Francisco, 54 out-repertory performances were given before an estimated audience total of 65,000. During the second season, away from San Francisco more than 106,000 people saw 102 performances of ACT presentations in their own communities.

APPROXIMATELY 200,000 persons attended 218 such performances during the third season, and last season, ACT played 285 "out-reps" for an estimated audience of 320,000.

"The aim of ACT's out-repertory program," says Baer, who is currently taking bookings from schools and organizations for the upcoming season, "is similar to that of our training programs, in that exposure is the keyword.

"As much as I hate the term 'grassroots,' even in 1970 that's where it's at. Getting out into the community, reaching and showing, should be the number one priority for those in the performing arts.

"I don't believe that ACT's appearance at a school is going to make every student run out and buy a ticket to one of our shows at the Geary Theater. But in the long run, that's not what I feel is the most important function of our out-rep program."

"FOR ONE THING," he continued, "students and others outside the company are exposed to the performers as people, and this is very important. Perhaps they're seeing something they've never seen before and perhaps they're enjoying it. That's important.

"They may enjoy their English or history class the next day more than they had before, or they may go look up a word that was in a script."

A similar philosophy is exemplified in ACT's various training programs.

The "Conservatory" part of American Conservatory Theater has always been considered as important as the finished professional presentations the audiences see on the stage. The unique concept of training concurrent with performing was one of the basic principles upon which William Ball, general director, originally founded ACT, and it remains the foundation upon which ACT functions.

ADVANCED professional training for persons interested in theater careers is offered by ACT, but training is by no means restricted to potential actors.

"We hope, of course," said Baer, "that the training we provide makes for better performances on the stage, but we also hope that it enables an individual to become — and here we go again — more curious."

Baer is currently involved in final preparations for the upcoming fall training programs, for which applications are now being accepted.

ACT's third annual "academy" will be held from Oct. 12, 1970, through Jan. 23, 1971. Fully accredited by the state of California and Veterans Administration-approved, the academy is an advanced program of comprehensive training in mime, acting, voice, movement and speech, with classes conducted by members of the ACT acting company and a resident training staff.

THE EVENING extension program, beginning Oct. 12 and continuing for 10 weeks, will consist of professional training in the same subjects, and will be taught by the same instructors as the day-time sessions. Participants can take one or more classes and can also earn college credits for evening class hours.

ACT's new Children's Theater School is a novel addition to the total training operation, offering training in all theater arts to three separate age groups.

Classes for 7 to 8-year-olds, 10 to 12-year-olds and 13 to 16-year-olds will be given during the week. Each enrollee will take one two-hour class per week and a Saturday morning workshop session.

Applicants will be accepted into this program by interview only, for which an appointment is necessary.

"SOMEWHERE along the line," Baer be lieves, "the kind of exposure ACT's 'out-rep' and training programs offer provides a kind of stimulation to higher things. And, let's face it, we all have to be stimulated before we'll move into those 'other possibilities.' This whole process might be called soft sell or osmosis, but in the long run I'm convinced that it's the best solution to the external exposure, vocabulary, communications problem."

It's a problem with which American Conservatory Theater's extensions and conservatory programs have come to grips. William Baer, a man of deep convictions, driving energy and intellectual curiosity and sensitivity, sees to that.

THE READING of Shakespeare is a normal part of the life of the William Baer family. In their San Rafael home, William Baer, wife Wanda and daughter Johanna, 8, a fifth grader, enjoy such a session with the Bard. Johanna has been so acquainted with Shakespeare since age 4. Another Baer family enterprise: A December production of "Hansel and Gretel" in Napa at which Baer will conduct the Napa Symphony Orchestra, Mrs. Baer will sing and Johanna will dance.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe

"What Causes The Foul Odor In My Clean Clothes Closet?"

The odor to which you object is caused by a resin which has been added to fabrics, by the manufacturer, to help make them resist wrinkles. When this resin is applied and the manufacturer fails to cure it properly, small amounts of urea-formaldehyde remain. Then when the weather turns warm and humid, the objectionable, fishy odor becomes more apparent.

All wrinkle-resistant fabrics do not have this objectionable characteristic. It is well, when purchasing such a garment, to give it the sniff test. If your nose detects that fishy odor, beware. The odor cannot be removed by drycleaning, though laundering may do so.

There's Still A Lot To Do At The Center

Fair Is Gone, But Art And Garden Grounds Buzz

True, it is no longer the home of the Marin Art and Garden Fair.

But in the words of the immortal Mark Twain, any report that the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross is dead is "highly-exaggerated."

Not only has the center survived the moving of the fair. But it is very much alive and kicking up its heels.

IT HAS TO be that way, notes Richard Tyler, president of the 10-acre community cultural center. For with the fair's departure went also a large slice of the center's operating revenues, paid as rent for the fair usage by Marin County. Lost, too, were revenues derived from sales made by various center groups on items offered to fair-goers, monies that eventually went to the center.

So, just what does go on back of those red brick walls of that former estate once known as "Sunnyside," bought through the efforts of the late conservationist, Mrs. Norman B. Livermore, with the help of eight conservation-minded Marin groups?

Part of the story can be told at a glance by looking at the totem-pole marker near the entrance. The pole carries such directional arrows as:

Decorations Guild
Jose Moya del Pino Library
Art and Garden Center Office
Ross Valley Players
Memorial Amphitheater
Marin Society of Artists
Pixie Parents Playground

BUT THAT TELLS only part of the story. Much of the center's activity is not building-centered — therefore no permanent directional arrows. For example, you'll find no directional arrow for the influential and social Northgate Group, headed by Mrs. James E. Egger.

That group, formed back in 1947, was for one purpose only: to raise funds to help maintain the Art and Garden Center. They do this by their prestigious summer fashion luncheons, their annual Market Day in May, and by their upcoming Table Decor and Tea in October.

Even such founding groups of the center as the Marin Conservation League, Garden Society of Marin, Marin Garden Club and Marin Music Chest won't be found listed on the directional pole either. None of these maintain offices on the center grounds, though all are tied closely to it and are represented on the advisory committee. (The center itself is run by a board of directors).

THOSE GROUPS mentioned above are all founding groups and were among those who helped raise the original $25,000 needed to purchase the property back in 1943 from the Kittle family.

Today, Mrs. Edwin G. Weed heads the Marin Garden Club, Mrs. Emmet Rixford the Marin Music Chest, Mrs. John Donnelly the Marin Conservation League and Col. Todd H. Slade the Garden Society of Marin. All are very much a part of the on-going Center action.

Two founders groups do, however, have center facilities.

One, the large 600-member Marin Society of Artists, headed by Phil Smith, runs the Frances Young Gallery, which is open to the public every day from 1 to 4 p.m. The society also runs the popular rental gallery and puts on a continuing series of art shows throughout the year.

Their special annual art auction was held last Sunday.

THE ROSS VALLEY Players, headed by Mario Gianetti, is one of the longest surviving little theater groups in the country. Its headquarters and theater are in the old Barn, one of the two original estate buildings left standing, the other being the Octagon House.

This year the Players will produce four plays instead of the usual three and are currently performing "Wait Until Dark."

Even adding the founding groups, plus the Northgate affiliate, we still don't have the whole center activity story. There are other affiliates and many classes.

While most of the affiliates are listed on the directional pole, the classes aren't. The directional pole is permanent. Classes, in keeping with the center's new educational emphasis, revolve.

Classes, open to the public, have been, are, and will be scheduled in flower arranging, stitchery, beginning and advanced art, children's drama, great books, bridge, ballet and interior design. A call to the center office will produce a schedule.

BACK TO THE affiliate groups which are building centered:

THERE IS SOMETHING for everyone these days at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross — for both old and young and everyone in between. Shown here are Mrs. Harold Wilson, 1025 Via Escondito, Novato, seven times a grandmother and a member of the Decorations Guild, and little Dana Rinefort, a young Pixie playground member of the center. Dana is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Dart Rinefort, 76 Longwood Drive, San Rafael. They are standing before the directional signpost, near the entrance which points the way to many of the building-centered activities going on behind the walls.

Like the Decorations Guild, under the leadership of Mrs. J.J. Navas. These are women who work year-round creating imaginative decorative pieces for sale. Their showroom is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. They are best known for their Christmas Greens Sale, held in early December.

A stone's throw from the Decorations Guild showroom, across old Kittle Creek and past a rhododendron filled patio, is Laurel House Antiques, headed by Mrs. Frank Abbott III.

Every bargain hunter and antique lover in the Bay Area knows this little jewel which accepts merchandise on consignment and is open to the public Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Here you can find such treasures as a 1789 Alpine chalet inlaid table and chair set from Austria. The price of that is $866. Or, if you are interested in an early American sterling silver coffee and tea set, dated between 1830 and 1835, and have $2,500 to spend, that's where you'll find it.

IF, HOWEVER, priceless valuables aren't your bag, shoppers can find odds and ends of sterling silver, glasses, costume jewelry and bric-a-brac from $3.

Laurel House has whole rooms given over to Oriental and Victorian antiques, plus a garage annex which houses bargains one is apt to find in such a setting.

At the opposite end of the antique scale is the youth scene, like the Pixie Parents Playground for pre-schoolers, under the leadership of Mrs. Alfred Noble Jr. Pixie's big event is the highly imaginative Easter Egg Hunt.

The Pixie facilities boast a child's birthday area that can be rented by the public.

OTHER CENTER facilities may also be rented by groups. This spring and summer have seen a rash of beautiful garden weddings and receptions.

Outside organizations are invited to inquire about free center nature tours which are conducted around the grounds and which point out such specimen plants as the famous giant sequoia, planted from a Yosemite seedling in 1880 by the estate's original owner, George Worn. There are some 27 specimen trees on the center grounds.

Though private property, the public is invited to wander through the gardens. Picnicking, however, has had to be banned due to lack of tables and cleaning and maintenance funds.

ANOTHER ACTIVITY appealing to the young is the Art and Garden Unit of the Junior Theater of Marin. It holds a summer workshop and gives one production a year at the amphitheater. This group is led by Mrs. Tom Perry.

One of the latest groups to be organized at the Art and Garden Center is the Center Pathfinders, a young and aggressive organization which operates the Magnolia Tea Room where lunches are served several days a week.

This group, open to new members, is headed by Mrs. William Fuss. The group also caters lunches for outside groups, as well as operating the center's newest showroom, the Garden Path, featuring one-of-a-kind handcrafted articles and plants for sale. Mrs. Robert Cummings heads the Pathfinders.

THE FAMILIAR 100-year old center landmark, the Octagon House, moved to a new location several years ago and completely restored, has become the Jose Moya del Pino Library. It was founded by a group, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Russell Smith, in memory of that Marin artist and teacher who was the first president of the Artist's Association and a center charter member.

The Octagon House, originally constructed over a well, was the old estate's tankhouse. It now houses a collection of art and garden books.

The library is sponsoring a lecture series on the five Fridays of October, and also will be showing the works of Moya del Pino.

THE OLD BARN, long the setting for Ross Valley Players productions, is shown being readied for the current performers of "Wait Until Dark." A business meeting is being held on stage while stagehands work and furniture is being delivered. Longtime Ross Valley Player star Ellen Clarke Eilert of Woodacre is seated on the sofa. Next to her is wardrobe mistress Irma Thaning of San Rafael. The three men whose backs are to the audience are Bob Gaskin, left, of Corte Madera, working on the set, Del Blackburn of the same town, and veteran Player member and officer Carl Riznik of Ross at right. A delivery man stands in the foreground.

WORKMAN HAROLD PAYTON of Fairfax adds another batch of plaques to the corner of the Livermore Wall at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross. Each little gold plaque honors a person or organization contributing 30 dollars or more to build a yard of brick wall in memory of the center's founder, Caroline Livermore. Watching Payton, and trying to find the Pixie Parent gift plaque among the 100 or so, is 3-year-old Brad Noble, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Noble Jr. of Corte Madera. Beyond the wall and inside the center a diversity of activities are going on these fall days. The pictures on these pages show some of them.

LONG-TIME MEMBER of the Marin Art and Garden Center's Northgate group and also a member of the center's governing board, Mrs. Fred Harrington of Ross looks over a sparkling table setting she had planned for entry in the annual Northgate Table Decor, the tea held annually in October. Autumn is one of the most active seasons at the wooded center in Ross with several of the member organizations staging their special, often traditional, events. The tea is one such.

MRS. FRED DIETRICH of Mill Valley examines items at both ends of the price scale at Laurel House Antiques, the popular shop operated by the Northgate group. She is examining an inexpensive $5 silver compote. On the tray, before her, is the shop's most expensive item, a $2,500 early American sterling silver coffee and tea set (circa 1830-1835). In the background are Mrs. Reed Volin of San Rafael, left, and Laurel House chairman Mrs. Frank Abbott III of Kentfield.

THREE LIBRARY members stand outside the newly refurbished Octagon House which has been made into the Jose Moya del Pino Library. They are, left to right, Mrs. Thomas Kent of Ross, Mrs. Moya del Pino of Ross, widow of the late artist for whom the library was named, and Mrs. Russell Smith, also of Ross, the library chairman.

has recently joined the center family and maintains offices on the center grounds. Headed by Mrs. Robert Schultz, the Guild supports the Marin Symphony, under the baton of Sandor Salgo, and also the Marin Youth Orchestra.

Many Bay Area residents recognize the center in terms of the Memorial Amphitheater where they have enjoyed ballet, Shakespeare, or folk dancing. This 500-seat outdoor theater is maintained largely by memorial contributions in memory of loved ones.

Another, as yet unfinished, memorial is the Caroline Livermore Memorial Wall and Gates surrounding the property, built in memory of the center's principal founder. Those who gave funds to build a yard or more of wall ($30) have been remembered by plaques embedded in that portion of the wall that runs by the Livermore Memorial Garden. At present there are more than 100 plaques recalling gifts from such widely divergent groups as the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin and Ross Grocery.

SO, INDEED, the Marin Art and Garden Center is very much in need of community support.

More directional arrows are added each year to the pole as the Marin Art and Garden Center becomes truly what Mrs. Livermore envisioned it as becoming: "A Living Memorial."

THE QUAINT LITTLE Bottle House on the Art and Garden Center grounds is the setting for one of the newest activities — the Garden Path — a unique shop, run by the Pathfinders. The shop sells one-of-a-kind craft articles and plants on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Shown here are two members whose day it is to staff the shop. Kneeling in front of the door is Garden Path chairman Mrs. Robert Cumming, of Kentfield. Inside the shop is Mrs. Betty Casson, from the Ross Firehouse.

THE RENTAL GALLERY operated by the Marin Society of Artists, is one of the most unusual art programs in the country. It is open every day in the Frances Young Gallery from 1 to 4 p.m. Shown here, looking over the rental gallery paintings in preparation for the November rental gallery show, are the co-chairmen. On the stool is Mrs. Eve von Neumann of San Anselmo. She is being assisted by Mrs. Bettyjo Norton of Larkspur.

THIS IS THE inside of the re-modeled Octagon House, the familiar 100-year-old Art and Garden Center landmark which recently was turned into the Jose Moya del Pino Library. Being featured in October is an exhibit of the works of that late Marin County artist. Shown here are two library members debating where to hang the portrait of center founder Mrs. Norman Livermore that was painted by Moya del Pino. Mrs. Russell Smith, chairman of the library group, of Ross, holds the painting. Mrs. Thomas Kent of Kentfield, indicates where she thinks it ought to go.

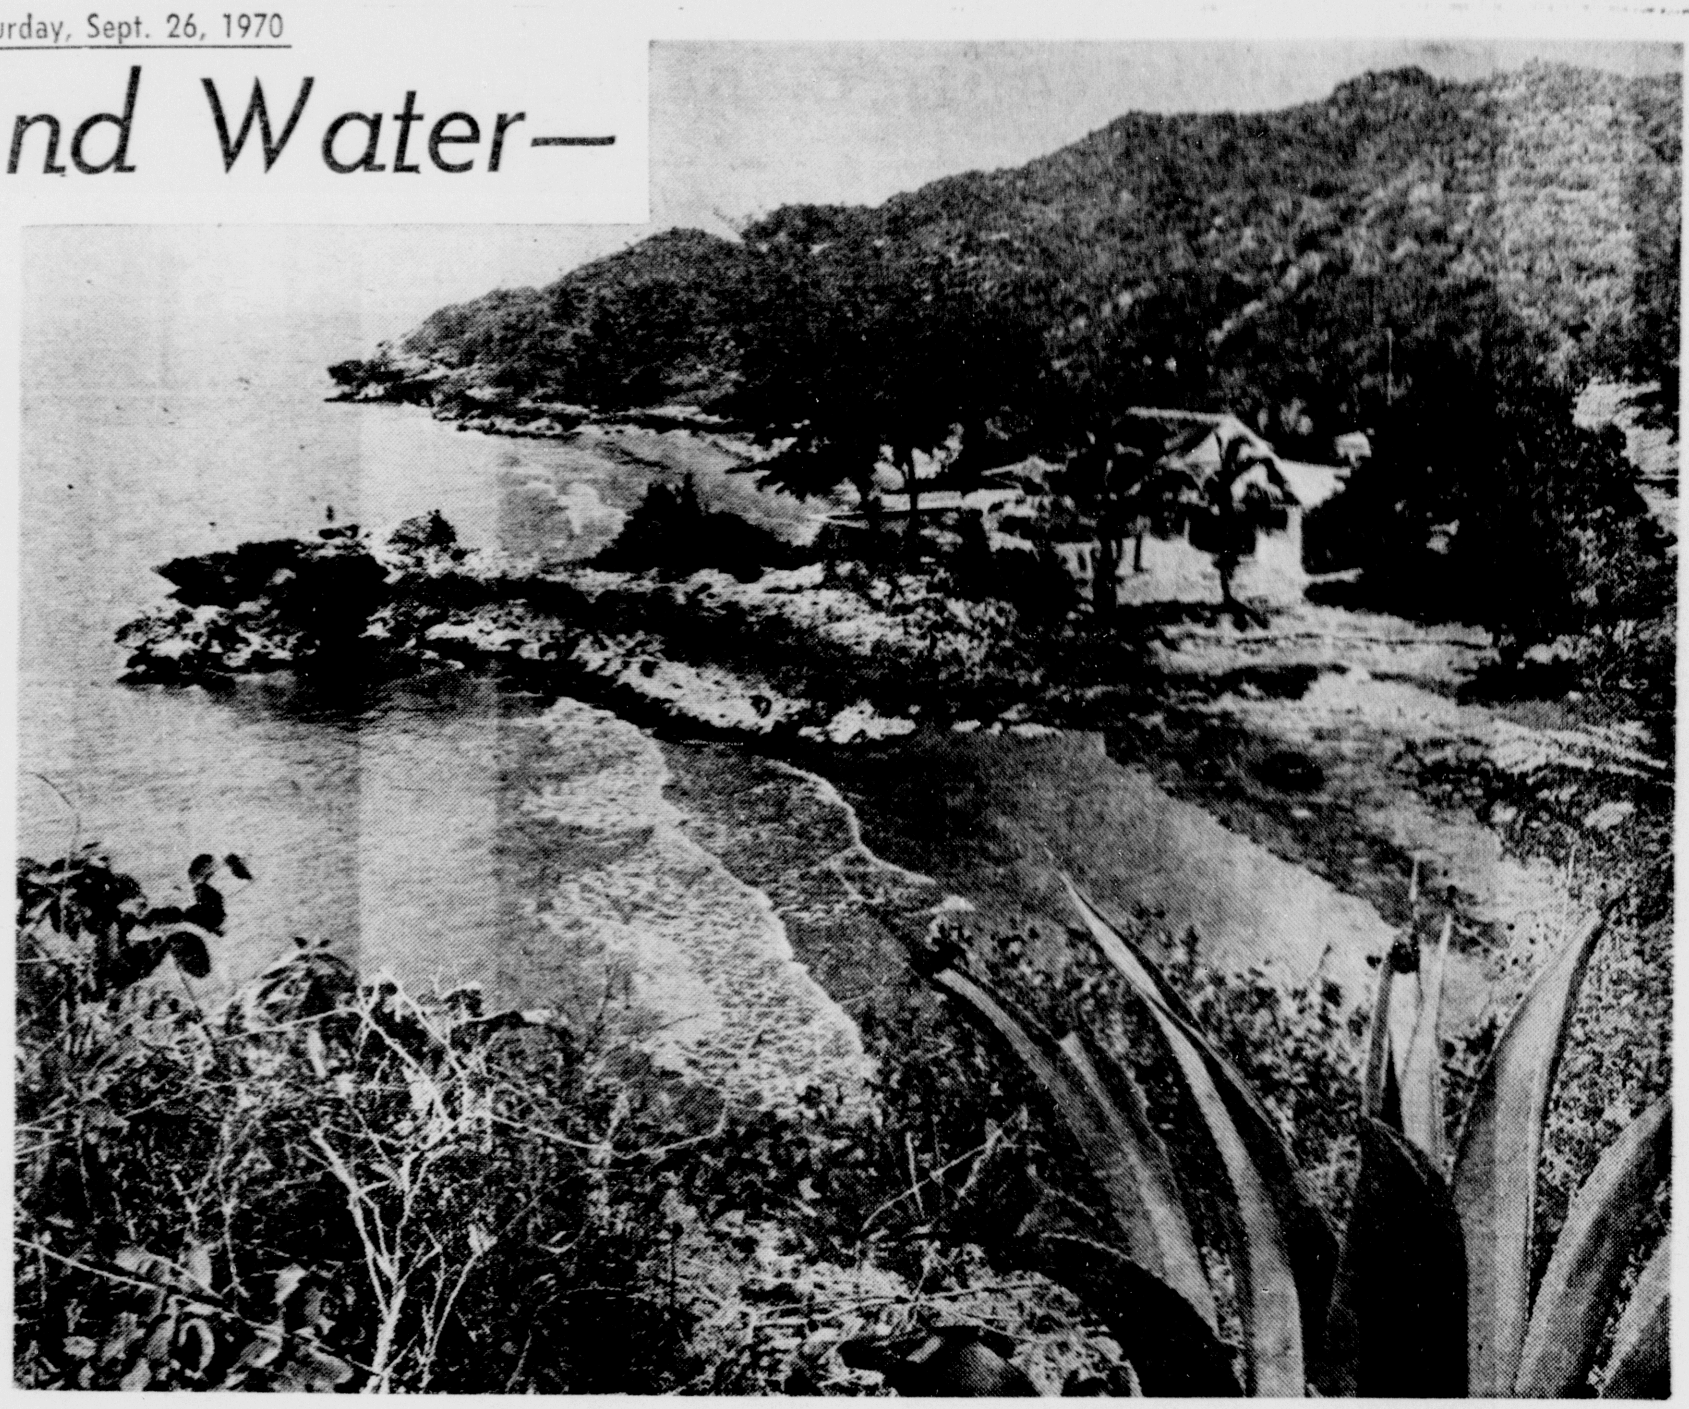
Woods And Water—

Jamaica Has Plenty Of Both

By MURRAY J. BROWN



LITTLE BAY COTTAGE near Alligator Pond along Jamaica's rural southern coast is one of many unusual holiday homes available to tourists for rental through the newly-formed Jamaica Association of Villas and Apartments. The association, newly formed, represents 150 cottage and villa owners throughout the island, and says that families or couples can now rent a fully-staffed private seaside home for as low as $5 a day. But at Little Bay, with its two private beaches and mineral water swimming pool, the rate is $125 a week including meals.

They will be right — the beaches along the northern coast are rated among the finest in the Caribbean and have been attracting sun and sea worshippers for years.

But there is more.

The Arawak Indians called the island Xaymaca or "Land of Woods and Water." The Arawaks are long gone but the woods and water are still here.

JAMAICA IS THE third largest island in the West Indies — 148 miles long and 55 miles wide. It rises out of the sea to nearly 7,500 feet at Blue Mountain peak on the eastern end near the capital city of Kingston.

It has scores of quiet beaches, coves and lagoons along the coast for sunbathing, swimming, skiing, snorkeling, sailing, fishing and other water sports. Many visitors go no farther.

But the interior offers crystal-clear rivers, streams and waterfalls tumbling down to the sea from mountains where hundreds of varieties of exotic trees, plants, fruits, vegetables and flowers grow in wild profusion. There are riding and hiking trails, river rafting trips, bird watching, butterfly hunting and other activities inland.

I TOURED THE "Gold Coast" from Montego Bay in the west to Port Antonio in the east with Roy Sangster, a driver-guide provided by the Jamaica Tourist Board. There are regular guided bus tours to the major points of interest and good rail, road and air services for those who prefer to go it alone.

Rental cars are available and all you need is a valid license from your home state. If you do drive yourself, don't forget to keep to the left — a holdover from the days when Jamaica, now independent, was a British colony.

Be particularly cautious on curves and hills — many Jamaicans drive as if they were competing in the Indianapolis Speedway races. Sound your horn and slow down when approaching a curve or top of a hill.

MONTEGO BAY, or Mo' Bay as it is more familiarly known, has long been one of the most famous and fashionable resorts in the West Indies. It has an international airport (there's another in Kingston) and about 40 hotels and guest houses as well as numerous villas, cottages and apartments on or near the beaches.

I stayed at the Half Moon Hotel and Country Club, which has a private beach, tennis courts and an 18-hole golf course laid out by Robert Trent Jones. Guests are accommodated in three two-story high wings branching out from the main reception building, or in cottages, most of which have private pools.

During the off season, which runs to Dec. 15, rates in most of the tourist establishments are as much as 50 per cent below those in the high season. They range from about $7 single without meals to about $30 per person double with two meals a day.

The Travel Pages

RATES FOR private villas, cottages and apartments also are sharply reduced during the summer, a break for big families.

Those without private beaches generally have pools or are within easy distance of famed Doctor's Cave Beach, with its unique underwater spring, which brought the first tourists to Montego Bay.

Incidentally, Montego is an English corruption of the Spanish word for lard, manteca. In colonial days, the town was a major port for ships smuggling lard, rendered from wild pigs on the island, to the Spanish colony of Cuba about 90 miles to the north. It still is a major port for banana boats and a popular call on Caribbean cruise itineraries.

NEARBY PLACES of interest for the visitor include banana, coconut and sugar cane plantations, pimento and citrus groves, cattle ranches and the Great Houses of colonial days. There also are picturesque fishing villages, sleepy farming communities and old forts.

The Great Houses include Rose Hall, once the home of Annie Palmer who murdered three husbands and became known as the "White Witch of Rose Hall" because of her dabbling in voodoo and her cruelty. She herself was murdered in 1831 and the Great House fell into ruins. It was restored by American industrialist John Rollins at an estimated cost of a million dollars.

Admission to the Great House is $1 and you can tour the plantation in a minibus for $2.50.

WE LUNCHED AT another restored plantation manor — the Sign Great House — on a typical Jamaican meal of fresh fruits, ackee (a vegetable which tastes like scrambled eggs) and dried fish, curried goat with fried plantain, and a steaming cup of Blue Mountain coffee from the slopes of the mountains which actually look blue from a distance.

Air Jamaica and several othed airlines provide non-stop or through services from major cities in the United States and Canada to Montego Bay and Kingston.

I flew from New York aboard an Air Jamaica DC8 jetliner in slightly more than three hours. It is about an hour and 15 minutes from Miami.

Norway's Most Unusual Railroad Is Run By Amateurs

The Setesdal railroad in Norway is one of the most unusual railroads in all of Europe.

It is no longer connected with the venerable Norwegian State Railways, but is run on a voluntary basis by members of the Setesdal Railroad Hobby Club. And it is one of the few railroads in Europe that still has steam power left.

Opened in 1896, the Setesdal railroad connected Kristiansand on the sunny south coast with the secluded Setesdal Mountain valley, its terminal station being the village of Byglandsfjord on the lake bearing the same name. It was built as a narrow-gauge railroad but in 1938 the line between Kristiansand and Grovane (12 miles) was converted to normal gauge, being part of the south coast railroad between Oslo and Stavanger.

THE SETESDAL railroad between Grovane and Byglandsfjord never made profit, and the Norwegian State Railways decided to close down the entire railroad in 1962. This caused such an outburst from Norwegian railroad fans that the elders in Kristiansand — probably knowing a good thing when they saw one — offered to run the railroad as their own, locomotives and all. This is exactly how the Setesdal Railroad Hobby Club was formed.

Since 1964 the Hobby Club has been running their own train every Sunday from June to August, from Grovane to Beiholen and back, a distance of 4.7 kilometres or about three miles. Traction is by "Locomotive 2", which was built by Dub's of Scotland in 1895. It is a tank engine, weight 18.7 tons. It has two cylinders and six passenger cars.

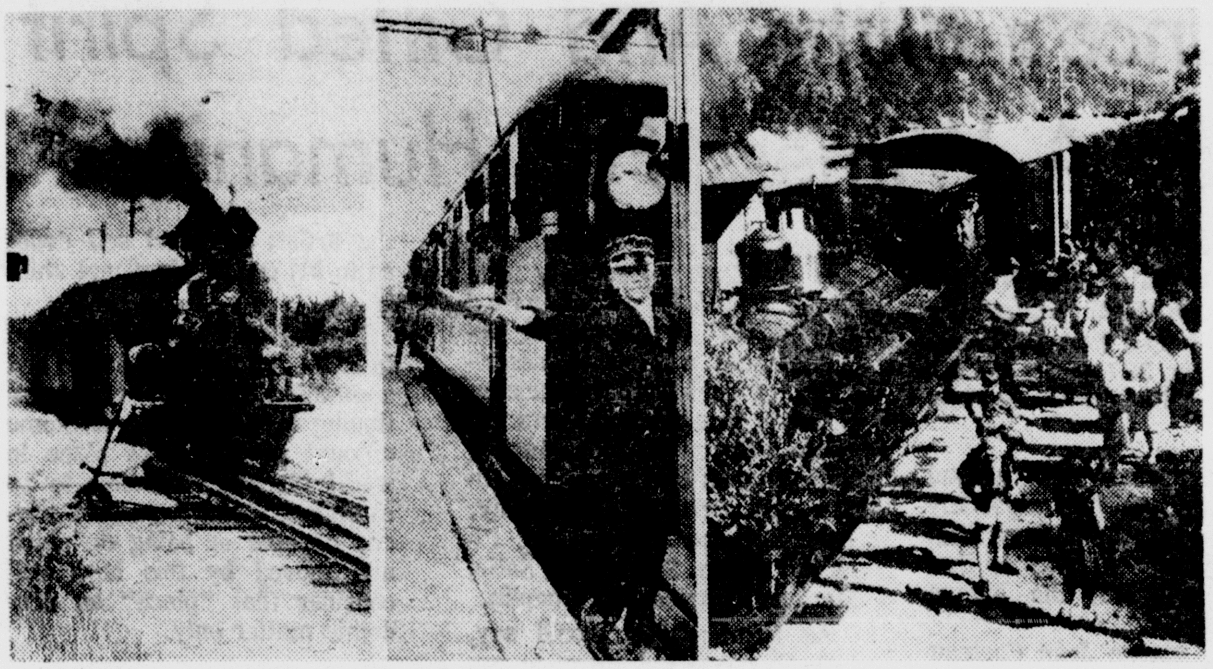
CLUB MEMBERS act as engine drivers and conductors. A junior club with members aged from 12 to 18 is responsible for the cleaning of the road equipment.



THE SETESDAL RAILROAD in Norway is operated by members of the Setesdal Railroad Hobby Club, and the engineer will stop anywhere to allow passengers to take photographs. It runs from Kristiansand on the south coast to the secluded Setesdal Valley.

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

A new directory of golf courses and tennis courts on the Monterey Peninsula has been produced with color by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitors and Convention Bureau. . . This winter British Overseas Airways Corp. is offering a tour package of eight nights in a London hotel (including tours and theater tickets) and seven nights on the Continent's Mediterranean or South Atlantic coasts, at such spots as Mallorca, the Canary Islands or Tunisia (including all meals) at a starting price of $676 that covers round trip fare from the West Coast.

Trans World Airlines' budget guides have been expanded to cover 15 cities now, with Madrid, Lisbon, Hong Kong and Honolulu among the recent additions . . . . Delta Air Lines and Bon Vista Holidays of Sherman Oaks have teamed up to offer a $383 "Jamaica Town and Country" eight-day, seven-night package including air fare between Los Angeles and Montego Bay.

The Depressing Story Of Air Pollution

"Vanishing Air" is the report of the "Nader's Raiders" study group on air pollution, written by John C. Esposito; and as might be expected, it is on the somber side.

Ralph Nader's investigators concerned themselves principally with enforcement — or lack of it — under the Air Quality Act of 1967 and its predecessor, the Clean Air Act of 1963. The first, according to the probers, accomplished little, being built to order for delays and evasions. And the second, which presumably was to tighten up the first, provided instead room for more delays and evasions.

The Air Quality Act of 1967 was the accomplishment of Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine. In the view of Esposito & Co., it was a meager accomplishment. Muskie comes out as no hero.

The San Francisco Bay Area Air Pollution Control District goes unmentioned in the book, but the State of California (for its motor vehicle controls) and the County of Los Angeles get higher marks than most jurisdictions.

"Vanishing Air" recites the story of Los Angeles Supervisor Kenneth Hahn's fight to force automobile manufacturers to do something about pollution from car engines, and its eventual loss — or the equivalent of loss — by a government consent decree. What it does not bring out, though, is that despite that decree, the pressure generated by the fight has caused manufacturers to start moving, and has awakened legislators to crack down on auto emissions.

Much of the history of pollution of the air by industry, electrical power plants and the automobile is here in "Vanishing Air." It is an absorbing but depressing story.

Actually, however, the book does not tell the whole story; for, although it has taken a long time to get anything done about cleaning up the air, quite a few things now are being done that "Vanishing Air" ignores.

JEAN COCTEAU was photographed in 1929 at age 40 by Germaine Krull. (From "Professional Secrets")

France's Blithe And Gifted Spirit Was A Witness For Humanity

PROFESSIONAL SECRETS: AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JEAN COCTEAU edited by Robert Phelps; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 321 pages, $8.50. Reviewed by Margaret Terrien.

Humanity has had a bad press lately; so it is especially satisfying to read a book that bears joyous testimony to that tattered remnant, the human spirit.

At first glance Jean Cocteau (1889-1963) would not seem to be a human spirit with which most of us limited clods could identify. A Frenchman of plural talents, he was — among other things — poet, novelist, critic, painter, sculptor, actor, playwright, scene designer and film director. (More than 20 years after its release his "Beauty and the beast" is still acknowledged a cinema classic.) He enjoyed turning his hand to any creative effort; so he was not above designing perfume ads or Christmas cards. He was an assiduous letter writer and journal keeper.

A brilliant personality and ardent friend, he numbered among his intimates and acquaintances a stunning assortment of acclaimed performers in every branch of the arts. To name a few at random, starting with the turn of the century; Nijinsky, Bernhardt, Diaghiley, Proust, Gide, Rilke, Stein, Picasso, Auden, Stravinsky, Satie, Marlene Dietrich and Chaplin.

With the exception of the foreword written by editor-biographer Robert Phelps and selected remarks from some of Cocteau's distinguished friends, the book consists entirely of chronologically ordered excerpts from the man's writing about himself, his life, and the people who were important to him.

Given the cast of characters and Cocteau's talent, the book could not fail to be interesting. It also is a delight to anyone who believes that the unique French genius for writing about ponderous matters with wit, rationality, grace and clarity of style — even when that combination must be read in translation — is one of the major ornaments of Western civilization.

Cocteau was more than a blithe and phenomenally gifted spirit. This book is an instructive and moving account of one human being's struggle to transcend himself and to create — using his own life as raw material — a testament bearing the sort of symbolic truth that illuminates mythology. Cocteau especially identified himself with Orpheus.

No one can totally succeed at such an assignment, of course, but it is inspiring to see someone try. Cocteau was well acquainted with Hades and, like Orpheus, his lyric gift did not make his special corner of that country any less dark. He was homosexual. He also suffered all his life from a series of physical ailments which were probably psychosomatic in origin but nonetheless debilitating. Twice he submitted himself to the agony of opium withdrawal, the second time successfully.

He writes of all this with self-conscious honesty and no self pity, but it is obvious he suffered extreme episodes of depression and pain — intensified by that occupational disease of the artist; profound self doubt as to his own professional ability.

Despite all problems he lived to be 74 and retained to the end a child-like joy of life while continuing to produce an awesome amount of work. His place in world literature remains to be established, but I suspect anyone capable of being delighted and moved by this book will consider that "place" an academic matter only.

The People Of One Small Town

The impact of this story, well written as it is, surprisingly comes after a reader has finished; a sort of delayed-action wherein appreciation grows as time passes.

In other words, it's not in the wham, bang style, all flash and no substance, of some modern novels that hit the reader with startling passages and climax after climax, stir excitement and are then quickly forgotten after the book is closed.

The setting is in a small town in West Central Texas, the principal characters three youngsters, and the essence is tragedy, but the scope is beyond all this.

Horgan manages to take certain people, certain events in a certain place at a certain time and convey a universal tone.

Phil Durham, Billy Breedlove and Marilee Underwood, youngsters growing up in a dull small town, are the central characters, but the portrayals of their parents and the other town folks are just as gripping, just as believable.

There are people in that small town who are bound to remind the reader of someone he has known or heard about, no matter where he has lived.

For those who grew up in small towns, Horgan's story will bring back vividly the atmosphere, pace and emotional climate, with the hopes, longings and despair of those who live there.

It will prompt readers to think of life as a whole, and in this age of change, mobility and instant everything, that's not such a bad idea.

Some Songs That Tell A Lot

Preservation of western folklore owes much to the collecting and writing team of Austin and Alta Fife. They have been at it practically ever since their marriage while they were both students at what was then Utah State Agricultural College (as was I at the same time).

"Ballads of the Great West" is another worthy addition. It is not simply another collection of cowboy songs, or miners' songs, or songs of the trail. It is a little of all of these, along with some authentically western balladry of more recent vintage, from such writers as Henry Herbert Knibbs and S. Omar Barker.

It thus presents a greater variety, and as a result a fuller picture of the stuff of which the American West has woven its songs.

The volume is classified in four sections: the physical and human environment, the cowboy and other western types, dramatic situations and events, and code of the cowboy. Each has been widely celebrated in song and verse, and for each the Fifes have chosen excellently representative examples, including relatively few of those made familiar through survival in "country music."

A people's songs tell a lot about a people. Austin and Alta Fife have made these tell a lot about the West.

The War Within Us: Our Inhibitions Vs. Aggressions

By DON KEOWN

ARNOLD HUTSCHNECKER
Happiness is the objective

THE WILL TO HAPPINESS by Dr. Arnold Hutschnecker; Trident, 192 pages, $4.95.

THE LYNCHING OF ORIN NEWFIELD by Gerald Jay Goldberg; Dial, 247 pages, $5.95

THE NEW OLYMPIA READER edited by Maurice Girodias; Olympia Press, 891 pages, $15.

Dr. Arnold Hutschnecker, physician and psychotherapist, followed up his best-selling "The Will to Live" with "The Will to Happiness" in 1964, and that book, now reissued, still stands as one of the best popular explanations of how the layman can apply basic psychological principles to his living.

The book is labeled a "new and revised edition," but updating and rewriting appears minor and the text is fundamentally unchanged from the original.

Happiness — true happiness, "a purposeful release of energy toward a meaningful goal" — is the inborn objective with which man begins his life travel. Inhibition — "inaction, stagnation, frustration" — is the roadblock that hinders his smooth progress, causing detours and breakdowns. Excitation or action is the balancing force that wisely applied can pierce the inhibition barrier. But over-excitation can be as destructive of happiness as over-inhibition.

Hutschnecker, relying heavily upon the research and conclusions of the Russian physiologist Dr. Ivan Pavlov as well as those of Sigmund Freud, divides society's individuals into four categories:

The strongly-excitory or hostile-aggressive; the lively-controlled or adjusted aggressive; the calmly-imperturbable or passive-dependent, and the weakly-withdrawn and inhibited.

It is among the inhibited and withdrawn that unhappiness festers at its worst, although it is by no means their problem exclusively. Only the adjusted or controlled aggressive escapes it, balancing off his aggressions or excitations with just the right degree of inhibitory controls.

The calmly-imperturbable is secure as long as the subject of his dependency is available to provide the necessary assurance. But any threat to that anchor can create serious problems.

The hostile-aggressive does not suffer the inner pangs of repression, being free of inhibition. But he is also lacking in controls over his excitations. His is an abrasive, totally selfish behavior that is likely to pile up troubles within himself and between him and society.

But it is with the inhibited and withdrawn that Dr. Hutschnecker's book is most concerned.

"Inhibition is painful," the author writes. "It causes illness and danger to oneself and to other people."

And, he continues, we are living in an age where urbanization and technocracy encourage more and more withdrawal and alienation, less and less communication.

It is possible, Dr. Hutschnecker says, for us to discard the unhappiness that plagues so many of us, "for the door is open." But first we must recognize our psychological makeup — in which category do we truly, not just outwardly, belong? — and the makeup of society. Then we can move toward the alleviation of our overly-inhibited, overly-dependent or overly-aggressive tendencies that are at the roots of our unhappiness.

Or we can at least adjust to and accept being the kind of person we really are, then direct our aggressions or inhibitions as creatively, satisfyingly, non-destructively as possible. Enjoyable goals are open to those within all four of Dr. Hutschnecker's categories. It becomes a matter of values.

The passing of six years has not dimmed the optimism or persuasiveness of Dr. Hutschnecker's message of hope for the unhappy.

This little tale starts off in the unlikely, at least for a mystery story, setting of a hospital room where an unpretentious pharmacist lies awaiting brain surgery.

The devotee of light reading should not be turned off by this grim reality, however, which serves only as the starting point for an intriguing tale.

Lester Dunn, who before the operation has led a most unremarkable life as the owner of a not very prosperous London pharmacy, seems to be someone else after surgery.

Is one of his existences a dream? Or is it a premonition of a disaster he is going to bring upon himself?

At each turn of the story Welsh author L.P. Davies almost loses the cautious reader who wants a little credibility with his intrigue. Davies finally supplies it, however, and ties up the story with an especially neat and truly surprising ending.

This Crime Club selection is a good addition to the mystery shelves of any library.

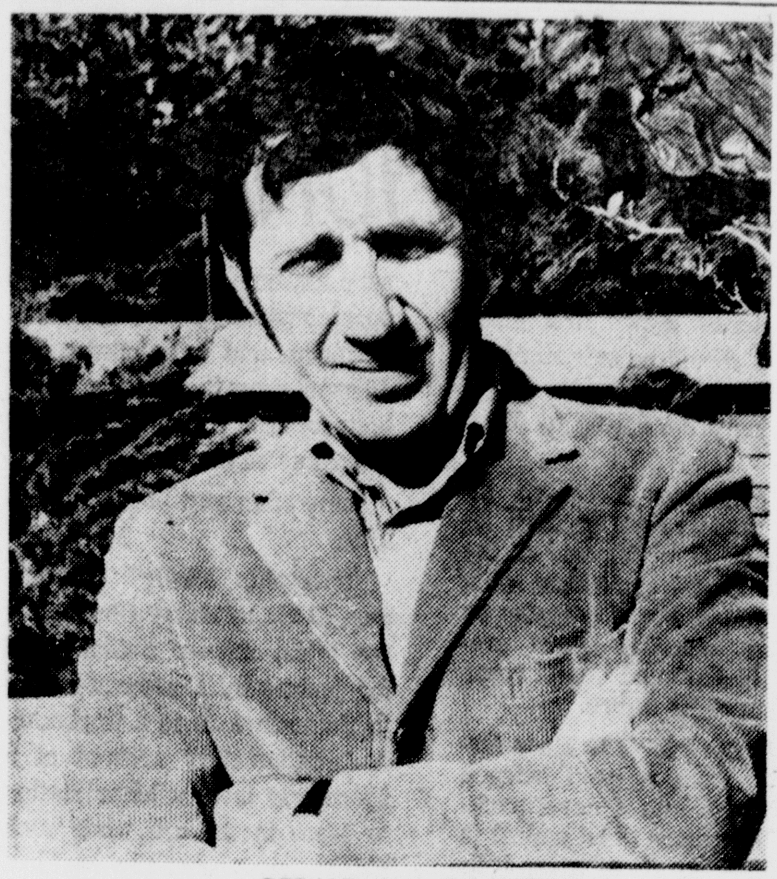
Is Newfield, the dour, industrious, well-to-do New England farmer, a hostile-aggressive? Or withdrawn-and-inhibited.

Certainly he is aggressive and hostile to a fault, conducting a war of suspicion and ego with the cheerless Vermont community in which he lives.

But withdrawn he is, too. Despite a wife and relatives, he is virtually a recluse. And inwardly a dreadfully lonely man.

Goldberg draws his picture of a complicated and soured self-made man expertly. Unfortunately, Newfield is a most unappealing hero or anti-hero. And even more unfortunately, his antagonists, the people with whom Newfield does battle in this war of nerves, are no more appetizing. The reader is then left in the predicament of being the spectator to a contest in which he has no one for whom to root. It makes for an arid book, short on compassion and humanity. And this dims the reader's enjoyment of the novel, even though he appreciates the skill with which Goldberg delineates his characters and tells his gloomy story.



GERALD JAY GOLDBERG
An arid and depressing novel

So keen is the Goldberg writing touch that the reader persists until the final fate of Orin Newfield is spelled out, even though in so doing he struggles uneasily with a distaste incurred by a plot and cast that are unredeemingly depressing.

NO NEED to separate the characters in "The New Olympia Reader" and place them in fancy psychiatrically-defined compartments. They are simply sick, sick, sick — as is the book.

Edited by Maurice Girodias himself, the anthology is offered as "A Collection of the Best and Newest Erotic Writings Published by the Olympia Press." The immediate reaction is that if these shabby pieces are the best, then spare us from the worst. And from the best as well.

Supposedly, according to the jacket blurb, the Reader, a follow-up to the first "The Olympia Reader" released in 1964, "presents a collection of erotic writings of unprecedented scope, sophistication and variety." Actually it does nothing of the kind. There is a dismal sameness about all these sordid little stories and a crudity that makes public toilet graffiitos seem the essence of culture and wit.

Nor does the fact that the selections include the work of a number of well-known writers (many of whom, understandably, have chosen to sign pseudo-names) help any. Dragged through the gutter, the brightest talent becomes as odiferous and despoiled as the sorriest hack specializing in pornography.

The jacket blurb tells us the book "certainly demonstrates the distinction to be made between the erotic and the pornographic, in a powerful and definitive manner." Well, we'll accept this as representative of pornography. Now where's the contrast?

It is a tiresome repetition of detailed descriptions of the perversions perpetrated by tiresome people. Editor Girodias concludes the book with an account of his struggles against the censors. It stretches one's conviction on behalf of freedom of expression to take any satisfaction in his ultimate victories. Never was there greater furor over such a shoddy cause.

LUCY IN three languages? Too much!

But there she is, on the covers of three simultaneously published books, the world's greatest unlicensed psychiatrist, dispensing advice and insults to a plainly befuddled Charlie Brown at a nickel a barb.

It's the newest "Peanuts" book by Charles M. Schulz "You Need Help, Charlie Brown" in English, "Hay que Ayudarte, Charlie Brown" in Spanish and "Ca ne va Pas Charlie Brown" in French.

Holt, Rinehart and Winston is the publisher of the softcover books, priced at $1 each.

And what less painless reading fare could you hand the young student of Spanish or French than a collection of the misadventures of Lucy, Charlie Snoopy and company?

HART PUBLISHING Co. Inc has printed a 95-cent paperback version of Peter Fletcher's "Emotional Conduct," now bearing the title "Understanding Your Emotional Problems."

"Emotional conflict is the outcome of ignorance when the package we are trying to handle is life itself," Fletcher wrote. "We are thrown off balance because we have grown up with faulty ideas about ourselves, or with wrong-headed notions about the significance of the experiences through which we have passed." The book is his attempt to correct those faulty ideas and wrong-headed notions with an intelligence "uncloudied by pity, fear or shame."

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Youngsters who followed with avid interest man's first lunar landings should be entranced by "The Moon Explorers" (Four Winds, no price listed) by Tony Simon.

Not only does it contain Simon's well-written account of the Apollo II flight, and of the historic Armstrong-Aldrin walk on the moon, but it contains as well the essential space program background and some forecasts of its future.

What converts "The Moon Explorers" from a good science history book into a novel package with unusual child appeal is the inclusion of a seven-inch record of the voices of the astronauts and other excerpts from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's official transcript.

Equally important are the large number of photographs that have been clearly reproduced, and in dimensions suited to their contents.

While the inclusion of the record might cause some to suspect a "gimmick," it is nonetheless excellent coverage of an exciting subject. Not surprisingly, there is the usual space enthusiast's tendency to exaggerate the accomplishments and their significance, and to minimize the disappointments and the costs, both monetary and in neglected programs on our own planet.

Some other new books for juniors:

"Spaceship Medic" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Harry Harrison is the latest science fiction novel for juniors by a veteran writer in that genre. It is a workmanlike, satisfactory account of a space trip from a lunar station to Mars in the era when such flights are generally routine, but this one is not. Science fiction buffs will enjoy it.

"Just Morgan" (Walck $4.50) by Susan Beth Pfeffer is a well-done novel for girls, centering around Morgan Goodstone, recently orphaned, who agrees to spend a summer in Manhattan with her uncle, a famous novelist, that she has never seen. It proves to be a horizon-broadening summer for young Morgan, as she makes a host of interesting new acquaintances. More important, she learns some new things about herself. Miss Pfeffer shows respect for her young readers in making her novel believable and meaningful.

There's a touch of the old "Our Gang" comedy feeling to "The Day the Gang Got Rich" (Viking, $3.50) by William Kotzwinkle, a fun romp that begins when George Dugan finds himself the surprised owner of a five-dollar bill. His chums are willing and eager to help him spend it. And small readers, 5, 6 and 7, will delight in accompanying them to the candy store, the soda fountain, the toy department, etc. Joe Servello's excellent sketches are full of energy and humor.

"Secret Writing" (McGraw-Hill, $5.50) by James Raymond Wolfe must be rated one of the most appealing books for young readers of recent months. Author James Raymond Wolfe takes up an intriguing subject, cryptography, and covers it well. Ciphers and codes have long challenged and fascinated both young and old. Wolfe, who has been a criminal investigator and a government and private business security agent, makes the subject, both historically and presently, yet more engrossing. Mathematically-inclined boys and girls will revel in the explanations of how to make or break ciphers.

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

By JOHN SUNIER

While Epic has seen its last days as a classical music label, much fine pop material is still to be found on this associate of Columbia Records.

A most enjoyable quartet of young fellows in the Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young bag is Poco.

Their album "Pickin' Up the Pieces" (Epic BN 26460) features close and yet swinging harmonies with not a little country flavor. The pedal steel guitar heard in several of the tracks contributes to this special flavor. A few of the tunes add strings or horns, but with great restraint throughout.

"Nobody's Fool" as well as the title tune were highlights.

ANOTHER LOCAL rock group has a cute little LP on Epic titled "Supersnazz" (BN 26487).

The Flamin Groovies hit the 50's rock bit pretty hard on their recent album on another label, but this effort is balanced by numbers in the "good-time music" area and a generally lighter touch, tasteful and witty. Lead vocalist Ron Loney writes some quite original and spirited tunes, and old-timers like "Pistol Packin' Mama" add to the fun brew.

One of the most under-rated rock groups seems to be Kaleidoscope, a talented and original quintet that delves into both hard rock and country as well as Eastern sounds. Their new one on Epic (BN 26467) is fascinating listening for those who are getting their fill of "rock copy-catism." How many of your ordinary run-of-the-mill rock ensembles include oud, clarinet, violin, caz, jumbus and feet?

An 11-minute epic (if you'll pardon the expression) titled "Seven-Ate Sweet" closes the album spectacularly.

"DAN HICKS AND His Hot Licks" (BN 26464) have made a name for themselves in the Bay Area with a continuation of the good-time music we used to enjoy with The Lovin' Spoonful, Sopwith Camel and others. Two ladies in the group add a nice sound to the vocals and one of them is great on the celeste and piano.

"Milk-Shakin' Mama" is a good one, but then so is the whole album when you come right down to it.

"Beck-Ola" (Epic BN 26478) is the latest from the talented albeit not-terribly-original guitarist Jeff Beck and his Group. "Girl from Mill Valley" looked interesting but fell flat. "Rice Pudding" is a lot of repetition without much to say. The liner notes even excuse the lack of originality in the session.

A dud I'm afraid.

SLY AND THE Family Stone raise the rafters again with "Stand!" (Epic BN 26456). Probably the most successful blend of soul and rock around, this group is exciting, versatile and musicianly all at the same time.

The gutsy yet optimistic slant of the title tune is typical of Sly, a former disc jockey here in the Bay Area. And the lengthy "Sex Machine," with its female voice fed through Leslie speakers for a totally instrumental effect is way out!

A totally trippy LP is to be had in Paul Horn's "Inside" (Epic BXN 26466).

The jazz flutist had visited the magnificent Taj Mahal numerous times on visits to India to see the Maharishi. One day he played a few notes on his flute inside the structure and was astounded by the effect. As he put it, "I'd just let the notes hang there. I could play whole chords and they came back sounding like a chorus of angels. There was a whole orchestra invisibly suspended in the obscurity of the dome."

One night Horn brought along a recording engineer and some portable equipment shortly before the monument closed up for the night, when the visitors were few, and they taped some of the unearthly sounds. A Taj Mahal attendant adds his vocal chanting to the angelic sounds of Horn's golden flute.

The feeling of immense space is captured in the disc, and with stereo headsets prepare to wig out!

"NILSSON SINGS Newman" is a recent RCA Victor album (LSP-4289) that convinced me there was some truth to all the praise composer-singer Randy Newman has been receiving of late. The problem was I was listening to Newman's own versions of his quite unique songs and I was frankly bored to death.

The voice of Nilsson ("Midnight Cowboy" theme) is another matter entirely, bringing the beauty of the songs to the fore in a masterpiece of interpreting another composer's efforts. "Vine Street" and "Living Without You" were my favorites.

Excellent instrumental arrangements and the copies of the lyrics are welcome.

Don't Delay On Bulbs

So unless you use the autumn to do your planting, you can't expect to reap the floral harvest in the spring.

And right now, Marin nurseries have their peak selection of spring-blooming bulbs. This is the time to make your choices, while the supply is at its best. If you don't, your neighbors will. And you will have to settle for the leftovers in late October or November.

To get the particular bulb that meets your planting and landscaping needs, confer with the nurseryman. But keep this in mind: It pays to choose top quality bulbs, regardless of the kind.

IN FEW OTHER gardening areas is quality more important than in flower bulbs.

It takes an equal amount of time to plant either an inferior or a top-quality bulb. But only the latter will assure you of the desired results.

A California favorite is the ranunculus, and nurseries have these bulbs in a variety of exciting colors, as well as in a mixture.

THE MIXTURE provides a riot of garden color, and the separate colors permit you to demonstrate a creative flair — massing a bed of one solid color or grouping two or three colors together for a delightful planting.

Garden Page

The golden hues, yellow, pink, red and white camellia-like blooms are also excellent for cutting.

Daffodils are a universal favorite, but with each passing year, more and more of the non-trumpet types are coming into their own — as Californians see the exquisite and colorful blooms in neighborhood gardens.

THE YELLOW and white trumpets continue to lead the pack, but the Poets, large and small cup varieties, clusters, and doubles — in solid and bicolors — are closing ground on the favorites. Shop your nursery's selection of daffodils and choose several types for your garden.

Plant clusters of five or seven bulbs (or more) of the same variety together. Don't use them in a row — like so many wooden soldiers. Come spring, you'll be glad you did.

Hurry to shop for tulips, too, while the selection is at its peak — even if you do not plan to plant them for a time.

SOME GARDENERS, quite understandably, are reluctant to uproot still-blooming annuals to make way for the planting of bulbs that will not show color until next spring.

However, bulbs bought now can be stored easily for several weeks. They can be kept in the refrigerator, but not the freezer. Or they can be kept very adequately in any cool, dark, dry place, open to the air and not bagged. It won't affect their planting potentiality in the slightest.

DEEPER PLANTING of tulip bulbs is recommended in California. In some inland areas, 10 inches isn't too deep, providing the soil is sandy.

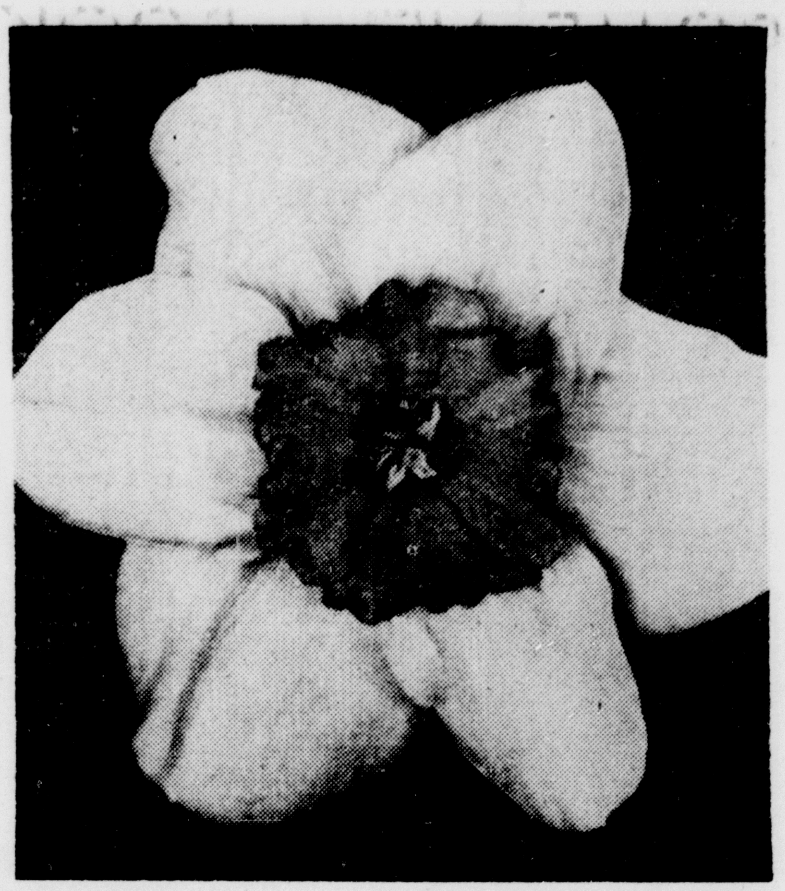
Many gardeners like to chill hyacinth bulbs, too.

The colors — many shades of blues and violets, pinks and rose hues, white — are delightful in semi-shady locations. The California Association of Nurserymen recommends planting the bulbs for mass effect rather than seeing how far a dozen bulbs will stretch. It's more effective to concentrate the color, rather than having sparse blooms showing at random.

ALSO AVAILABLE now are Dutch iris bulbs — in great variety of colors. Though aristocratic in appearance, they are easy to grow and the magnificently-decorated blooms are a source of pride when you cut them for indoor bouquets and arrangements.

There is a multitude of small bulbs which Californians should use to assure continuous color in the cool season garden. Crocus, for one, is the harbinger of spring and in separate colors, or a mixture, the wee growers are a cheerful sight.

Sparaxis, Grape Hyacinths, Star of Bethlehem, Snowflakes, Scilla and Freesias are other dependable performers in our county. If you're not familiar with these, visit your nursery and make their acquaintance. They will, with your providing a home for them for the winter, perform their garden magic — which nothing else can rival.



THE DAFFODIL is one of the earliest spring-blooming bulbs that you should be planting this fall. And the Jezebel, pictured here, is one of its most fascinating flower forms. Its petals of rich, reddish gold are crowned with crimson and make a most arresting sight. You should buy daffodil and other spring-blooming bulbs now while the supply is at its best, even if you do not plan to plant them for awhile. They are easily stored.

For Fall Color In Marin, You Can't Beat The Berries

While New Englanders may thrill to the autumnal hues provided by various trees and shrubs; for Marinites there is another source of fall color — the wonderful world of berries populated by pyracanthas and cotoneasters.

What members of these two families lack in foliage color, they more than make up with a fall and winter seasonal show of red and orange berries.

The pyracantha choices range from the newer dwarf-type introductions (Red Elfe and Tiny Tim), with red berries, to Lalandi, an upright grower with sprays of bright orange berries, to Victoria, the latest variety to color-up, but whose clusters of intense red berries are among the showiest of all varieties.

FOR LANDSCAPE purposes, the dwarf types add a new dimension to the garden; the larger growers are excellent background plants and are also used for accent in the foundation setting near the house.

The Santa Cruz Pyracantha is a prostrate grower that excels as a groundcover, on slopes or banks, or wherever a low grower is needed. It is covered with masses of large red berries in fall.

This list merely scratches the surface of pyracantha varieties. Your nurserymen will have the varieties best suited for our area.

THE RED BERRY colors of cotoneasters are more subdued, but as a garden backdrop, where the plants shine, the effect is a season's delight. Larger varieties make excellent screens; the prostrate ones nicely cover banks and fill-in parkways.

Silverleaf Cotoneaster is a traditional favorite and Red Clusterberry is appealing — especially when trimmed to expose its interesting trunk and branch patterns. Lower-growing varieties include Grayleaf Cotoneaster and Rock Cotoneaster.

The patterns of growth lend themselves to contour plantings — or to grouping for effect.

The foliages vary as to their growth habits — but all can be relied upon to provide 12 months of beauty and a cool season show of color.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Hurry to plant the flowering annuals that will give you cheery winter color. Snagpdragons, calendulas, stock, pansies, violas and Iceland poppies are only a few of the possibilities.
- The earliest camellias, the Sasanqua varieties, are showing color at the nurseries now, so that you can shop for them in bloom. Use them as featured garden shrubs, as hanging basket display pieces, or even as groundcovers.
- Rework compacted soils this fall, adding humus and chemical or organic soil conditioners. Your nurseryman will recommend a ready-to-use conditioner or soil builder if you confer with him and explain your special problems.
- This is a most favorable time to seed a lawn.
- Don't miss out on the selection of spring-blooming bulbs now available for planting.
- Don't rely upon autumn rains to do your work for you, but continue with your watering schedule until the rainy season is with us in earnest.

Shrubs For A Seasonal Show

In the garden, there are several shrubs that color-up well in Marin to put on a fall season show.

Besides the autumn colors they add to the garden, these shrubs are excellent landscape specimens because of foliage textures and form, or manner of growth.

To illustrate, consider the value of the Oregon Grape (Mahonia).

A medium-size, upright grower, the holly-like foliage is a deep, glossy green. It boasts profusions of yellow blooms in the spring, followed by blue grape-like berries. The autumnal hues of the leaves are awe-inspiring.

THE INTRODUCTION of a compact-type Oregon Grape has delighted gardeners and landscape designers alike. The compact Mahonia is used individually or in massed paintings and borders and because of its four-season beauty it can be utilized in cluster-like plantings for effect.

For a change of pace, the light and feathery foliage of Heavenly Bamboo (Nandina) introduces an eye-catching dimension to the landscape. The plant boasts many upright stems of lacy leaves which turn red in autumn.

Plant hybridizers have created recently other Nandina forms that are equally as versatile — and beautiful.

THE COMPACT Heavenly Bamboo is a smaller edition of the forerunner of the group. It's a prized plant in foreground situations where an extra special specimen is required. In the border, or in massed plantings, the compact type fills the bill.

A dwarf Heavenly Bamboo is now available, too. The foliage is bolder and the tight mounded form makes it an extremely showy small plant. The bright scarlet in cooler months is a knockout.

Two Photinias rate honorable mention for fall colors — Chinese and Fraseri.

Both are large, upright growers with a dense branching habit sure to please. The evergreen shrubs have a bronze-to-copper tint to the leaves that is perpetuated into the fall season when masses of red berries also adorn the hardy specimens. As background plants, or informal screens, they excel.

ONE OF the newest, most popular and most effective landscaping aids for both the new home and the older house being updated is the fence-screen. As shown at left, the fence-screen can provide desired seclusion and at the same time add to the personality of the home. Actually, the artfully designed fence-screen serves as the "walls" of a fresh-air room into which the breezes flow freely, but which intruders cannot enter or peer into. Numerous ideas for the creative planning and building of fence-screens with western woods are illustrated in a free color-brochure offered without charge by the Wood Products Industry Fund, 1240 Bayshore Highway, Burlingame, Calif., 94010.

Shower Stall Ends The Bathroom Feuds

This is probably an exaggeration. However, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, surveys do show that feuding over the bathroom is a major cause of family friction, especially where there are two or more growing children.

IDEALLY, THE solution is the addition of one or more bathrooms. Where family finances don't permit this, the answer is a shower stall, preferably with receptor tub.

The bureau points out that a plumbing contractor often can install a shower in the basement or attic, preferably next to existing piping.

At one time, taking a shower could be a "risky business." Whenever water was being used elsewhere in the house, a drop in pressure could cause sudden dousings of icy cold or scalding hot water.

Today, there are temperature controls that enable the bather to select the temperature he wants before turning on the water. It then remains constant regardless of pressure changes.

SPRAY SETTINGS on modern showerheads include fine, medium and coarse, and the heads themselves are self-cleaning.

For free information on automatic temperature controls write to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60601.

TO ADD A NOTE of distinction to the garage, breezeway or even the ranch or traditional style house, top it with this Colonial Cupola. And to build it, send $1 to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Cupola Pattern 589. Include your zip code number. The design is a replica of the cupolas found throughout New England on barns and homes, but construction has been simplified for the amateur handyman. The cupola measures 16 inches square and stands two feet tall, so that it fits either a one-car or two-car garage. But dimensions can be adjusted to fit your needs. No special tools are required to carry out the step-by-step directions.

New Laundry Room Makes Washing More Pleasant Job

It's unlikely that laundry chores will ever be a joy. But labor-saving appliances, a convenient work area, and attractive surroundings can make the job more pleasant.

One family took the blues out of Monday by remodeling a corner of the basement into a modern laundry room. As a bonus they got a handy bar-sink area for parties.

FIRST STEP IN the transformation was to rid the basement of its dungeon-look. Overhead structural beams and ducts were hidden behind a light colored tile ceiling. Worn flooring was replaced with easy-clean grain finish.

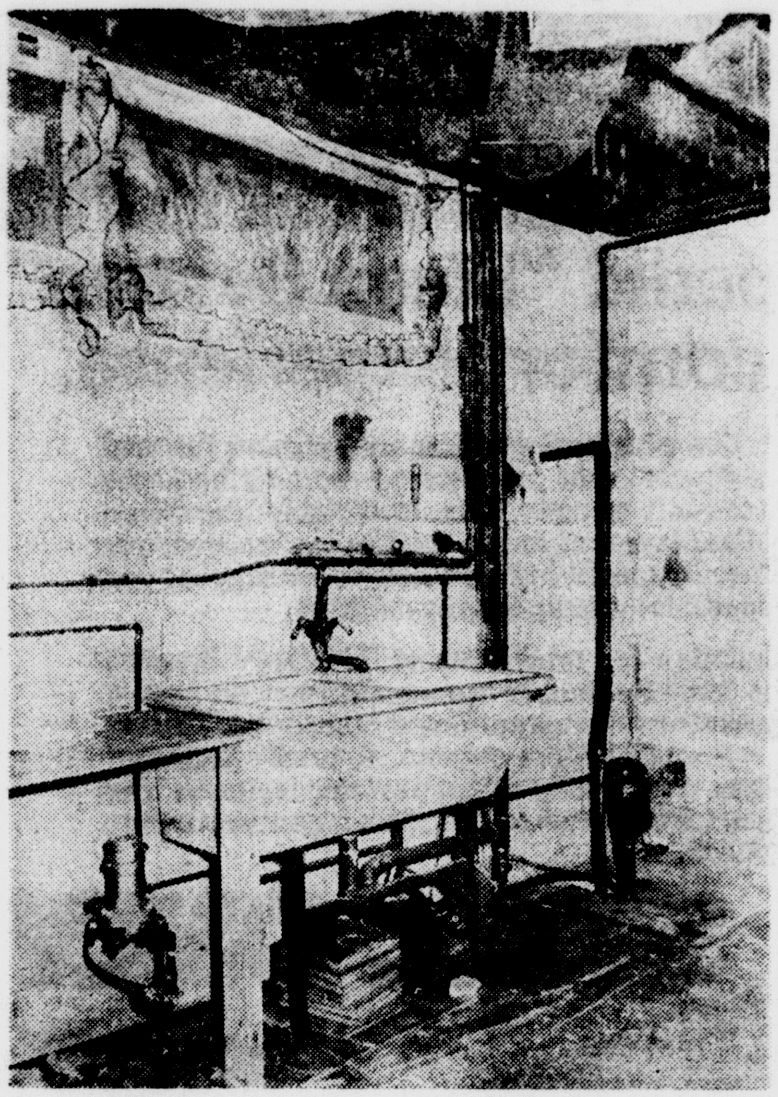
Cold, cement block walls and unsightly water pipes were covered with plastic-surfaced hardboard paneling in a warm wood-grain finish.

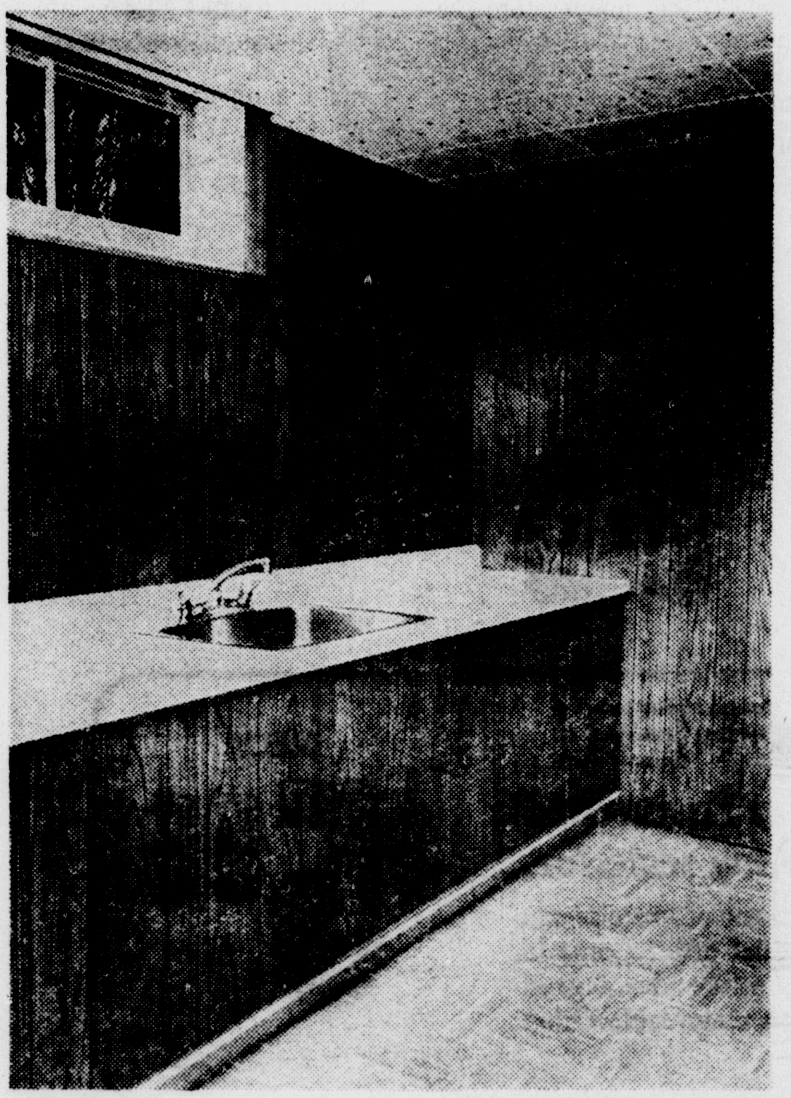
The choice of plastic-surfaced hardboard was practical as well as decorative. The panels withstand moisture and humidity — common laundry room problems. They resist dents, mars and scuffs as well as stains and water splashes. Most soils can be wiped off with a damp cloth.

IF NECESSARY, the panels can even be washed without harming the surface.

In the new laundry, hard work is handled by a modern washer and dryer. An old-fashioned laundry tub was replaced with a built-in sink unit flanked by roomy countertops. The sink is handy for marginal washing jobs such as pre-soaking (and for preparing drinks). The counter tops are used for sorting and folding clothes (and for stacking glasses).

To give the room more sunlight, the original windows were replaced with modern units. Overhead fixtures add supplementary lighting.





AT TOP is the eyesore that too many home laundry areas have become, inefficient as well as ugly. And below is the attractive new laundry room that has been developed in the basement, with its ample working space, new equipment and handsome, plastic-surfaced hardboard wall panels that resist moisture and stains, and which can be damp-wiped clean.

Don't Be A Dripper

When using a paint roller, the excess paint should be rolled off on the ridges in the tray. A further precaution to prevent dripping while the paint is being applied is to make the first stroke an upward one.

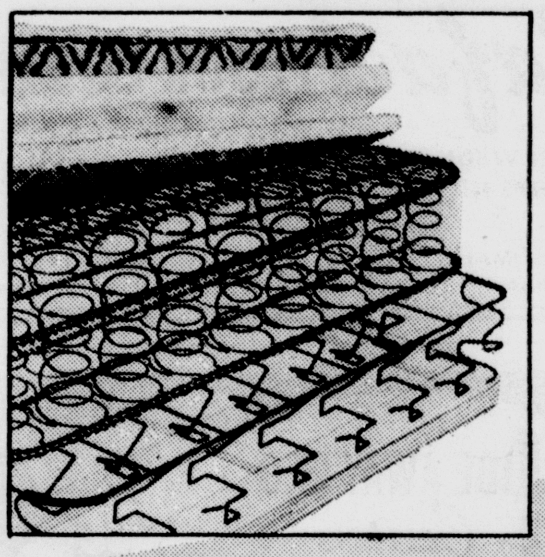
THE SLEEP SET OF TOMORROW

Revolutionary Sealy Posturepedic® "Sleep System" is a totally new comfort experience.



Designed in cooperation with leading orthopedic surgeons for total comfort...and total support that promises no morning backache from sleeping on a too-soft mattress. This comfortably firm design starts with deep-quilted layers of luxury cushioning for a pampering surface. Underneath, special high-resiliency coils support you firmly. But Posturepedic is more than just a mattress.

...Posture-Grid foundation for total firmness. This Sealy improvement completes the Sleep System. It uses modern torsion bars--a better base for the mattress than an ordinary box spring. Firmest foundation Sealy ever made! More durable. A totally sag-proof edge. The "feel" is so wonderfully different magic happens! The magic of firm support from head to toe. Plus a gentle comfort that lets your body relax.

KQED Film To Be Used By Rangers

"Ascent," a film produced by KQED (Channel 9) in San Francisco, will be used to instruct National Park Service employees in mountain climbing techniques and equipment.

Park Ranger Charles W Wendt, an instructor at the Horace M. Albright Training Center at the Grand Canyon in Arizona, plans to use "Ascent" in classes there. The film received a Golden Eagle award by CINE (the Council on International Non-Theatrical Events).

Produced for KQED by Virginia Duncan, "Ascent" was filmed in the Yosemite Valley and gave penetrating insight into the world of the mountain and rock climber. Film crews actually followed climbers as they scaled the sheer cliffs at Yosemite.

JAZZ GREAT Cal Tjader and his quintet will be heard in concert tonight at 8 o'clock in the Fine Arts Theater on the College of Marin campus, Kentfield. Along with vibes virtuoso Tjader the quintet includes Paul Horn, flutist and formerly a group leader in his own right, and a rhythm section of Armando Peraza, Wilfredo Vicente and John Rae. It's an opportunity to hear jazz in a setting other than the smokey nightclub atmosphere. And the price is right—$1.

FURS FOR THE GENTRY were very much a part of the 16th Century county faire. And so the fourth annual Renaissance Pleasure Faire and Ha' Penny Market must include its rustic and colorful furrier's stall. The Pleasure Faire concludes a run of four weekends with a closing day of activities tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Some of the West's finest craftsmen show their wares and skills in a wooded setting at 1000 North San Pedro Road north of San Rafael.

Marin Poets' Corner

CORTE MADERA MARSH

Some original beauty remains;
The main channel's bank
Carved by innumerable tides;
Tiny inlets, back sloughs,
Pickle grass, dogwood, tarweed,
Sometimes the taste of salt
In the breeze off the creek.
But machines are carving up this ancient gem,
And cash registers ring triumphant
On bulldozed land where once
White heron stabbed abundant fish.
The rail's cry was heard then, and the curlew
Moved, watchful, through the tall grass.
The mud was alive, sustaining
Flighty sandpipers and happy ducks.
Here and there a "Vote for" sign
Is stuck in the apolitical mud.
The final vote has been cast against this doomed marsh,
And we all have lost.

LARKSPUR — MURIEL S. SHORT

THE INVISIBLE WALL

We enclose ourselves
With an invisible wall,
Too high for others to climb
And see what lies behind it.
In time we become
Like the proverbial miser,
Whose pretended piety
And uncharitable heart,
Denies him the very things
Which he withholds from others.
